Governor Will Support City Viaduct Project

CITY MUST BUILD MUNICIPAL HALL ON HUNTER STREET

Condition Is Outlined in Letter Written by Walker to Councilman C. G. Allen Saturday.

GOVERNOR PRAISES PLANS AS OUTLINED

New 20-Story City Hall, as Planned, Would Be One of Most Beautiful in Entire Southland.

Plans for locating Atlanta's proposed new city hall at Hunter street and Central avenue, directly east of the present court house, were given additional impetus Saturday when Governor Clifford Walker took a flat-footed stand in favor of the proposition. Official approval of the state's chief executive was given in a letter to Councilman C. G. Allen, who has led the movement for a new municipal building.

If city and county officials authorize the new building and its location at that point, the governor said, he will take an active part in supporting a bill in the legislature which would give the city authority to construct viaducts at Pryor street and Central avenue, over state-owned property.

"Location of a new city hall on the property of Fulton county to the east of the present court house would be most acceptable to the state of Georgia," the letter states.

Governor Praises Plan.

Governor Walker pointed out that the building would beautify that part of the city in which the capitol is located and would prove a tremendous advertisement for both the city and state.

Present plans call for a new municipal building to cost approximately $2,000,000 and a bill authorizing a bond issue election is now pending in city council. It has been adopted by general council by an overwhelming majority, but was voted down by the aldermanic board, 4 to 3. However, a conference committee will be requested at the next meeting of council, and passage of the measure is expected.

The building would provide headquarters for all city departments, including fire and police, and provide space for barracks for policemen and firemen, city courts, garages for all city cars, and offices for each city official, including small individual offices for each council member.

Would Be 20 Stories.

Plans for a 20-story structure already have been drawn by A. Ten Eyck Brown, prominent Atlanta architect, and if present plans are carried out the building will face on Central avenue with another main entrance on Hunter street, and will be directly connected with the court house by passageways.

City council has requested Fulton county to donate the land for the purpose of constructing a new municipal building and while county commissioners have not met since the request was made it is understood that they regard the proposition favorably.

The proposed bond issue would entail no tax increase, it has been pointed out, as rentals from the present city hall at Forsyth and Marietta streets and from office space in the new building not needed by the city would provide sufficient money to pay sinking funds and interest.

While the city would not require all 20 floors of the new building at present, they would be rented, according to the plan, until such time as the city's expansion necessitates their use.

The plan also contemplates sale of the present fire headquarters on Alabama street and police barracks on Decatur street, with the possibility that the present city hall might be sold instead of leased.

Text of Governor's Letter.

Following is the governor's letter to Mr. Allen:

"I have noted your efforts to locate the city hall on the property of Fulton county to the east of the present courthouse.

"I write to say that this would be most acceptable to the state of Georgia. It would tend to beautify the section of the city leading to the capitol. I call your attention to the fact that each year thousands of visitors visit the capitol sight-seeing. As a matter of fact, practically every visitor to Atlanta asks first about the capitol. One or two improvements have been made recently, notable among which is the beautification of the property of the church on the corner.

"If the city and county will combine to locate a modern city hall building on the property above referred to, it will add largely to the looks of the capitol section of the

Youth Condemned To Death Stabbed By Angry Comrade

STABBED FATALLY BY FELLOW-SLAYER

BERNARD GRANT.

Assailant Shouts Former Companion Had Plotted To Kill Him — Wounds Probably Will Be Fatal.

STABBING WAS DONE WITH POCKET KNIFE

Injured Youth Reprieved Several Times—Hair Turned Almost White During Confinement.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Chicago, June 20.—Walter Krauser, charged with the murder of a policeman, today stabbed and possibly fatally wounded Bernard Grant, under sentence of death for the same murder, while the two were receiving visitors in the county jail.

An operation was performed tonight in an effort to save Grant's life, but at its conclusion doctors said that they had no hope whatever for his recovery.

Krauser, in a statement to Warden Westbrook, said that Grant had threatened to kill him. The stabbing was done with a pocket-knife which Krauser said he had found. Warden Westbrook, however, said he believes the knife had been smuggled in to the prisoner and started an investigation.

Grant was stabbed five times, one wound puncturing a lung and another in the neck nearly severing the jugular vein.

Attacks Former Companion.

Grant and Krauser were taken to the visitors' room to chat with several relatives of each of the men. A large screen divides the visitors' room into two parts, the prisoners occupying one part and the visitors the other.

When Grant entered the room Krauser ignored the greetings of his relatives and immediately attacked his one-time companion. Before guards and other prisoners could subdue him he had stabbed Grant five times. Several relatives of the men who witnessed the attack, powerless to interfere, collapsed. The jail, housing several hundred prisoners, was thrown into confusion.

Both Krauser and Grant were convicted of the murder of Policeman Ralph Souders while trying to hold up a tea store two years ago. Both were condemned to die on the gallows, but the case was carried to the supreme court, which upheld the decision of the lower court as to Grant but granted Krauser a new trial on his representation that Grant fired the shot which killed the policeman. No date has yet been set for the retrial of Krauser.

Granted Several Reprieves.

Grant has succeeded in obtaining four or five reprieves, twice almost on the eve of the date fixed for his execution. He is now under sentence to be hanged August 14. Grant's hair has turned white and he has become partly bald since his conviction. He was hardly past the age of 19 when sentenced.

The ill-feeling between Grant and Krauser, jail guards said, had its inception after the supreme court decision granting Krauser a new trial but upholding Grant's conviction. At one time a statement attributed to Krauser, in which he took all blame for the slaying and absolved Grant, was produced by other prisoners, but Krauser maintained other prisoners had forced him to make the statements through threats.

Grant Refuses to Talk.

Grant, at the jail hospital, refused to make any statement as to who stabbed him, answering all questions with a curt, "I don't care to talk."

Krauser was more talkative.

"Grant is afraid he will hang for sure August 14," he said, "and he wanted to put all the blame on me, so that he would be pardoned by the governor. He was going to get me. I was afraid of him, so I decided I would kill him before he got a chance at me."

SHEPHERD DEFENSE TO FAIMAN STORY CRUSHED BY STATE

Two Witnesses for Accused Man Admit Possibility of Doctor's Charges of Death Plot.

BY HAROLD ANDREWS.

Chicago, June 20.—When William Darling Shepherd takes the witness stand Monday morning to defend himself against the charge of murdering William Nelson McClintock, he will face the task of destroying the testimony of his principal accuser, Charles C. Faiman—a task that none of his own witnesses thus far have been able to do.

Two of them attempted it Saturday, but when they stepped down from the witness stand Faiman's story of a deft and satanical plot to poison the 21-year-old mililonaire with typhoid germs remained as he gave it in his suave manner a few days ago—intact and unimpeached.

The two witnesses called to widen the gap between Shepherd and the gallows were Dr. Frederick Tonney, head of laboratories in the city health department, and Walter Smith, who was a janitor at the National University of Sciences, the school of which Faiman was president and where he charged the germs were obtained which killed Billy McClintock.

William Scott Stewart, the attorney who is defending Shepherd, set out Saturday to destroy the state's case, first by proving that no live typhoid germs could have been obtained at Faiman's school, and second, that Faiman lied when he said he supplied his institution with germs obtained from the city health department.

Smith, the janitor, was called upon first to testify that no germs were at the school. State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, who has been on the job ever since one of his assistants allowed Miss Isabelle Pope to be devoured by the defense, made short work of the embarrassed old man who used to sweep the floors and fire the furnace at the diploma mill. Stewart drew from Smith the statement that Faiman lied when he said he kept

TWO WIVES MEET, NOW LONE HUBBY FACES PROSECUTION

New Orleans, June 20.—Mrs. Alice Marie Rosenbloom was surprised in her home here by the arrival of Mrs. Nellie Rosenbloom with a baby in her arms who announced that they both have the same husband. They appealed to the police who investigated and announced today that charges of bigamy had been filed against Ben Rosenbloom in Jefferson parish.

The first Mrs. Rosenbloom said she was married to Ben Rosenbloom in Minneapolis in 1919 and that he deserted her in 1923. The second Mrs. Rosenbloom who was married about a year ago expects soon to become a mother. She told police her husband went to Sandusky, Ohio, in April and had been sending her money from there.

MACMILLAN SAILS FOR LAND SEARCH IN POLAR REGION

Explorer Authorized To Claim Any Territory for State of Maine by Governor.

WEATHER CHANGES WILL BE STUDIED

Continent of Flowers and Birds Expected To Be Visited by Expedition Crew.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Wiscasset, Maine, June 20.—Donald Baxter MacMillan left today for the arctic with the Godspeed of Wiscasset, the state of Maine and the nation ringing in his ears.

"See you in September 'Mac'," shouted his friends as they stood on Ole Whale wharf bidding farewell. The shouts expressed the confidence all have in his ability to bring back safely from the arctic his crews of two score.

In the Polar sea, the explorer hopes to find an unknown and unchartered land.

Lieutenant Commander MacMillan's two ships sailed away amidst the greatest demonstration he ever has received on any of his eight previous trips into the far north. Thousands lined the roadways along the Sheepscot river and jammed the pier from which the Bowdoin and Peary sailed.

Thousands more waved farewell from the hillsides. School children unloosed a shower of multi-colored toy balloons as the Fifth Infantry band of Portland played the national anthem.

Commander MacMillan stepped aboard the Bowdoin, took the wheel, the lines were cast off and the craft slipped out among a hundred or more flag-bedecked small boats that were to accompany him to the mouth of the river.

Preceding the sailing, the great throng that arrived here today from many parts of the state and nation gathered upon the lawn of the town hall where appropriate exercises were held to bid the commander of the National Geographic Society's expedition God-speed.

As the ships slipped away from Whale wharf, built about a hundred years ago, the commander's farewell was read from the bridge of the Peary by Lieut. Commander Eugene

CALLES INTERVIEW SHAMES U.S. ACTION

Expresses Hope Kellogg Note Will Not Affect Diplomatic Relations of Two Nations.

New York, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—The New York World publishes this morning a copyrighted statement by President Calles, of Mexico, bearing on the recent statement of Secretary of State Kellogg with regard to relations between the United States and Mexico.

President Calles first makes reference to the special conditions of Mexico "the state of misery, economic and moral, of millions of Mexicans through the systematic oblivion to which they were condemned during centuries of injustice and lack of social solidarity," and lays stress on the necessity of obtaining the "cultural elevation and economic redemption of the great masses."

"Without their moral and economic redemption," he continues, "no organic peace can ever exist in Mexico."

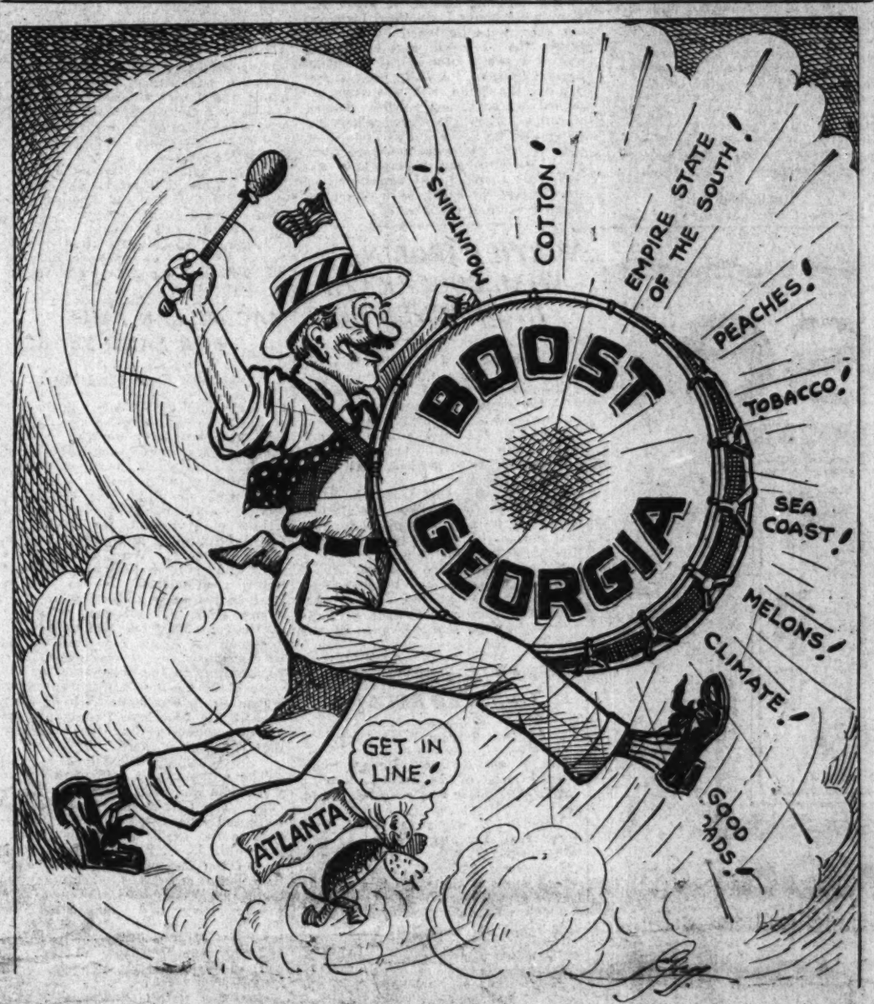

"A design of such high finality," he declares, "ought not to be handicapped with actual egotistical points of views arising from small incidents unavoidable in every complex action of governmental and social nature, in which there is intervention of many wills and different legal authorities. Such incidents should not be permitted as a motive to handicap the development of a patriotic and humanitarian program, especially as the government over which I preside has been and is disposed to settle such incidents within the limits of equity, justice and law."

The president then goes on to express the hope that "the present incident shall not in any form modify the diplomatic relations between the two countries, and still less the affectionate feelings existing between the two peoples."

33RD SUIT FILED AGAINST HUSBAND BY FORMER WIFE

New York, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Patrick J. Murphy, employee, today was made defendant in the 33rd legal action instituted by his wife in the past 25 years. Mrs. Murphy demands her husband be compelled to pay alimony pending her latest suit for separation. Murphy remarked in court he intended to hire a lawyer by the year. Decision was reserved in the latest action. The couple have been separated 16 years.

Pekin Authorities Refuse To Assume Responsibility for Anti-Alien Disorders in Nation.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hong Kong, June 21.—(By the Associated Press.)—The general strike, one of the weapons used by the Chinese agitators in their anti-foreign campaign, spread this morning to the street railways, the conductors and motormen failing to take out their cars. The service is temporarily suspended.

The Chinese house servants employed by foreigners at Kowloon, a city across the harbor from Hong Kong island, also walked out this morning, as did the servants at the Peak hotel, a favorite hotel of foreigners. The movement is expected to become general throughout the colony.

The Chinese staff at the Matilda hospital, a charity institution for foreigners, where there were 35 patients, the servants of the nurses' quarters at the military hospital, the Hong Kong hotel, Wiseman's cafe, and many of the boarding houses have also gone on strike.

The Boy Scouts and other organizations are mobilizing for the purpose of taking the places of the strikers.

Many Chinese are leaving for Canton. The government of the colony has issued a statement that severe measures will be taken against evil disposed persons endeavoring to disturb the peace and good will of the colony, and offering a reward of $250 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of offenders.

Thrill Is Given To Five Points By Wild Drive

Former Traffic Captain Stops Autoist After Three Persons Are Hurt.

A wild drive up Marietta street by Richard Wheeler, negro, during which his automobile struck three negroes, and smashed the rear end of a truck, came to a halt Saturday afternoon when M. V. Barnett, former captain of the traffic bureau, overtook the careening car, and, with the help of traffic officers on duty at Marietta and Forsyth, placed the driver under arrest.

The chase started at Five Points when Wheeler, unable to control the fancy of his automobile, drove it into Henry Garrett, negro, who lives on East Ellis street. Frightened by the accident, Wheeler "gave her the gas" and dashed into Marietta. At Broad street, Ahab Brown, negro boy, who lives on West Fair street, became the second victim. More frightened than ever, Wheeler disregarded the red light turned against east and west traffic and attempted to dash onward. Alfred Davis, negro, riding a bicycle, was brushed from his mount to the street. At the Forsyth street intersection Wheeler's car made contact with a truck, smashing the radiator an jamming the fenders.

Arrests Driver.

Barnett, who had seen the accident at Five Points, and who had been pursuing the driver, caught up here and leaped from his car after Wheeler. The negro showed fight, but was quickly hauled from the automobile by Captain Barnett and given a ride to police headquarters.

Garrett was taken to Grady hospital in an unconscious condition, but later was permitted to return home. Brown and Davis were treated for superficial injuries.

Wheeler is being held on charges of reckless driving and operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

Woman and Child Hurt.

Two persons, one Mrs. G. T. Gunter, 28, of Lakewood avenue, and the other Lillazelle Roberts, 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Roberts, of 79 Grant street, were seriously injured Saturday afternoon when struck by automobiles.

Mrs. Gunter was knocked unconscious when an unidentified driver's automobile struck her as she was about to board a street car at Lakewood avenue and Lakewood Terrace. She was rushed to Grady hospital and later recovered consciousness. At her request she later went to her home.

The Roberts child was run down by a heavy motor at the corner of Grant and Fair streets, and was rushed to Grady hospital in an automo-

LAFOLLETTE'S BODY RECEIVED AT HOME FOR FINAL RITES

Senator's Remains Lie in State in Capital of Wisconsin; Funeral Services Are Set for Monday.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Madison, Wis., June 20.—Robert M. La Follette is back among his own people tonight to receive from them a last sorrowful tribute before he comes to his final resting place beneath the elms of Forrest Hill cemetery, where sleep his father and mother.

His body now reposes in the governor's reception room at the state capitol, where it was taken immediately after its arrival here from Washington this afternoon. Tomorrow it will be removed to the rotunda beneath the dome of the state house to lie in state from noon until twilight. The top of the steel gray casket will be laid back so that the crowds who knew and loved him may gaze upon his countenance for the last time.

Assemblymen Honor Him.

Until the hour of the funeral services—1 o'clock Monday afternoon—members of the Wisconsin senate and house of representatives will form a special guard of honor of the body.

As the special funeral train came into Madison after a 24-hour run from the national capital, it moved for some distance between double lines of fellow townsmen of the dead senator. All stood uncovered in silence as the casket was removed from the catafalque in the funeral car.

With members of the legislature as an advance guard, the procession made a slow way along streets where

MARYLAND CHURCH TO PRAY FOR RAIN FOR BERRY CROPS

Hagerstown, Md., June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—As a result of the most serious drought in this section in years, prayers for rain will be offered at St. John's Episcopal church here tomorrow. Farm crops are suffering, gardens blighted and fruit, including a large raspberry crop is drying up, threatening heavy financial loss to growers. No rain has fallen in the vicinity of Hagerstown in six weeks.

FIRST CHAPTER OF GRAPHIC STORY IS TOLD TO WORLD

Planes Were Separated for Whole Day in Making Descent Upon Ice To Make Observations.

ELLSWORTH PLANE ALMOST WRECKED

Six Members of Party Lived for Three Weeks on Reduced Rations, Cramped Inside Plane.

By JAMES B. WHARTON.
(Special correspondent of The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance with the Amundsen-Ellsworth Expedition at Spitzbergen.)

King's Bay, Spitzbergen, June 20. (Radio from Steamer Heimdal.)—After repeated conversations with Amundsen since his return to King's Bay, I have gathered together, in his own words, for the readers of The Constitution and its allied newspapers, a complete story of the flight.

The first installment of this vivid and graphic account, which I shall continue daily for two or three days, takes the fliers from the start to their landing at 87.44 north latitude, and through the first strenuous days of their effort to relaunch their single remaining plane.

Beautiful Phenomena Seen.

"The first hour of our flight toward the north pole," said Captain Amundsen, "was glorified by natural phenomena as beautiful as I ever saw. We had encountered light fog soon after we reached Amsterdam Island, 25 miles north of King's Bay. Through this fog, just beyond Amsterdam Island, we saw a double halo, in the middle of which the sun cast a perfect shadow of our plane. These two multi-colored halos beckoned us enticingly into the unknown.

"The fog lasted two hours, getting thicker and thicker, but the N-24 and the N-25 flew close together, always in sight of each other through the banks of mist. We increased our altitude considerably. The wind in the upper strata was a stiff, northeasterly wind. The fog prevented all observation of drift or ground speed, which it is vital to get at the start of any flight.

"Occasionally we crossed open spaces in the fog, which enabled us to see the ice, broken with many narrow lanes of water.

Fog Suddenly Disappears.

"The fog lasted until midway between latitudes 82 and 83. Suddenly the mist disappeared and the entire panorama of polar ice stretched away before our eyes—the most spectacular sheet of snow and ice ever seen by man from an aerial perspective. I stared out of the cockpit fascinated.

"During the entire eight hours of the flight poleward, I was so busy with observations that I forgot to pull on my gloves. From the moment of the hopoff, I watched the sun compass constantly. No words are too strong to use in praise of this new instrument. It kept the exact reflection of the sun constantly before my

Pierre Van Paassen Tells Of the Terrors of the Arctic

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

New York, June 20.—(Special.)—No man, who has not fought his way through a blinding blizzard with a forty below zero gale cutting off his breath, while pack-straps seared his shoulders like burning irons and the numbness was creeping upward from his feet, can fully realize the plight of the heroic Amundsen explorers, who for 25 days fought to loose the grip of the arctic on their planes.

In the land where the sun is but a mystict orange glow, where vision becomes blurred through merciless monotony, where the frost bites and nips as relentlessly as a wild beast, the only word that holds out the faintest hope of salvation is "Go and keep going."

My first experience on the American continent as a gold-seeker was way up in the Porcupine territory, not far from the region where the three American balloonists descended in 1922 after their craft broke loose somewhere in the United States and they were swept on the wings of a storm into the friendless sub-arctic.

"Hiking in" with a team of huskies from my mining claim, I was caught in a raging, tearing blizzard right in the middle of frozen Night Hawk lake. I had not noticed the gathering snowbanks in the sky behind me and with the suddenness of a tornado the storm was chasing up clouds of swishing, swirling snow. The dogs, hardly able to pull the toboggan over the packed trail, now sank away in the loose snow on the sides. Though I "mushed" ahead with snow-shoe to tramp down the gathering layer of fresh snow, I soon lost the trail and the terrifying experience of wandering around in that yelling, inexorable storm for twenty-four hours had begun.

Worse Than War.

Not even the crashing, nerve-wracking thunder and lightning of the German guns at Verdun, nor the dreadful spectacle of the attacks at the Somme caused me so much dread as that night which seemed a century long. At the front at least there was company in misery, but in that utter loneliness of a frozen lake there was such an overwhelming hopeless feeling of being lost, that I can easily credit the accounts of travelers who became bereft of reason and went raving mad under prolonged similar circumstances.

Night seemed to follow the storm in record time, though it was but 4 o'clock in the afternoon. I had figured to make the opposite shore before nightfall and spend the dark hours at a deserted prospector's cabin, which I knew was located on some jutting rocks on the further shore.

But the whirling, eddying mass of white powder that cut as cruelly as needle points had not only wiped out the scant landmarks of a fourteen-mile lake in winter time, but it was actually impossible to see the leader of the team when I walked behind the sleigh. I was new in the north and I had heard stories that the dogs will find their way out. But my dogs did nothing of the sort. I eased the load and threw away half the baggage but still they did not pull ahead. They seemed to place all reliance on me.

In the meantime the storm came on with redoubled fury. It seemed to want to hurry me—wipe me out and turn me into a little white mound. In that intense cold, perspiration streamed down my face. I did not walk. I ran, and the more I ran the more panic-stricken I became. Soon the pace began to tell and I felt tired and exhausted.

Fighting for Life.

It was then that the real battle for life began. The battle against sleep and drowsiness—the most treacherous enemy of the white man in the north. The snow did no longer look like a pile of frozen ice particles. In my imagination it appeared more inviting and warmer than the cosiest bed. It seemed to beckon me to rest a while; just sit a moment to regain strength. Against that tempting invitation I had to summon all my will power. I knew that two minutes' rest meant death, merciful death, to be sure, in which the last consciousness would imagine warm sunshine of orange groves or a cheery log fire in a snug little cabin. But death just the same.

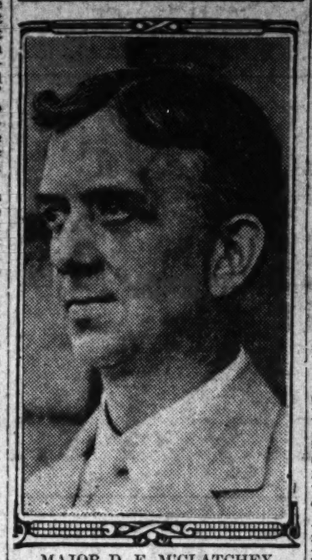

Four times I sank to my knees when when the overwhelming desire to rest for just one minute gained the upperhand and four times that white-eared dog shoved his nozzle in my face and rubbed it none too gently.

The dawn was a livid white curtain beyond which I could not penetrate; though I staggered ever onward. My fingers were frozen and did not hurt any longer. My eyes were painful from the strain in the darkness. Feet were numb and felt like huge leaden weights. From somewhere came the howl of a grey timber wolf and I laughed out loud.

That laugh suddenly awakened me from a stupor. I became afraid of myself and my half-frozen consciousness returned. I regained my senses, so to speak, and with that came new hope.

Not till about noon did the snowstorm suddenly stop. I saw its last waving sweep fly away ahead of me like a whirling charge of horsemen. Four more hours I stumbled forward, but they were lightened by the certainty that I would survive. At 4 o'clock I saw a blue spiral of smoke curling upward. A little later I recognized the cabin. It was that occupied by a French priest named Paradis. How that good Christian pummeled me! He rubbed the snow over my frozen hands and face until I yelled with pain. But how deliciously tasted that tumbler of whisky and the bacon he fried on the roaring camp stove later on.

VETERAN OFFICIAL BEGINS 29TH TERM

MAJOR D. F. M'CLATCHEY

Major Devereaux F. McClatchey, veteran of 28 years in the Georgia legislature, will call the senate to order on Wednesday morning as temporary presiding officer. Major McClatchey has served, first in the house and later as secretary of the senate, for 28 years and this week sees the beginning of his 29th year. He is not expected to have opposition this year.

In the house the temporary presiding officer will be E. B. Moore, clerk of the house and another veteran of many years' service. Moore will call their respective Secretary McClatchey and Clerk houses to order and preside pending the election of a president and speaker, respectively.

NORTH CAROLINA WILL COOPERATE IN DEFENSE TEST

Raleigh, N. C., June 20.—Mobilization of all North Carolina national guardsmen on July 4, in cooperation with the second national defense test, was ordered tonight by Adjutant General J. Van B. Metts, at the instance of Governor McLean. Orders for the mobilization were mailed to all commanding officers.

Governor McLean directed the adjutant general to mobilize the guardsmen after he had been urged by federal authorities to have North Carolina participate in the test.

"The governor also desires," stated General Metts in his letter to the commanders, "that the citizens and civic organizations cooperate with the military forces in observance of the day."

STUDENTS SEEKING TO SEVER RELATIONS

moted by anti-foreign agitation, today showed signs of developing into a purely diplomatic and economic struggle.

Reports of disorders today were fewer than for any day in the past two weeks. Practically the only disorders were between Chinese themselves, such as the kidnaping of Chinese workers by strikers at Shanghai. A single exception was noted at Canton, where the cashier of a Japanese hospital carrying $5,000 cash which he had just drawn from a bank for use by the hospital was shot. This, however, was said to have been the work of bandits and not a political matter.

Canton Strike Scheduled.

The shooting was indicative, however, of the unsettled conditions in Canton where the former lieutenants of Dr. Sun Yat-Sen are trying to establish a stable government after several years of intermittent militarism and "squeezing" of business interest by sundry tax collectors. Their task is proving difficult especially in view of the anti-foreign agitation which has crept into south China as a reflection of the disorders at Shanghai.

A general strike at Canton against British, French and Japanese employers—easily a majority of the foreigners in that city—is on schedule. In the meantime the strike of Chinese seamen has curtailed the steamer service with Hongkong. Dispatches today said that arrangements were being made to run a boat between the cities every two days, believing this would be sufficient to supply Shameen with food and other necessities. Shameen is the Canton quarter, an island in the Pearl river, connected with Canton proper by two short bridges.

Break With Britain Asked.

The diplomatic phases of the struggle centered today at Pekin. The Chinese foreign office, replying to a note from representatives of the protocol powers dealing with the trouble at Shanghai declared with the exception of the killing of one British subject, all of the Shanghai disorders had been the direct fault of the foreign authorities themselves, not Chinese.

In the meantime a delegation representing 48 Chinese colleges called upon the Chinese minister of war and the foreign minister, urging that diplomatic relations with Great Britain be severed. The government of the international settlement at Shanghai is very largely in the hands of the British, which accounts in part for the special animosity shown them by the Chinese.

Plans for a boycott of foreign goods and banknotes were reported going forward at points in the Yangtse river valley. At Chungking where the agitation has been especially strong, a move was under way to prevent Japanese and British getting coal, which is an essential to power projects in that section.

Decision of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce at Shanghai to reopen the Chinese banks there was pointed to as another step toward the return of normal conditions in the gateway city.

bile by M. E. Smedley, of 412 East Fair street, and S. W. Hatton, of 460 East Fair street.

Witnesses said that the truck rounded a corner at high speed and did not sound any warning. The driver is said to have stopped after the accident but left before arrival of police.

F. H. Hill, 19, of 434 East Fair street, later was arrested as the driver of the truck and is being held under $100 bond. He told police that the little girl ran suddenly in front of the truck from the sidewalk, and that it was impossible for him to avoid the accident. He was arrested by Call Offiers Walter A. Goode and W. Fred Bullard.

The child has a possible fracture of the skull, in addition to a broken ankle and severe cuts and bruises.

MAC MILLAN SAILS FOR LAND SEARCH

F. McDonald of Chicago, in charge of the radio equipment of the expedition and broadcast to the crowds near the piers, where amplifiers were placed so all could hear. He read the following message:

"I wish to thank the people of Maine, and especially the good friends of Wiscasset, for their wonderful hospitality and great interest in Arctic work. We thank you for your wonderful send-off and for your hearty good wishes. I am saying goodbye for each and every member of my crew. If all goes well you can look for us about September 20."

MacMillan sailed for the Arctic with authorization to claim any lands he discovers in the polar seas for the state of Maine and with pledge from a captain in the United States navy that if the American flag is planted on the unknown land "we will see that you keep it there."

Washington Is Silent.

The authorization and pledge were given at a dinner last night at Southport. The dinner was given by the state and constituted the official farewell to the explorer and his party.

Captain D. E. Dismukes, commandant of the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard, who represented Secretary of the Navy Wilbur at the dinner, in a short address, told MacMillan he hoped he would dig as big a hole as possible, plant a Maine pine in it, nail the American flag to the top, and said "we will see that you keep it there."

Governor Ralph O. Brewster said MacMillan "is authorized insofar as the sovereign state of Maine is concerned to claim in our behalf such land as he shall discover in this region that is still unknown."

Commander MacMillan, the last speaker, made no reference to these remarks, and a dispatch from Washington said Governor Brewster's statement had failed to break the silence the state department has maintained concerning press dispatches from Canada indicating that that nation might claim any land lying between her and the north pole. It was pointed out, however, that no formal interchange of notes on the subject has passed between the two governments.

Leave for Etah Today.

The two MacMillan ships will drop anchor off Monhegan Island, about 15 miles at sea, and the ship's compasses will be boxed.

Commander MacMillan will go ashore there and pass the night with old friends among the fishermen. The two ships will leave sometime tomorrow on their long sail to Etah, Greenland, whence the three navy planes of the expedition will fly to Cape Thomas Hubbard on Axel Heiberg Island. There the search by airplane for the mysterious land in the polar seas will be begun.

The land MacMillan expects to find lies in an entirely different region than the 160,000 square kilometers of territor, which Amundsen surveyed in his recent flight without noting traces of land. MacMillan looks for a continent of flowers, birds and fishes, and scientists aboard his ships are prepared to study the elements which help cause weather changes down here below and the animal and plant life.

The expedition is under the auspices of the National Geographic society which is financing the trip.

BOWDOIN ANCHORS IN FISHING PORT.

Monhegn Island, Maine, June 20. (By Associated Press.)—Lieutenant Commander MacMillan's ship, the Bowdoin, dropped anchor in this little fishing port tonight to permit the members of the crew to make the ship secure for sea and to allow Commander MacMillan to come ashore and visit his old friends among the fishermen of the island.

Virtually the entire population of Monhegan was on the dock as the Bowdoin dropped her anchor. Fireworks were displayed from the top of a hill and cheers floated out across the harbor to the commander as he waved a greeting from the deck.

The sail from Wiscasset was delayed somewhat by the boxing of the compass on the way from Booth Bay harbor.

IOWA W. C. T. U. HEAD MAY SEEK SENATE SEAT

Des Moines, Iowa, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Des Moines Capital today said Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, state head of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, may be a candidate for the republican nomination for United States senator.

Miss Whiteside Receives Honor As Leading Poet

Miss Mary Brent Whiteside, of Atlanta, has written a book of poems entitled "The Eternal Guest," which has just been brought out by Erskine MacDonald, London publishers.

MISS MARY BRENT WHITESIDE, of Atlanta, who received signal honors as poet.

Miss Whiteside is one of the outstanding English poets and has received splendid recognition both in America and in England. She is a vice president of the London Poetry society, representing the southern states, and is the second American to have been honored with an invitation to address the London Poetry society.

In a recent prize contest of the Poetry Review of London, Miss Whiteside tied with Margaret Widdemer for first prize. The title of Miss Whiteside's poem was "A Ballad of Tiberius." Miss Whiteside also received special honors at a recent meeting of the Poetry Society of America, which convened at the National Arts club in New York. She has contributed to more than 20 leading magazines of the United States and London, and many of her poems have been reprinted in Current Opinion and the Literary Digest. One of her poems was recently reprinted in a new English textbook published by the University of Chicago Press.

PHOTO OF BULLETS MAY BE POSSIBLE BY NEW PROCESS

Minneapolis, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Discovery of a mysterious ingredient in gelatine which may make it possible to catch a picture of a bullet whizzing through the air, or a flash of lightning was disclosed by Dr. K. H. Lambert, of the Eastman Kodak company research laboratories, of Rochester, N. Y., in a paper read before the opening session of the national colloid symposium at the University of Minnesota here.

The paper was prepared by Dr. S. E. Shepard, chemist for the kodak company, embodying the results of experiments extending over several years.

The ingredient in gelatine makes it possible, the paper disclosed, to bring the swift action of a bird's wing down to the speed of slow motion pictures. The substance increases the sensitivity of ordinary photographic film more than a hundredfold.

GENERAL M'ARTHUR TO BE TRANSFERRED

Washington, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Major General Douglas MacArthur, now commanding the fourth corps area, with headquarters at Atlanta, will be transferred to command of the third corps area, with headquarters at Baltimore, effective August 1.

The Constitution was unable late Saturday to obtain confirmation of reported transfer of General McArthur from the fourth corps area, although it is general information in corps area headquarters that orders to that effect have been issued.

Major General MacArthur, the youngest major general in the army and recognized as one of the most brilliant figures in army circles. He came to take command of the fourth corps headquarters only a few weeks ago, succeeding Major General David C. Shanks, who retired.

No mention of a successor to General MacArthur has been made.

ENGINEERS TO HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICES

Tribute to deceased members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and ladies' auxiliary will be paid at 4 o'clock this afternoon in annual memorial services by the Atlanta chapters at St. Paul's Methodist church.

A special feature of the exercises will be tribute to the memory of Warren S. Stone, late president of the national order. Dr. L. W. Collins, pastor of the church, will preach the memorial sermon.

Tull C. Waters will act as master of ceremonies, and C. B. Cannon, Mrs. E. D. Quinn and Mrs. C. S. Crutchfield will conduct the roll call. Appropriate music will be furnished by Mrs. Annie Mae Norton, organist; Mrs. Eloise Vining Sullivan, soloist; Mrs. Ellis Huff and Mrs. Hugh Timms, in a duet; and the church choir. Dr. Collins will give the opening prayer and Dr. W. H. Boring will offer the benediction.

Atlanta members of the order who died during the past year were W. W. Blasingame, J. D. Pyron, W. H. Thrash, W. F. Hetzel, W. Z. Davis, T. J. Robertson, C. M. Patterson, G. N. Hancock, W. G. Lovell, Hadley Harcourt, M. D. McClair, I. H. Lemmond, Mrs. G. V. Harvey and Mrs. O. C. Dempsey, the last two being members of the auxiliary.

city, and be a tremendous advertisement to the city and the state.

Promises His Support.

"If the council will authorize this matter and the county authorities approve it I will take great pleasure in showing my appreciation by actively supporting a bill in the legislature providing for viaducts across the state's property.

"You are authorized to use this letter before council and the committees, as I believe that nothing would be of greater importance at this time than the completion of this city hall and these viaducts."

Mr. Allen also points out that location of the new municipal building on this site would place all city, county state offices within a very short distance of each other.

AMUNDSEN RELATES POLE STORY IN DETAIL

eyes, and assured us that our general direction was right. Our speed averaged 75 nautical miles an hour (81 statute miles). The thermometer during our flight averaged minus ten centigrade (14 above zero, Fahrenheit).

No Landing Places Visible.

"After two hours of flying, we reached the polar pack ice, which stretched unbroken and solid to the furthest north. Through occasional holes in the fog, we saw that it was marked with heavy pressure ridges all over it. No landing place was visible anywhere.

"The planes continued to fly together with perfect precision.

"At 1 o'clock in the morning, we should have been by dead reckoning at latitude 88.30, but finding that the magnetic compass showed great variation, I realized we had drifted far to the west. Just after 1 o'clock, we sighted first open water, a wide lane in the pack ice, forming a basin.

"As it was the only possible landing place seen in eight hours, I immediately decided to descend, so as to observe accurately our position and then continue the flight. The N-24 was so close that its crew could see us preparing to descend, so they followed suit.

Plane Barely Escapes Destruction.

"As we climbed down, the motor unaccountably halted. So, instead of having a choice of landing place, Rideor Larsen was forced out of the main lead into a narrow branch. Heaven knows how we escaped complete destruction! The wings passed the ice hummocks on the edges of the lead by a hair's breadth, the plane finally halting with her nose buried in a great hummock, where she stuck.

"The three of us were unable to budge the machine. We wanted to turn about or back into the main lead. Our position was precarious, as we feared the narrow lead might close momentarily.

"We quickly lightened the plane, removing the provisions and other freight to a high, dry hummock. Then we tried again to drag the machine onto the high ice, but its six tons was too heavy for three men.

N-24 Lost for Day.

"During the landing we had lost sight of the N-24. We were greatly worried. We did not find her until the next day, May 23, on the other side of the main lead. We immediately got into communication by means of flag signals. All day we tried to cut off the hummock, to enable us to get our plane onto the ice. But the ice was hard as steel, and our only implement was a two-pound pocket safety ax and our sheath knives. Hopeless necessity inspired us to lash a knife blade to the end of a ski stick, which served excellently to slash the ice. Our failure to provide ourselves with ice cutters was due to the fact that we hopped off, as it was, with 1,100 pounds overweight.

"All day, May 24, we worked at lowering the hummock and constructing a slip to raise the plane. May 25 was similarly occupied. While we were engaged in this work, we were greatly surprised to see a seal pop his head up in the lead, but he was too far distant to shoot. Never believed I would find a seal so far north as 87.40.

Plane Badly Wrecked.

"Ellsworth, Dietrichson and Omdahl wigwagged that they wished to join us. Their plane had been badly wrecked. Nails had been torn out of the bottom of the hull, which was leaking badly. They had kept their pumps going constantly for two days. Originally, there was a distance of over three miles between us, but daily we had drifted closer together until today we were only about a mile apart.

"I told the three to come over to us. I thought naturally that they would follow the hummocks, that being the only safe way, as anyone knows who has traveled much in the Arctic. But they started over the new ice. After two different routes had failed them, I believed they would be successful in their attempt. So I started out in the canvas boat to fetch them across an intervening lead. Now there occurred a terrible incident.

"Our view of each other was cut off by hummocks, some 40 feet high. Suddenly, I heard in the distance cries of men unmistakably in fear of death. I knew something terrible was happening. I pushed on, trembling with fear, toward the three, but was unable to get near enough to lift a finger to help. The anguished cries continued and then stopped. But presently heads appeared over the top of the ice. As the men came into view, I saw them dripping wet and weak with cold. The temperature was 12 below zero centigrade (10 above zero Fahrenheit)."

Amundsen said that Ellsworth told him what had occurred. As they were approaching the land in single file, Distreichson plunged suddenly through a hole in the ice, and an instant later, Lars Omdahl followed him. Each fought hard to keep afloat, but the current sucked them down. Ellsworth shook his skis loose and pulled out Dietrichson. Omdahl dug his fingers into the edge of the ice, but was almost gone when Ellsworth, lying prostrate on the thin ice, ripped off Omdahl's eight-pound pack with his knife, enabling him to rise.

Escape Was Very Narrow.

"It was a very narrow escape," said Amundsen. "From then on, the six of us made our home inside the N-25, one sleeping in the tail, three in the freight compartment, and two in the pilot's cockpit. The gaunt hull served as bedroom, dining room, kitchen and living room for almost a month.

"I reduced rations immediately, in anticipation of a possible trip afoot to Cape Columbia. At first we cut from 1,000 to 300 grams (11 ounces) daily, then to 250 grams (9 ounces). We ate pemmican, chocolate, biscuits and malted milk. Although working 20 hours daily, we felt no weakness except during the first days, due to the change of diet. This was evidence of the suitability of our choice of provisions.

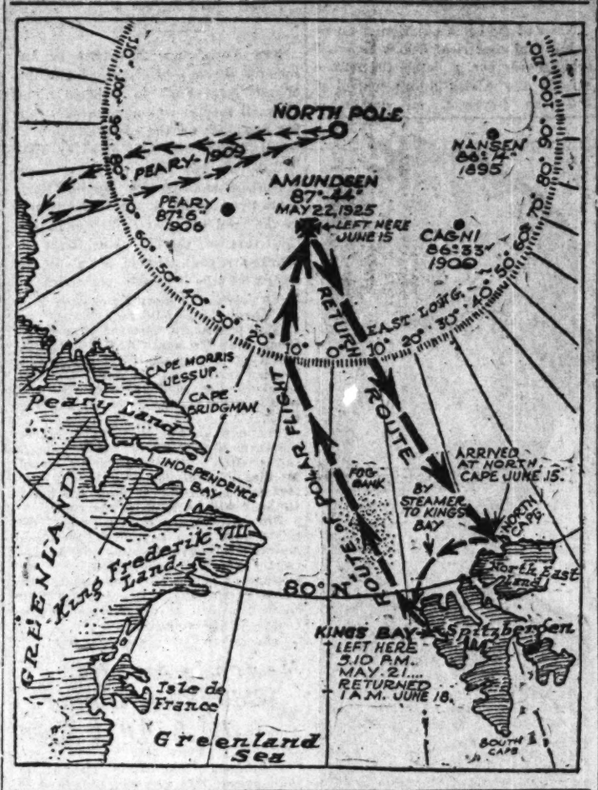

"By May 27 we had completely leveled the hummock and constructed a strip, removing countless tons of ice.

"With the aid of the motors, we got the plane out of the dangerous lead. We had always kept her riding free by breaking the ice constantly as fast as it formed."

Girl Slayer To Appeal.

LA FOLLETTE'S BODY RECEIVED AT HOME

flags on specially erected standards fluttered at half-mast. The casket was followed by hundreds who marched bareheaded in the bright June sun, and grouped themselves in impressive silence about the massive granite state house while the body was carried on to the reception room in the east gallery.

Flags at Half-Mast.

Members of the legislature immediately took up their long vigil, while selected members of the state national guard, in civilian clothes, stood as sentinels before the entrance.

Surrounded by huge floral pieces, the casket was placed in a corner of the reception room near a massive white marble fireplace and at a spot almost directly under the portion of the ceiling upon which is engraved the motto the dead senator often quoted: "The will of the people is the law of the land."

While flags everywhere are at half-staff, the city hall alone is draped in mourning. The senator himself long before the end expressed the desire that mourning be omitted by members of his own family, declaring to his wife that "there is no sorrow in death when a life has been well spent."

Business Is Suspended.

Work in Madison will be suspended and the business houses closed during the hour of the funeral. The state legislature will recess Monday morning and the capitol offices will be closed throughout the day.

The funeral services will be simple. They will be conducted in the capitol rotunda by the Rev. A. F. Hayden, of Chicago.

Lifelong friends of Senator La Follette will be the active pallbearers.

The honorary pallbearers will include a committee from the United States senate, all the members of the Wisconsin delegation in the national house of representatives, Governor Blaine and other state officers, members of the state supreme court, federal judges of this district, officials of the University of Wisconsin and the state normal schools, members of the various state departments, former state officials and a large number of citizens from this and adjoining states.

SHEPHERD DEFENSE CRUSHED BY STATE

live germs in an ice box at the school. There was no ice box there, he said. Then Crowe, in his rat-trap manner, began to cross-examine the witness.

Finds Witness Knew Little.

With a few deft thrusts he stripped the little janitor of all right to be on the stand. Under Crowe's talk, Smith painted himself as ignorant of the subject upon which he had been called to testify. Smith didn't know anything about bacteriology; he knew there wasn't an ice box but there was another "thing" in the laboratory which might have contained the live germs. This "thing" was an incubator.

"Did you ever examine any typhoid slides," asked Crowe. No, the witness had not. He had not studied germs either, and he didn't know that slides are made up from live cultures. The witness had seen test tubes in the laboratory, but he couldn't say what test tubes are used for.

"You don't know much about this case then do you?" was the final question. The witness made no answer, and Crowe dismissed him.

Health Chief of Little Help.

Dr. Tonney, the next witness, was first called upon to describe the laboratory in the city health department where Faiman declares he obtained germs for his school. Tonney, under questioning by Attorney Stewart, explained the procedure by which germs were given out at the department.

He said that he had never had occasion to know Faiman. Stewart then elicited from the witness the information that it would be difficult to preserve germs in the manner described by Faiman. It could be done, however, he added. Then Crowe cross-examined him, and it was shown that between 50 and 60 persons were employed in the health department. It was shown that most of them being students the personnel changed often.

"Do you know that some of your men, some of them who have worked in your laboratory, are students of the National University of Science?" Crowe asked.

Crowe Claims Victory.

"I have heard that," responded the doctor. The witness then admitted that Faiman had been seen in the laboratory several times and that he had a sweetheart working there.

Dr. Tonney left the stand after admitting that the germs in the school were easily accessible to the employees and that it was quite possible that thousands of germs had been removed from the laboratory without his knowledge.

Crowe claimed a significant victory in his examination of Smith and Dr. Tonney. It was obvious to the casual observer that the defense had failed completely in its effort to discredit the testimony of the little doctor.

Things were going so badly at the end of the morning session that Attorney Stewart asked that the trial be resumed in the afternoon, something that had not been done before. He fought desperately, he seized upon every possible detail that seemed to strengthen his bald statement that Faiman is a liar.

When it was over and the bailiff dismissed the court there were beads of perspiration on Shepherd's face and a strange light in his eyes. His usual placidity was gone; he seemed nervous, and when he walked out between two guards his shoulders slumped, his feet dragged and his eyes stared at the floor.

HEALTH EDUCATION PARLEY TO STRESS TEACHER TRAINING

Chicago, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—The fourth annual health education conference of the American Child Health association to be held at the University of Chicago June 22-28, is expected to bring to Chicago by special invitation 150 educators, physicians and specialists in the field of child health. The sessions will be devoted to discussional meeting emphasizing the health program in secondary schools and teacher training for health education.

BIG CEMENT PLANT OPENS NEAR PERRY

Perry, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—The plant of the Clinchfield Portland Cement corporation have their furnaces and mills in operation here, especially the grinding and mixing mills. The finishing plant will be opened later.

The corporation is building an 8-mile railroad from its plant near town to a point on the Georgia, Southern and Florida railroad over which its products will be shipped.

The plant just opened cost several million dollars and will have an output of 2,500 barrels of cement a day.

38 ORDERED HELD DURING RIOT PROBE

Clinton, Mass., June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Thirty-eight men were ordered held for the Worcester county grand jury today after 41 defendants, charged with participation in riots between Ku Klux Klan members and anti-klan forces here recently were arraigned in district court. The charges on which the men were bound over were disturbing the peace and violating a town by-law in participating in parades for which no permit had been granted by the police. Four of the number faced the more serious charge of having dangerous weapons in their possession when arrested. Three were discharged for lack of evidence.

Two Die in Boat Fire.

Duesseldorf, Germany, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—A cargo of film scraps became ignited at a wharf here today, causing the death of two workmen. The motor vessel was a mass of flames in a few minutes and the captain saved himself by jumping overboard.

It Gives You the Feeling That It Was Built for You

THE desire for ownership which the New Franklin arouses is undoubtedly due in part to the exclusive atmosphere of de Causse's design. His creation does much more than merely follow the accepted lines of beauty. It does even more than give Franklin top rank as a style car. Most pleasing of all, it gives you the feeling that it was built for you. This is particularly noticeable with the Touring. Seeing it for the first time is like stepping into surroundings of impeccable correctness: you sense an indefinable air of distinction and success. And beneath it all lies the confidence-giving Franklin reputation.

Franklin Series 11 comprises the Touring, Runabout, and five closed types, all ready for the road—fully equipped with appropriate accessories, spare tire and cover—at the catalog price. Only tax and freight are extra.

Tennessee State Geologist Sees Clarification of Truth By Dayton Evolution Trial

Sees Opportunity for Scientists To Present Correct Principles of Evolution Theory.

Nashville, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—"We are seeing at the present time a political discussion of a subject—evolution—which should have nothing to do with either politics or religion," is the view taken of the evolution controversy by Wilbur A. Nelson, state geologist and president of the Monteagle assembly, an inter-denominational religious and educational chautauqua.

Referring to the Tennessee anti-evolution law, the signing of which by Governor Austin Peay gave new impetus to the discussion, Mr. Nelson said:

"The last state to pass such a law was Tennessee. In other states where similar laws have been passed the people have gone on without making any legal fight over the constitutionality of such a law.

Interested in Handling of Case.

"Irrespective of the causes which may have brought about the furor over evolution, we shall shortly be in the discussions and speeches which will originate at this Dayton trial. It will be interesting to know just how the trial will be handled. Many of the scientists of the country are interested in seeing that at this trial the opportunity will be given to them to tell to the country through expert witnesses just what is meant by evolution.

"This trial offers a most remarkable opportunity along this line, and it is hoped that those in charge of it will be permitted to have present as such expert witnesses the leading scientists in the country representing each line of science which deals in any way with the principles of evolution. If such can be done, the record of this can stand for many years as a text-book on what is really meant by evolution.

Will Advance Scientific Truth.

"If such a course is permitted to be followed, the public will, through the nation's press, be fully informed on this scientific question and, irrespective of the outcome of the trial, the interest of the entire world will have been so aroused in this test case that the education of the people in scientific truths will have been materially advanced, more than would have been brought about in 10 or 20 years in the ordinary course of events.

"The people will find out for themselves that there has been no conflict between science and religion, but that there has always been a warfare between science and theology in Christiandom."

"The present controversy in Tennessee has given a new impetus to science in creating an enormous demand for authentic information about evolution, and it is hoped that it will result in bringing about a condition which will continue to permit freedom of thought in education as well as in politics and religion," Mr. Nelson said.

MAN NEVER MONKEY OR APE, SCIENTIST DECLARES.

Portland, Ore., June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—That man never was either monkey or ape, and that assumptions to this effect are erroneous and foolish, was the declaration of Dr. Charles Hill-Tout, of Vancouver, B. C., fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, lecturer and author, who spoke yesterday to the naturalist division of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in session here this week.

"We have indisputable records of man which go back before the time of the ape," said Dr. Hill-Tout. "Probably both ape and man came from some former ancestor in phylogenetic series farther back. It is true that we may say that man has ape-like characteristics, but it is equally true that ape has manlike characteristics, which doesn't mean much unless interpreted correctly. In fact, nearly all living organisms have points of common likeness.

Ape Can't Make Implements.

"The oldest skeleton records of man go back about 1,500,000 years, but we know man was relatively high in intelligence two million years before this time. But the ape has not yet brain power to make even the most crude implements for his own use."

Dr. Alexander Findley, professor of chemistry at the University of Aberdeen, Scotland, who spoke last night at the closing meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said that those who find conflict between religion and science are neither good religionists nor good scientists. The two can be antagonistic, he declared, and such controversies as that in Tennessee are due to ignorance or inability to coordinate the findings of modern science with the universal scheme.

EVOLUTION TRIAL TROOPS REFUSED.

Nashville, June 20.—Governor Austin Peay today declined the request of Sheriff R. B. Harris of Rhea county and A. P. Haggard, chairman of Dayton's city commission, for national guard troops at Dayton during the Scopes trial, the request presenting no emergency, the governor stated.

NO CONFLICT SEEN BY CLARENCE DARROW.

Nashville, Tenn., June 20.—The theory of evolution in no way conflicts with the divine creation of man, as related in the Bible, nor repudiates the Biblical story of creation, Clarence Darrow, noted criminal lawyer of Chicago, engaged in the defense of Professor John T. Scopes, at Dayton, said in a letter to Noah W. Cooper, of Nashville, in answer to a questionnaire sent by Mr. Cooper to the chief counsel in the Loeb-Leopold trial.

Mr. Darrow in his reply denied that he had laid the Chicago millionaire youths' crime to Nietzsche or any such philosophy.

"As to the Loeb-Leopold case, I did ask for justice and mercy," he declared. "I did say their crime grew from heredity and environment. I did say that they had not been carefully trained, but if one were wise enough to know the end from the beginning, some other sort of training might have prevented the act.

"I did say, in answer to something the state had said, that I thought their lives would be perfectly safe if Jesus was to pass upon them and I still think so. I likewise think that He would not have believed in a law making it a criminal offense to teach evolution in the public schools.

"I do not think you or any other man has the key to all human knowledge, or that your judgment is infallible. I do not think that evolution is in anyway in conflict with religion, or with the story of creation as recorded in the Bible, and there are thousands of ministers of high standing in the United States who have said the same.

"If evolution is contrary to the teaching of the Bible as to the origin of man, then astronomy and geology are likewise in conflict, and these also should be barred from the public schools.

"If it should be a crime to teach evolution, then it should be a crime the same whether in public or private schools, whether on the platform or in newspapers or books.

"I believe that if the theory of evolution is wrong, that free discussion and investigation will show it, and that it will likewise show that it is not inconsistent with any real religion.

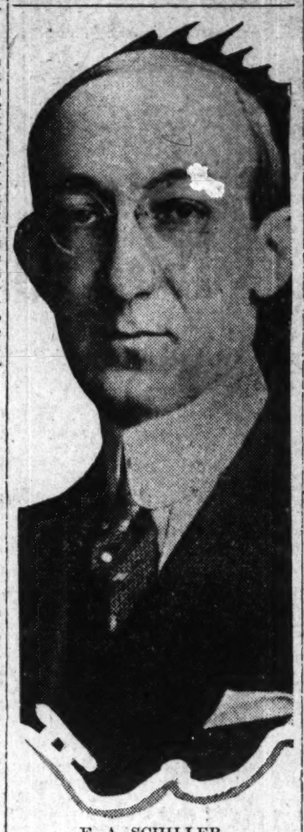

"I believe that the business of public schools should be to educate pupils."

VIOLA DANA MARRIES FORMER YALE ATHLETE

Los Angeles, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Viola Dana, film actress, known in private life as "Viola Collins," 27 years of age, and Maurice "Lefty" Flynn, former Yale athlete and now engaged in film work, were quietly married here today.

LOEW WILL CONTROL 14 FOREIGN THEATERS

News of the consummation of an international theatrical deal which will bring more than a dozen theaters of Europe and Africa under control of American interests, all details of which were handled and directed by E. A. Schiller, an Atlanta man, came in cable dispatches received here Friday. Under the deal, which was negotiated by Mr. Schiller, the European and Egyptian theaters, 14 in number, will come under control of Loew's, Incorporated, of which interest Mr. Schiller is general representative.

Under the terms of the deal, which was closed at Paris, 14 of the best motion picture houses of Europe and Egypt, including the new 4,000-seat Palace theater in Paris, will come under the control of Loew's, Incorporated. The deal was made by Loew's, Incorporated, and the Gaumont Theaters of France. Loew's, Incorporated, will acquire theaters under the contract in Paris, Bordeaux, Lyons, Marseilles, Toulose, Toulor, Strassburg, St. Etienne, Cairo, Alexandria and Palestine.

Mr. Schiller, who conducted the deal, lived in Atlanta many years and owns a home here, which is now occupied by Mrs. Schiller. He served as southern representative of Marcus Loew and later was made general representative of Loew's, Incorporated, with headquarters in New York.

While visiting Atlanta in May, Mr. Schiller outlined to The Constitution plans for the big deal and told of the effect it would have on film conditions in Europe and America. He said the deal would be beneficial to American picture houses as well as to the foreign houses. He declared that the Gaumont pictures, made in France, probably will be distributed through America by Metro-Goldwyn, a Loew subsidiary.

In the 14 new foreign houses the Metro-Goldwyn pictures will be shown on much the same schedule as they appear in American cities. The deal for the new houses is effective August 1.

American pictures are highly popular in the foriegn theaters and through the control of the new theaters Loew's, Incorporated, will be enabled to put the Metro-Goldwyn productions into the largest and most progressive cities in France, Germany, Egypt and other countries. Mr. Schiller said theaters probably would be acquired soon in Sweden and in Italy by Loew's, Incorporated.

Mr. Schiller sailed from New York June 9 a few days after he left Atlanta. He was accompanied by J. Robert Rubin, attorney for Metro-Goldwyn.

PRINCE OF WALES SHOWING EFFECTS OF TRAVEL STRAIN

Pretoria, South Africa, June 20.—The strain of the heavy program which the Prince of Wales has undergone on his tour through Africa has begun to tell on him, judging from his appearance. The prince looks thin and somewhat pale. Members of his party are urging that he take several days of complete rest.

STRIKE OF CREW PREVENTS SAILING OF FRENCH LINER

Havre, France, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—The French liner La Savoie, which was to have left for New York at 9 o'clock tonight, was prevented from sailing by the desertion of about 200 members of the crew. A composite crew sent aboard later also deserted.

The officials of the line hope that the steamer will be able to leave tomorrow. Meanwhile, the excitement among the seamen is increasing, due to the sentence of a month's imprisonment imposed on the secretary of the sailors' union on the charge of having caused the desertion of the crew of the French Steamer Caroline.

Modern Woodmen To Open Annual Encampment Today

Chicago, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—The quadrennial encampment of the Modern Woodmen of American will be formally initiated tomorrow afternoon by a ceremonial flag raising on the municipal pier, in which 6,000 foresters, the uniformed rank of the service, are expected to participate. Major General Maurice R. Smith, of Kansas City, will assume command of the uniformed group.

The encampment will continue six days, during which all visiting Woodmen will be housed on the mile-long pier extending into Lake Michigan. The structure has been transformed into a giant barracks where cots and kitchen equipment have been arranged to accommodate a crowd of 10,000. The camp has been christened Camp Korns, after Francis R. Korns, of Des Moines, Iowa, a national director of the Woodmen.

Night Air Mail To Be Launched First of Month

New York, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Formal launching of the New York to Chicago night air mail service was announced today for 8 o'clock on the night of July 1. At that time the first bags of mail will be started from the New York postoffice building for Hauley field, New Brunswick, N. J., to be placed in the mail plane at 9:30 o'clock for the start of the 784-mile flight to Chicago. The mail is scheduled to arrive at the Chicago postoffice at 6:30 o'clock the morning of July 2.

Colonel Paul Henderson, assistant postmaster general, announced today that the route had been established at a cost of $500,000, which covered leveling of the field, installation of pilot and guide lights, and first rentals on a series of landing fields.

The new service is independent of the transcontinental air service started in 1920. Twenty-four converted De Haviland planes with liberty motors and a cruising peed of 100 miles an hour will be used on the route.

For supplies and emergency, 32 fields have been established between New York and Cleveland and 14 between Cleveland and Chicago, at an average of about 15 miles apart. The fields comprising an average of 40 acres are held at an average yearly rental of $10 an acre.

Negro Is Arrested While Busy 'Hoeing' His Liquid Corn

Columbus, Ohio, June 20.—Aaron Pell, negro, was arrested today while hoeing corn—three gallons of it. Pell had buried two gallons and was hoeing out a place for the third when police arrived.

MOOSE CONVENTION WILL OPEN TODAY

Baltimore, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Thousands of members of the Loyal Order of Moose had registered tonight for the 37th annual international convention of the order, which opens here tomorrow to continue until next Saturday.

Streets presented a holiday appearance, with flags, streamers, bunting and emblems covering the entire downtown section of the city. Plans for entertainment of the visitors have been made on a large scale.

The lodge men will be welcomed to Baltimore tomorrow by Mayor Howard W. Jackson and a responsive address will be delivered by Past Supreme Dictator C. A. A. McGee, of Oakland, Calif. An initiation and a concert by the student band of Mooseheart, Ill., also is on Sunday's program.

GOTTSCHALDT TO HEAD COTTON STATES AD FIRM

Announcement has been made that the Kenneth S. Keyes company is to be known after July 1 as the Cotton States Advertising agency. Allen C. Gottschaldt, who has been vice president of the concern since its incorporation, is to succeed Kenneth S. Keyes as president, the latter resigning to enter the real estate business in Florida.

ALLEN C. GOTTSCHALDT

Richard Thorndike, who has been with this agency since last year, is to become secretary of the Cotton States Advertising agency, and Charles M. Weems is to continue as manager of the production department and the mailing list department.

In discussing the change of name yesterday, Mr. Gottschaldt said: "Our business, which is now a little over three years old, has been growing steadily and especially along general agency lines—making it advisable for the company's name to better reflect the purpose. We are rendering about 20 clients in different sections of the southeast a complete advertising service; the change in name will not alter our policy in this regard at all."

Offices of the Cotton States Advertising agency will be continued in the Cooper building, and not only will the personnel of the copy and plan department remain unchanged, but it is probable that it will shortly be augmented.

Allan C. Gottschaldt, who is to head the company, is well known in local advertising circles. He was formerly first vice president of the Advertising Club of Atlanta.

LIRE IMPROVEMENT INDICATES CRISIS IN ITALY PASSED

Rome, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—A sense of relief was evident today with improvement of the lire quotation on the bourse, and it was commented by many that the crisis in Italy's "lire battle" had been reached and passed. This belief was strengthened by the fact that the heads of all the banking institutions, after a discussion of the situation, had decided there was no reason for anxiety or preoccupation.

After the meeting the banking officials told Minister of Finance de Stefani that their confidence in the country's currency was unshaken; that they approved the government's action in raising the discount rate and the rate of interest on state bonds, and that they agreed on the line of action to continue the fight to ultimate victory.

These bankers, who thus pledged their confidence in Italy's financial stability, decided, among other things, to limit foreign money credits to their depositors to absolute industrial and commercial needs, to extend credit in foreign money to those having on deposit foreign bills or other foreign securities only insofar as these depositors retained on deposit only what foreign securities were absolutely necessary for their business and to extend no credit whatsoever to speculators.

Judge Woods Near Death.

Florence, S. C., June 20.—Judge C. A. Woods, of the United States court, who has been ill for some time at a local hospital, is in a critical condition. Physicians say the judge has lost ground during the day and may not survive another 24 hours.

$100,000 Fund To Aid Defense Of Two Gunmen

Chicago, June 19.—A $1000,000 defense fund is being collected for John Scalice and Albert Anselmi, gunmen and members of the notorious Genna gang, according to reports current in Chicago's underworld. The gunmen are under indictment charged with the shooting of two policemen in the battle in which Mike Genna, their leader, was killed.

Rum runners and resort keepers are contributing to the fund, it is said. Hundreds of gangsters are reported to have left the city following the police raids of last week, but many fortunes of prosperous bootlegging years are open to the accused men.

Scalice and Anselmi pleaded not guilty when arraigned Friday. Trial was set for July 27.

Meanwhile police are searching for two other gangsters. One is Pete Genna, one of the four survivors of the Genna family, who jumped a $500 bail bond and failed to appear Friday to answer a charge of carrying concealed weapons. When Pete was arrested he had a revolver, $1,447 in cash and $10,000 in promissory notes on his person. The other gangster sought was the mystery man who, after firing at a city hall guard, fled into the freight tunnels below the city. The 250 policemen who searched for him there have been withdrawn, but guards are still stationed at all entrances to the tunnels.

Nokol
built oil-burning

The day of oil heating for the home is here. Nokol brought it. The success of oil heating for the home dates from the day 7 years ago when the first Nokol with its combustion chamber was installed. Since that time a whole new industry has grown up around the success of Nokol.

The leadership of Nokol, established 7 years ago, has never been challenged. Of approximately 75,000 automatic oil burners installed in the United States, by 347 manufacturers, 22,000 are Nokols.

Today Nokol gives guarantees of efficiency and economy approached by no other home heating device. Its fuel cost is less than that of hard coal. It is also to the best of our knowledge, less than that of any other oil burner, regardless of the grade of fuel used. Nokol uses the grade of fuel most desirable for home heating, a higher grade of fuel than most oil burners dare use, at the lowest cost.

To make sure your Nokol will be installed by fall, get in touch with us today. Call or phone.

Here two Nokols are shown. One installed in a typical home heating plant, the other in a water heater.

The success of automatic oil heating for homes dates from the perfection of this combustion chamber. It cannot be imitated by any other oil burner. It acts entirely by radiant heat. No part of the flame touches the boiler.

NATIONAL SHEET METAL MEET OPENS TUESDAY

Several hundred sheet metal contractors from all sections of the United States will assemble in Atlanta this week for the twenty-first annual convention of the National Association of Sheet Metal Contractors, which will convene at the Biltmore hotel for a four-day session, beginning Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock and continuing Friday until noon.

Delegates will begin arriving in the city Sunday and during Monday. It is expected that most of the representatives will reach the hotel and be ready for the opening session of the convention.

Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock state and local secretaries in attendance at the convention will hold a conference at the Biltmore hotel with National Secretary Edwin L. Seabrook, and discuss matters of interest to them in connection with the work of the association.

Monday evening, at 8 o'clock, the president, officers and trustees of the national association will hold an executive session in one of the private dining rooms of theh otel, at which time Mr. S. P. Moncrief, chairman of the convention committee, will entertain them with a dinner.

The business sessions of the convention will open Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, with community singing led by "Cousin Fred" Houser, executive secretary of the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau. Invocation will be offered by Rev. W. Lee Cutts, pastor of Capitol View Baptist church. Governor Walker will extend a welcome from the state of Georgia and Mayor Walter A. Sims will welcome the delegates to the city of Atlanta. W. C. Markle, national president, will respond to the addresses of welcome. At 11 o'clock Tuesday morning the chairman of the convention commitee will turn the convention over to the national president, W. C. Markle, who will preside at all sessions.

An elaborate program of entertainment has been provided for the delegates and visiting ladies to the convention. Tuesday the women will be entertained at a luncheon at the Atlanta Woman's club. Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock they will be guests of the local committee at a theater party at the Howard theater. Tuesday evening all delegates and visitors will be guests at the light opera performance of the "Prince of Pilsen" as guests of the Georgia Association of Sheet Metal Contractors. Wednesday's social program will be featured by trips to points of interest for the ladies of the convention as guests of the wives of local sheet metal contractors. Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock the annual banquet will be served at the Biltmore hotel.

At 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon all delegates and visitors will be taken on a trip to Stone Mountain where they will be entertained with an old-fashioned Georgia watermelon cutting, which will close the social side of the convention.

ORATORY SCHOOL HOLDS SUMMER RECITAL

The Atlanta School of Oratory and Expression held the first recital of the summer in its studio, Baptist Tabernacle, 78 Luckie street, Friday night.

There was a varied and unique recital, both in states represented and in the nature of the program. Miss Rebekah Fennell, of Leighton, Ala., interpreted a humorous monolog of a young man writing a proposal, and read from Riley's Love Lyrics. Miss Minnie Godsey, of Itta Bena, Miss., gave an artistic impersonation of "Ze Afternoon Tea."

Miss Tom A. Lambeth, of Cooper, Texas, spoke on the importance of the study of expression, and paid a glowing tribute to the state of Georgia.

Convention Speaker

CHARLES R. HOOK
Vice president and general manager of the American Rolling Mill company, of Middleton, Ohio, who will be one of the principal speakers at the National Convention of Sheet Metal Contractors this week in Atlanta.

Today Is Longest In Entire Year, Science Reveals

Today, June 21, as is usual with June 21, whether they fall on Sunday or some other day in the week, will be the longest day in 1925. It will be that because it cannot help it. The sun, according to Wilbur Glenn Voliva, has reached just as high as it is going to, or, according to folks who doubt that the sun revolves around the earth, the mundane planet is pulling farther away in its orbit around the sun.

It has been easily apparent to the most casual observer that we were drawing nearer the sun or that the sun was drawing nearer us. Having been taught to believe that the sun is a ball of fire it has been no difficult task to realize the fact and to fear that our whiskers would be singed if the solstice didn't come along pretty soon.

Meteorologists are as one in predicting that it will not turn cold Monday, even though we will be pulling away from the sun. They are not so chary in guessing which way the wind will blow, how many clouds will be on hand and how much rain, if any, will fall.

As a matter of fact the sun is expected to make its appearance on the eastern horizon at 4.27 Sunday morning—a perfectly unearthly hour anyway—and to call it a day at 6.53 p. m., central standard time.

The spectacle of the solstice, visible only in remote spots, will not be marred in Atlanta by rain—or enlivened by it either, according to the United States department of agriculture, although what an agriculture department has to do with that is and probably always will be inexplicable.

EX-PEN INMATE HELD IN TOWER IN LIEU OF BOND

United States Commissioner Joe Abbott Saturday held Martin C. Morgan, recently released from the federal prison, to await action of the federal grand jury on charges of impersonating a federal officer lodged against him by officers of the narcotic department. Unable to furnish a $2,000 bond fixed by Commissioner Abbott the prisoner was placed in Fulton county tower.

Morgan was released from the federal prison last May and has been living in Atlanta since. Thursday he was arrested on a charge of impersonating an officer and while awaiting trial Friday in the detention room at the federal building he was found unconscious after a dose of chloroform had been administered. Officers stated he took the dose with intention of committing suicide.

The charge against Morgan grew out of a visit he made to the office of the narcotic inspector Thursday. It is charged that he told employees of the department he was an officer from the department of justice. He asked to see certain records which were given him, according to statements of officers. Later it was found Morgan was not an employee of the department of justice and his arrest followed.

PICKPOCKET TAKES $52 FROM VICTIM

James V. Stewart, R. F. D. No. 5, East Point, Saturday morning reported to police that his pocket was picked of $52 in currency while he was a passenger on an East Point trolley on the way to town. He suspects a man who bumped into him in the crowded car and apologized profusely for the "accident."

Captain A. J. Holcombe assigned Lieutenant of Detectives T. O. Sturdivant and Detective John C. Davis to the case. The police were furnished with a good description of the suspect.

Five suits of clothes were stolen from the residence of M. H. Johnson and M. Camp at Hemphill avenue and Bishop street early Saturday morning. The burglars jimmied a window for entrance.

D. T. Volyes, of 135 Courtland street, reported to police that burglars stole a gold watch from his home early Saturday morning.

CONSTITUTION FORCE EATS TWIGGS PEACHES

The arduous work of news-gathering was suspended in favor of the more pleasant pastime of eating peaches by The Constitution force Saturday when the expressman hove into sight weighted down with a large basket of luscious Hiley Belles.

The peaches were sent to The Constitution by its Jeffersonville correspondent, F. C. Balcom, who states that the peach crop in Twiggs county is the best it has been in several years.

The Constitution's news force recommends Twiggs county peaches to the world.

SCHOOL BOOK ROW EXPECTED MONDAY

Consideration of plans for the new Hoke Smith Junior High School building, with adoption of a history text book over which there has been a storm of discussion, is scheduled for Tuesday's adjourned meeting of the board of education.

Plans for the new building, drawn by A. Ten Eyck Brown, Atlanta architect, were approved Saturday by the building and grounds committee of the board, and will be presented Tuesday.

The new unit will be added to the present building, with plans calling for still another wing some time in the future. Last year it was necessary to house many junior high school students in the Commercial High School building.

City council has voted $150,000 for the new unit at Hoke Smith, and work will be started as soon as plans are approved and the contract awarded. It is hoped to have the structure ready for occupancy when the new year opens in September.

Action on a history book was postponed from the last meeting when Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, commissioner from the sixth ward, charged that "An Early European History," recommended by the text-book committee, contains Catholic propaganda and savors of paganism. At her request action was deferred until Tuesday.

Members of the committee which recommended the book contend that it treats the subject as fairly as any other book, and is used in all parts of the country. It has been in use in Atlanta schools for nine years, they stated.

POWER COMPANY BUYS 40 NEW STREET CARS

Forty new street cars, in addition to the 20 new cars placed in service in March, have been ordered by the Georgia Railway and Power company and will be placed on the lines just as soon as they can be constructed, probably early in the fall, it was announced Saturday.

The 60 cars, faster, larger and better equipped than any others previously added to the system, will make the present year notable in the company's history as marking the greatest advance in the modernization of the city transportation system, it was stated.

Greater speed throughout the entire street railway system, increased carrying capacity and greater comfort for the passengers are phases of the company's program for the year as announced. Addition of the 40 new cars is planned as an important step in the program, as it will not only bring the company's rolling stock up to a higher standard than ever before but will make possible the retirement of a number of the old single truck cars, all of which are to be removed from the lines and junked just as soon as sufficient modern equipment can be obtained, it was stated.

More than $1,000,000 will be expended on improvements of the system during the coming year, it is claimed. Each of the 40 new cars will cost $14,375, or a total of $575,000. The 20 cars placed in service in March, shortly after jitneys were abolished by action of city council, cost $265,000, making a total of $840,000 for new street cars this year. In addition, 15 double-deck motor coaches, now being constructed for the company, are expected to arrive here within the next few weeks, and feeder bus lines have been established in the Grant park, Morningside and Sylvan Hills sections.

Lakewood Plans Huge Celebration On Fourth of July

The annual Fourth of July celebration at Lakewood Park promises to be the greatest in the history of the annual Independence Day celebrations, according to present plans, R. M. Striplin, secretary of the Southeastern Fair association which is sponsoring the annual midsummer event.

Lovers of the harness racing game will see plenty of action on the Lakewood track on July 4th, for some of the best in the south are already entered in the annual midsummer races. There will be four feature harness race events and each event will carry a large purse for the winners and the events will be run on the three heat plan. There will be two pacing and two trotting events.

For those who are not interested in the harness racing game there will be an unusually good automobile race program just after the harness races are over. Already four drivers have entered the races and information has been received from several new comers on the Lakewood track.

The climax to the festivities will take place at 8 o'clock when a monster fireworks program will be touched off just across the lake from the grandstand.

Exquisite Toiletries and Perfumes For Madame and Mademoiselle

So refreshing these hot days—so Necessaire for the woman who placed being well groomed at the top of her personal desires—so exquisite are these Toiletries from France, resplendent with costumes of great beauty. In this fascinating country which is not only the social playground of the universe there are many quaint little shops where for years skilled artisans have created the extracts which not only please and charm, but translate the varying feminine moods. And there, in this charming France, one sees men with baggy trousers and wide-brimmed hats, also women with vivid shawls, wearing caps and aprons embellished with laces of exquisite design and fabric. In this picturesque atmosphere, centuries old, the world's great Parfumiers labor tirelessly for women whose fastidiousness is met with Parfums and Toiletries that Jacobs' brings to you.

French Week Begins at Jacobs' Monday, June 22nd.

Ban on Race Amalgamation To Be Urged in Legislature By DeKalb Representative

Lawmakers Will Be Asked To Help "Safeguard Integrity" of White Race of World.

Representative elect J. C. Davis, of De Kalb county, prominent Atlanta attorney and president of the Atlanta Lawyers association, has been making a study of the law recently enacted by the general assembly of Virginia, and other states, which seeks to preserve the integrity of the white race by preventing intermarriage where any trace of racial intermixture exists.

The bill will be introduced by Mr. Davis soon after the general assembly meets on Wednesday.

The measure provides:

1. That the term "White Person" shall apply only to a person who has no trace whatsoever of any other blood than Caucasian.

Races are Defined.

2. That the State Registrar of Vital Statistics prepare a form whereon the racial composition of any individual, as Caucasian, Negro, Mongolian, Indian, Malay, or any mixture thereof, or any other non-Caucasic strains, may be certified by such individual, which form shall be known as a registration certificate. Any person whose berth is not now registered may apply to the local registrar in his or her district and present satisfactory proof, and be registered under the terms of the act.

3. Provides that it shall be obligatory for all births occuring after the passage of this bill to be registered in accordance with the terms of the bill, and a permanent record of such registrations to be kept.

4. Provides that any marriage between a white person and a person of either of the other races mentioned in section 2 shall be unlawful and void.

5. Provides that it shall be unlawful for an officer to issue license for any marriage prohibited by this act, and for an officer or person to celebrate or solemnize any marriage prohibited by this act.

6. Provides that no residents of this state whose marriage is prohibited by this act may avoid the provisions of this act by going outside of this state to intermarry and returning to this state to reside.

7. Requires that all applicants for marriage license shall in the application give complete information as to names of parents, race, and place of birth, and no marriage license shall issue until investigation is made by the issuing official.

8. Make it a felony for any person to wilfully and knowingly make a registration certificate or application for marriage license false as to color or race.

Purpose of the Bill.

"When I realize," Mr. Davis points out, "that a white race and a black race living side by side in Egypt completely disappeared by amalgamation and left in their stead an inferior mongrel race, and that the same result has occurred in India, Mexico, the West Indies, Cuba and most of the South American countries, and that not one instance is recorded in the history of the world where a white race and a black race have lived together where there was complete amalgamation and a mongrel race has not resulted; and when I unwillingly consider the alarming distance that has been traveled toward amalgamation by the two races in America, I am convinced beyond any possibility of doubt that we must employ more effective means to prevent amalgamation of the races than have heretofore been employed.

"America is a young nation in comparison with other nations of the world. Our national existence has been so short that we do not yet know whether we are a permanent nation or not; we have no definite or permanent policies, but are in the midst of experimentation. The policies that were established by the founders of the nation as its definite and permanent policies, have nearly all been changed by this and the last generation.

"The United States assumed its place among the nations of the world only 149 years ago, distinguished in many particulars from other governments. Its career was begun as a white nation. The foundation for a permanent home of the white race was laid firmly and solidly by statesmen whose wisdom and foresight has never been surpassed. We of this generation can claim no credit for being white. We had nothing to do with it. The credit belongs to our ancestors who made it possible by erecting barriers against racial amalgamation.

Places Responsibility.

"We have it in our power to preserve and strengthen those barriers, or to permit them to fall into decay. The complexion of the future American will be chargeable solely to us.

"What have we done with our inheritance in a hundred and forty-nine years? We find that in that time we have given away a one-tenth undivided interest in this originally white government to twelve million negroes and mulattoes; we have given away another portion of it to unnumbered millions of Japanese; another portion to Chinese; and other portions to Greeks, Italians, Syrians, Filipinos, Hawaiians, Africans, West Indians, and other races and nationalities. We further find that today the black has the same legal right to breed with the white as he has with the black under the United States constitution and laws, and that he has the same right to breed with the white as the white has to breed with white, and not only has the right to do it, but is actually doing it every time the sun rises and sets, under the sanction of the law in twenty states in the union, which comprises nearly half the territory of the entire country. The twenty states which permit free intermarriage between whites and blacks are, as listed in 'American Marriage Laws,' Russell Sage Foundation, New York, 1919: Connecticut, District of Columbia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

"Illegal racial amalgamation is going on in Georgia at an alarming rate. There are many Georgia-born mulattoes whose complexion is as white as any Caucasian, and who may pass for white whenever and wherever they choose to do so. This question must be considered while something may yet be done about it. The western and Pacific states did not realize the menace of Japanese immigration until the situation had reached an almost uncontrollable state. By heroic measures and almost at the risk of precipitating war, they checked future immigration; but they still have on their hands the millions who came before they woke up. How much better it would have been if they had taken the same action 50 years earlier.

"The Georgia law draws a weak line between white and colored by classing mulattoes who possess one-eighth or more negro blood as colored, leaving those who possess less than one-eighth negro blood classed as white. This is woefully inadequate. When we enact a law which classes all mulattoes as colored who have any trace of negro blood in their veins (as I hope we will do this year), and when we have taken every legal precaution possible in this state, we will still be in almost as perilous a position with reference to amalgamation as we are now. Migration from one state to another is unrestricted and a citizen of one state is guaranteed the same rights and privileges in another state as the citizen of that other state.

"With transportation facilities convenient, as they are, rapid and in the reach of all, the mulatto or black Georgia negro who is displeased with Georgia laws can go in one day to a state where he may marry a white and rear a family of mulattoes; and the legally born near-white mulatto who has been bred up so close to the white line that the negro characteristics are not apparent, may leave his northern home and reach Georgia in one day where he, being unknown, may palm himself off as white and marry into the white race here.

"With transportation as easy and rapid as it is today, for all practical purposes, the boundary line of Georgia is the boundary line of every state. Development of transportation has brought them to our very door. With nearly one-half of this country committed to a policy of racial amalgamation, which is an indisputable fact, and with the great number of negroes going to and coming from that 'promised land,' which is another indisputable fact, what does the future hold for us if we maintain an indifferent, lethargic attitude? If the problem is ever to be faced, and the situation corrected, it must be done now before irreparable damage is done, and before matters reach a stage where we will be helpless and our belated efforts futile.

Appeal Is Broadcast.

"Other states have recognized the danger, and have taken and are taking action to combat it. Virginia has enacted a strong racial integrity law and has printed and circulated throughout other states in the union over sixty thousand copies of a booklet appealing to other states to preserve racial integrity in so far as it can be done by law and pointing out the danger of racial amalgamation. This booklet is issued and distributed by the bureau of vital statistics, state board of health, Richmond, Va., and every person interested should write to Dr. W. A. Pleckner, state registrar, at that address for a copy of it. I quote the following from this booklet:

"'In the lifetime of some now living we may expect the present 12,000,000 colored population to increase to 20,000,000 or possibly 30,000,000, and perhaps to 100,000,000 during the next century, to say nothing of the prolific Mongolians who are already firmly established upon our western coast.'

"I quote the following from another portion of this booklet:

"'Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, in eugenics in race and state, volume 2, 1923, quotes Professor A. E. Jenks, of the University of Minnesota, who, with an assistant, made a study of the racial intermixture by marriage in St. Paul-Minneapolis. Professor Jenks, describing a club, says: "This club is known as the 'Manassas Club" and has about 200 members in the twin cities, its only rule for eligibility being that the negro seeking admission have a white wife."

"'The only objection raised to this horrible situation,' says Professor Jenks, 'is raised by the black women, whose chief objection is that such marriages deprive a black girl of the opportunity of marrying a worthy black man.'

Virginians Leads Fight.

"Honorable John Powell, an eminent statesman of Richmond, the father of the Virignia racial integrity bill, has consented to address the Georgia legislature on this subject at the beginning of the session, and it will be well worth the time of every advocate of racial purity to hear this address. In his letter of acceptance Mr. Powell says:

"'It is a great encouragement to learn of the probability that your general assembly will shortly enact a racial integrity law. I shall deem it a privilege to be of any assistance possible to you in the matter; especially, as the idea embodied in our Virginia law first occurred to me in Atlanta during the course of a conversation with a former governor of Georgia.'

"Viewed from an ethnological standpoint, we have in America one of the most debasing spectacles imaginable. We have whites breeding legally and illegally with negroes, Chinamen, Japanese, Greeks, Italians, West Indians, Syrians, Cubans, Mexicans and every other known race or color. If the white race survives in America, it will be only though the mercy of God, and not through our own efforts, if the past is any indication of what the future will be. This situation is encouraged by a reasonless, artificial, idiotic sentimentality which clasps its hands unctuously and says: 'Throw down the bars. We are the melting pot of the world!' The country would be benefited if advocates of this maudlin doctrine could be put in an actual melting pot which is in good working order with the fire hot.

"One thing is certain, and that is that a solution of the problem cannot be accomplished by the people of any one state. However, each state can do much to maintain the racial purity of those within it's borders.

"Dangers" Are Outlined.

"The greatest present danger to the people of Georgia is the danger of unwittingly permitting a near white mulatto to marry into our families. This is a misfortune which can befall the high as well as the low, the rich as well as the poor. The social standing and wealth of the Rhinelander family did not prevent their son marrying a near-white mulatto woman. To use an example nearer home, I personally know of one secret order lodge in the city of Atlanta which recently initiated two near-white mulattoes, believing them to be whites men, and accepted them as members for quite a while until through accident it was discovered that they were mulattoes. They passed as white men socially, in business and in every other way. Any man who is accepted as a member of a lodge will, as a general rule, be accepted in the homes of members of that lodge.

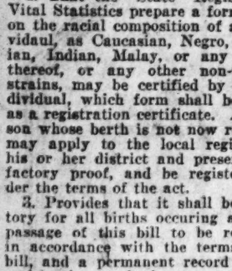

"The danger from this kind of deception will increase as the number of near-white mulattoes increases. This can be very effectively guarded against by enacting a law which will be introduced at the next session of the legislature providing that no person can be classed as white who has any quantity of negro blood in his veins, and providing more fully for the registration of births, and the keeping of a permanent record of the same, and providing for full and complete information as to place of birth, color and antecedents to be given by each couple who apply for marriage license, and requiring such application for marriage license to be investigated before the license is issued. This will enable the official issuing the marriage license to check the information given in the application against the information given in the birth report, and prevent any proposed marriage between a white and a mulatto who looks white. It will keep all mulattoes and their descendants out of the white class forever; the permanent record of their antecedents will prevent their ever graduating from the colored to the white class.

"How we may handle the problem of near-white mulattoes born in other states and migrating to this state is a problem yet to be solved, and one that cannot be solved without the co-operation of other states."

MAY TO TOUR EUROPE ON INSPECTION TRIP

Joseph May, president of May's laundry, sailed recently for Europe to make an intensive study of the latest improvements in the process used in large French dry cleaning plants on the continent, it was announced He will visit French, German and Belgian plants during his tour.

JOSEPH MAY,
President of May's Laundry Co.

During his absence, expansion of the local plant is being pushed to the limit by officials, it was stated. As the first move in this direction, 20,000 additional square feet of floor space has been added to the plant and a quantity of new equipment purchased.

An interesting feature in the process of expansion was the acquisition of the largest tank south of Philadelphia. This leviathan steel water tank required two flat cars to bring it to Atlanta. It is now installed on the roof of the plant and is utilized for the storage of hot water.

The progressive officials of May's laundry are placing emphasis upon the craftsmanship of their operatives. In their French dry cleaning process they are following closely the methods developed by French experts.

NEW MANSION SITE PLAN CONSIDERED BY COMMITTEES

A new plan for acquisition of a governor's mansion by the state was under consideration on Saturday by members of the special legislative committee appointed to make recommendations on this subject to the incoming legislature.

It has been suggested that the state should purchase a site adjacent the capitol grounds, if such can be secured at a reasonable figure, and build a mansion for its governors with executive offices in conjunction. This, it is pointed out, would leave the present executive offices in the capitol for other uses and relieve congestion in office space that now exists.

The committee has investigated many residential property sites which have been offered but most of the prices are "too high," in the opinion of members of the committee. The state already rents properties on the Mitchell street side of Capitol square for use of the state health department and the state military department, and it is suggested that a suitable site for a governor's mansion, as suggested, also could be secured.

F. E. Maffett To Enter Race for Alderman From Eighth Ward

Fletcher E. Maffett, prominent Atlanta business man, and head of the F. E. Maffett Automobile company, Saturday announced that he plans to re-enter politics by becoming a candidate for alderman from the eighth ward in the city democratic primary September 23.

Mr. Maffett formerly served as councilman from the tenth ward, but did not become a candidate to succeed himself, and has taken no active part in politics since.

He will be opposed by Alderman Claude E. Buchanan, who has already announced that he will run for re-election.

DESPONDENT WOMAN TAKES HER OWN LIFE

Miami, Fla., June 20.—Mrs. Maude Wilkinson, 30, business manager of the Studio Advertising agency here, shot and killed herself early today, just after achieving new successes in her business. Despondency over the loss of her only child is said to have prompted the act.

Two hours before her death she brought advertising copy into a newspaper office and spoke of the bright future for her business. Police found newly bought furnishings and a trunk containing a baby's rattle in her room.

THOMASVILLE TO OPEN ARCHBOLD HOSPITAL

Thomasville, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—All arrangements have been perfected for the opening and dedication of the John D. Archbold Memorial hospital here on Tuesday, June 30. The exercises will take place at 11 o'clock in the morning and will be held on the grounds of the hospital.

The program will be short and immediately afterward the hospital will be thrown open for inspection by visitors. The woman's board will have charge of the arrangements for informing visitors of the special points of interest in the building. Many visitors are expected for the occasion and a number of the doctors from the town in this section are to be present.

This hospital is presented by John F. Archbold to the people of Thomasville as a memorial to his father, the late John D. Archbold, of New York, and is a gift of which any city should be proud.

Atlanta as Resort For Tourists Urged By Hotel Manager

Atlanta's importance as a summer resort is being brought forcibly to the attention of tourists in the southeast, according to Harry Zobel, manager of the Hotel Robert Fulton, who stated Saturday that the Baron-Wilson hotel chain is urging visitors to enjoy the delightful climate here through the summer months.

Mr. Zobel says that the Baron-Wilson chain, with hotels in Charlotte, Birmingham, Montgomery and Augusta, is circularizing numbers of residents of these cities in an effort to have them stop in Atlanta. Various means of advertising are being used.

Mr. Zobel states that business so far this spring has been unusually good in Atlanta for his hotel. Traveling men registering at the Robert Fulton report increasing business activity throughout the southeast, and a large number of state legislators are expected with their families at the Fulton for the summer session.

LADD'S CONDITION DECLARED SERIOUS

Washington, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Senator Ladd, of North Dakota, under treatment in a Baltimore hospital for neuritis and rheumatism, has developed kidney trouble and his condition is considered serious.

Douglas H. McArthur, the senator's secretary, said today that the senator had started for North Dakota in his automobile two weeks ago, but was forced to turn back upon reaching Cleveland because of rheumatic conditions. He went directly to Baltimore, where for the third time in recent months he was subjected to a thorough physical examination, with the result that he was advised to have some teeth extracted.

Yesterday his kidneys ceased to function properly. They yielded to some extent to treatment, but the attending physicians believe that until a more marked improvement is shown his condition must be considered serious.

CONGRESSMAN HILL HITS LEGION MEN FOR "DRY" STAND

Baltimore, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Representative John Philip Hill, of Maryland, in comment today anent the withdrawal yesterday of an invitation to deliver the chief address before the annual convention of the American Legion, department of Nebraska, because of his expressed desire to speak against prohibition, charged today that "the Nebraska branch of the American Legion must be dominated by the Anti-Saloon league."

"Apparently the legion in Nebraska does not believe in states' rights, the principles for which I stand," he said. "They objected to me talking about the Dawes plan to throttle the senate and other attempts to do away with the constitution for which we fought."

ATLANTES TO HEAR DEFENSE TEST PLANS

Colonel D. E. Haskell, of the Fourth Army Corps headquarters, will be principal speaker at the luncheon of the Atlantes club Tuesday at noon at the Henry Grady hotel. Colonel Haskell will speak on Defense Test Day.

In addition to Colonel Haskell's talk, there will be several "stunts" by members of the club and the usual attendance prize.

JAMES STREET CRASH VICTIM SUES CITY

Paul Q. Roberston Saturday entered suit against the city of Atlanta for $15,000 damages alleged to have been sustained by him when his machine is said to have fallen into a deep ditch on James street on the night of January 17.

According to the petition, Robertson and a company of friends were driving a machine on James street between Spring and Cone streets, when the ground opened up just in front of them and their machine dived into a culvert about 15 feet deep.

Robertson claims he was injured severely, his head, neck, shoulders, back, hips and lower limbs suffering greatly in the fall.

He is represented by Attorneys Reuben R. and Lowry Arnold and Herman B. Evins.

Tax Reform To Center Legislative Interest

FIRST BIENNIAL SESSION TO OPEN NEXT WEDNESDAY

Echoes of Recent Highway Department Investigation May Provoke Row in Assembly.

NEEDS OF SCHOOLS WILL BE STRESSED

Ennis Slated To Be Senate President, With W. Cecil Neill Seen as Speaker of House.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Georgia's lawmakers, 258 strong, will arrive in Atlanta this week for the convening of the 1925 session of the legislature on Wednesday morning. Of this number, 207 are members of the lower house and 51 are state senators.

There is a new county represented this year, Peach county, with J. E. Davidson, of Fort Valley, as representative. Peach county is in the 23rd district, together with Crawford, Houston, and Taylor and is represented in the senate by Senator Milton B. Carr, of Gaillard.

Primary interest Wednesday of course will center on the election of officers for the sessions. It is generally conceded that Senator Howard Ennis, of Milledgeville, representing the 20th district, will be president of the senate. Senator H. P. De La Perriere, of Hoschton and the 33rd district, and Senator James Dixon, of Jenkins, will be candidates, for president pro tem.

Major Devereaux F. McClatchey, who has served for a greater continuous term than any official in either house, is expected to again be secretary of the senate. It wouldn't be a legitimate session without "Maje" in his usual place.

Neill Again Favored.

In the house it is generally believed that W. Cecil Neill, from Muscogee county again will be speaker. Speaker Neill presided in a manner highly satisfactory to a majority of the last house and he is reported as favored again for the place.

Representative J. Herman Milner, of Dodge county, has announced for the speakership. Just how much strength he will develop is problematical. In the last session Mr. Milner held the important place of vice chairman of the rules committee, a post which in the closing days of the session becomes of vital importance, as the rules committee resolves into an acting steering committee. However, it is not believed by those best informed that Mr. Milner can defeat Speaker Neill for the presiding officer's place.

Richard B. Russell, Jr., of Barrow county, is a candidate to succeed himself as speaker pro tem and it is believed that there will be at least one or two other candidates for the same place.

And, to the complete the roster of leading officials, E. Bismarck Moore again will act as clerk of the house.

The legislature meets this year for the first 60-day session in its history. Hitherto, regular sessions have been limited to 50 days but passage and ratification of the biennial sessions constitutional amendment last year inaugurates the biennial 60-day term instead of the annual 150-day term of the past.

There will be no regular session in 1926, the next meeting after the present one being scheduled for the last Wednesday in June, 1927.

Outstanding among the problems which face the incoming legislators are those of highway construction and tax reform.

Highway Probe Echo.

The highway program is complicated by a situation within the state highway board which undoubtedly will call for heated debate if it reaches the floor of either house. John N. Holder, chairman of the state highway department and recently victorious in a legal battle with members of the board, resulting from the effort of Governor Clifford Walker to revoke his commission, already has stated that he will not give his approval to two items of expense approved by the other members of the board during his absence as presiding officer, pending settlement of the legal battle.

One of these items is the bill for $7,000 paid to C. R. Dawson & Co., a firm of private auditors employed by Governor Walker to make an audit of highway department books. This auditing concern rendered a preliminary report in March which consisted, however, merely of affidavits of highway department officials and records of a few pay checks issued

FISHING BURGLAR 'CATCHES' TROUSERS AND $16 IN CASH

Mount Vernon, N. Y., June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—A burglar who fished for his loot, early today "caught" a pair of trousers and $16 in cash belonging to Frank Trincenelli. The thief first removed a screen from the bedroom window, and using a fishing pole and line, lifted the clothing from a chair and then fished the money wallet from the burden. He left his fish line and pole behind him.

'PRINCE OF PILSEN' PRESENTS GALAXY OF OPERA STARS

Second Opera in Summer Series To Be Augmented This Week by Special Numbers.

Following on the slippered heels of the kimono-clad and colorful Gilbert and Sullivan opera, "The Mikado," the Atlanta Light Opera association Monday night will start its second week of the season at the auditorium with a production of that hilarious and intriguing veteran of light opera repertoire, "The Prince of Pilsen."

Grandeur of setting, continuity of theme, tuneful music and splendid comedy enough for two shows characterize this renowned production. It loses nothing in comparison with "The Mikado," which so captivated audiences during the closing week, although the latter holds a place almost unattainable in comic music.

Sings New Composition.

An addition to the entertainment to be provided in the light opera, "The Prince of Pilsen," will be offered by Paul Eisler, musical director, and Miss Charlotte Ryan, Metropolitan opera prima donna. Miss Ryan, who will have one of the leading soprano roles in the opera, will sing a recent composition of Mr. Eisler's, "The Swinging Song," an appealing bit of music, at each performance of "The Prince of Pilsen." Mr. Eisler has dedicated his new song to the Atlanta Municipal Light Opera association.

The music of the opera, "The Prince of Pilsen," is by the famed Gustav Luders, composer of nearly a score of the most popular musical works of the present generation. The book is by Frank Pixley and abounds in clever lines, as laugh-provoking as those of "The Mikado." The plot has more of substance than "The Mikado," with the three principal love themes

ADMIRAL ROBISON ASKS RETIREMENT

Failure To Receive Promotion, Due to Testimony in Teapot Dome Case, Is Believed Cause.

Washington, June 20.—As a sequel to the Teapot Dome affair, Rear Admiral J. K. Robison, chief of the navy bureau of engineering, who approved leases giving naval reserve oil to Doheny and Sinclair, has asked to be retired from service.

Just a few days ago, the list of officers recommended for promotion was sent to the white house by the navy department, but Robison's name was missing, although he had been recommended the year before. President Coolidge refused to approve that recommendation, pending outcome of the oil lease suits in which Robison's name figured. At the white house, Friday, it was said he could not expect promotion until the suits were finally settled. A few hours later he asked to be retired.

He holds the regular rank of captain, but has temporary status of rear admiral as chief of the engineering bureau. Under the retirement law, he could retire with the rank and pay of rear admiral.

Robison was grilled by Senator Walsh during the Teapot Dome investigation in the senate, but insisted that he regarded the leases as good business and a necessary move for national defense. He acted as representative of Secretary of the Navy Denby in the negotiations and assisted in framing their provisions. Denby signed the leases, but was unable to give a clear explanation of them when asked for it.

'RED' LITERATURE SEIZED BY FRENCH IN DEPUTY'S ROOM

Parliament To Be Asked To Cancel Immunity That Solon May Be Prosecuted in Court.

Paris, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Military dispatches from the Moroccan front have been seized in one of the first raids of the cleanup of communists in France. The communist deputy, Doriot, in whose apartment they were discovered, has been summoned before an examining magistrate, and his friends are protesting that his parliamentary immunity has been violated.

These dispatches were among a number dealing with the Moroccan operations and were exchanged between French officers along the line. They were found in the search of rooms rented by Doriot's sister-in-law, but also occupied by him. This was one of many searches of the homes and offices of communists throughout the country. Numerous arrests were made, most of them on the charge of distributing or posting seditious circulars.

Residents Are Excited.

At various places the residents are in a state of excitement, as at Carhaix, where handbills inciting to mutiny were posted even on the monuments to the war dead. At Macon, Albi and Lyons, the headquarters of the reds, printing offices were raided and scores of judicial investigations have been opened.

M. Doriot, who has often been mentioned as the man marked by Moscow to command the revolutionary forces on the predicted "night," and Deputy Marty, the Black Sea mutineer, are spoken of as those whose parliamentary immunity Premier Painleve will ask the chamber to cancel so that they can be prosecuted.

Dragnet Is Organized.

The police and the government's "safety" forces are declared to be organizing a general dragnet to sweep out the mass of foreign agitators. The authorities have been exchanging information with British who, likewise, are alarmed at the growing danger of bolshevism, and plans are being considered to establish a sort of safety barrier around the diplomatic corps to keep out the seditious elements, once they are thrown out.

Meetings are not to be prohibited nor the reds annoyed, if they want to sing "The Internationale," but troublesome parades that usually end in riots and the public rendition of Moscow's Hymn of Hate will be stopped. The people declare they intend to force the law and strictly prevent the public preaching of sedition and the placarding of defeatist sentiment.

2 OFFICERS SLAIN, THIRD IS WOUNDED IN IDENTITY MIX-UP

Federal and State Agents in West Virginia Mistake Each Other for Moonshiners.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Huntington, W. Va., June 20.—Two prohibition officers were killed and a third probably fatally wounded in a gun battle along Camp Creek in Cabell county early today between two groups of officers, who mistook each other for moonshiners.

William F. Porter, chief federal prohibition officer in the Huntington district, was killed instantly, and George Ball, chief of the state prohibition officers, died a few hours later in a hospital here. W. H. Workman, another state officer, is not expected to recover.

F. J. Poe, state officer, was arrested and committed to the county jail on a homicide charge in connection with Porter's death.

Homer Joy, a federal officer, said he was sleeping on a hill overlooking the scene of the suspected still when he heard shooting. He flashed his light and recognized Ball in the state forces, yelled to the men to stop shooting, but he could not be heard above the din.

Porter had thrown F. J. Poe, a state officer, to the ground and was grappling with him, Joy said. Porter was believed to have recognized Poe and started to let him up, thinking Poe had also recognized him. Then, Joy said, Poe fired and Porter fell. Joy covered Poe with his gun and ordered him to disarm before Poe realized that he had been fighting fellow officers.

A party of young women returning from a hay ride came upon Workman and Porter lying by the roadside on the Wayne road and brought them to Huntington. Porter was dead and Workman was shot through the head and shoulder. He was taken to the Huntington hospital in a serious condition.

TAX AID TO POOR URGED BY HARRIS

Georgia Senator Favors Exemption of Incomes of Less Than $5,000 of Married Men.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, June 20.—Reduction of income taxes to the limit the treasury surplus will permit, was advocated today by Senator Harris, of Georgia, who issued a statement declaring that married people whose income does not exceed $5,000 should be exempt from such taxes. He also would exempt those whose taxable income is not more than $500, since, he said, it cost the government more to collect than it received from such taxes.

"Two million people of moderate means now pay income taxes ranging from a few cents to $7.50, while the average cost to the government in collecting such taxes," he stated, "is about $6 for each taxpayer. If these people were excused from paying taxes and rendering returns the large expensive force at work on income tax returns in the treasury could be greatly reduced and many millions saved."

There is a propaganda on all over the country, he asserted, to greatly reduce the tax on wealth and "thus prevent further relief to those who must eke out a living for their families," he said. The effect of the propaganda, he declared, "would be to saddle the huge war debt upon the soldiers who did the fighting for our country, since they constitute a large percentage of our taxpayers with small incomes."

Declaring that he favored reducing

KIWANIANS OFF FOR CONVETION

Delegates From Many Georgia Cities in Party, Which Is on Way to St. Paul.

Approximately 150 Georgia delegates to the international convention of Kiwanis clubs in St. Paul, Minn., Monday through Thursday, left Atlanta Saturday morning with District Governor W. W. Munday, of Cedartown, at the head of the party. Accompanying the Atlanta delegation and the delegations from 47 other Georgia clubs were a number of Floridians.

High enthusiasm marked the departure for St. Paul.

The terminal station assumed a festive atmosphere as the Atlanta delegation welcomed Kiwanians from over Georgia and from Florida and the entire party embarked on the special Kiwanis train for the convention city.

Large numbers of friends and relatives of Atlanta Kiwanians were at the station to bid the delegation "au revoir." Miss Eleanor Corish, of Savannah, came to Atlanta with the Savannah delegation, but is the guest of the Atlanta club on the trip, having been given the trip when she appeared recently at the local club's meeting.

Georgia peaches in large quantities will be distributed to convention guests by the Georgia delegation and for this purpose the special train had attached to it a solid carload of the luscious fruit.

The Atlanta delegation is composed of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Jones, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sneed, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Adams, Russell Bridges, John Q. DuPree, Fred C. Mason, Judge Will Gunn, B. Dixon Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Callaway, Roy Wallace, Simon Selig, Alex Rosenfeld, Elmo Green, Arthur Kitchens, Walter Barnwell and Miss Corish.

GEORGIANS ARRIVE IN CHATTANOOGA.

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 20.—(Special) — The "Georgia Special" Kiwanis train augmented by a car or two of Floridians and a car of Georgia peaches reached here tonight on time, with everybody happy. One hundred and fifty persons comprise the party, all but one or two of more than 50 clubs in Georgia being represented.

UNKNOWN SOLDIER WILL BE HONORED BY GERMAN SHRINE

Cologne, Germany, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—At the close of a fervid speech today as part of the celebration in commemoration of Germany's possession of the Rhineland for 1,000 years, Burgomaster Adenauer announced that Germany soon would have an unknown soldier shrine. He said the unknown soldier would be buried in the Cologne cathedral, the tomb to serve as a German national war memorial.

LA FOLLETTE DEATH ADDS MORE POWER TO SENATOR BORAH

Idaho Solon Now Most Powerful Figure in Politics With Exception of President Coolidge.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Washington, June 20.—Once more, by the death of Senator La Follette, fate has played into the hands of Senator Borah, of Idaho. He is the most powerful figure in national politics now, aside from President Coolidge.

Although Borah always has been a forcefull figure, his power and prestige have grown rapidly within the last year, beginning when Coolidge called him to the white house during the Cleveland convention and asked him to become the republican vice presidential candidate.

The next big gain of power came with the election, when as was pointed out at the time, the balance of power in the senate had shifted from La Follette to the milder progressive ground held by Borah. Then came the death of Senator Lodge, which elevated Borah to the chairmanship of the mighty foreign relations committee, with its tremendous power over the foreign affairs of the nation, even though the direct control is exercised by the president.

Now death removes the Wisconsin progressive leader and leaves Borah standing alone as the only progressive of national stature. It is not that La Follette's mantle falls on Borah's shoulders, for Borah agreed with La Follette on many questions, but differed from him on many equally vital ones. It is because there is no one else around whom the progressives can rally. And Borah's gain is not so much from the number he will draw from La Follette's following, for many regard him as too conservative, but it is because there is no other progressive left in the picture.

Political conditions will have to un-

COOLIDGE STARTS VACATION TUESDAY

Removal to Summer White House Has Begun; President Plans Several Important Parleys.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

Washington, June 20.—Removal to the summer white house at Swampscott, Mass., began Saturday when the Mayflower sailed from here with the white house staff of servants and the two white house dogs. They will have the ice box stocked and some breakfast beefsteaks on hand when the president arrives by train Wednesday morning.

The president remains here Monday night to address the semi-annual budget meeting. Tuesday afternoon he and Mrs. Coolidge, with a secretarial staff, will board the train which will place them in Salem early Wednesday morning within short motoring distance of Swampscott.

He is taking Secretary Sanders along to preside over the temporary executive offices to be established at Lynn, Mass. Coolidge expects to stay well behind the hedges of white court seeing only those whom Sanders passes out to him.

The president has, it is understood, informally asked a number of political leaders and other influential persons to call on him during his stay at Swampscott. These conferences will be leisurely, informal, and will have more of a social than an official atmosphere, but nevertheless they will be important conversations, for out of

FIRST OFFENDERS WILL BE PLACED IN REFORMATORY

Army Cantonment Now Is Being Sought for Site of New Prison for Men Under Thirty.

WILL BACK HAGER IN BRIBE TRIALS

Seeks More Industries for Atlanta Institution; Rumor Visit Here Is To Quiz Remus.

Revolutionary steps in the federal penal system, designed to save first offenders from the contamination of contact with hardened offenders, were outlined here Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general, with especial charge over prisons, who is in Atlanta on a short official trip.

Under this plan a reformatory will be established in the near future at a site not yet selected, in which will be confined first offenders under 30 years old. By removing men in this class from federal prisons in Atlanta and Leavenworth, the present congestion will be greatly lessened.

Will Not Attend Trials.

When seen at the federal prison Saturday, Mrs. Willebrandt stated that she would not be able to remain in Atlanta for the trials of Father Thomas P. Hayden, former chaplain, and L. J. Fletcher, former assistant warden, charged with accepting bribes from prisoners, which are set for June 24, but added that her department is giving every assistance in its power to District Attorney Clint W. Hager. Late Saturday afternoon she held a conference with Mr. Hager, at which, it is understood, this mattter was discussed.

Mrs. Willebrandt, who is paying her first visit to Atlanta in two years' time, arrived in Atlanta late Friday afternoon and spent Saturday inspecting conditions at the prison, in order to be able to speak from first-hand knowledge when she appears before the budget committee, which meets within the next eight weeks, to discuss needs of the Atlanta institution. She is stopping at the home of Warden John Snook.

It was reported that Mrs. Willebrandt came to Atlanta especially for the purpose of questioning a number of prisoners here, but she declined to be interviewed on this phase of her work.

Reformatory Discussed.

The reformatory plan is regarded by Mrs. Willebrandt as one of the most important steps facing the prison authorities at this time. It will give first offenders a chance to reform, and at the same time will relieve the congestion in institutions at Atlanta and Leavenworth. At present there are 3,229 men at the local prison.

It is now planned to take over one of the large cantonments, used during the war, and devote it to establishment of a prison camp. A committee has been named to conduct this work and a number of sites already have been inspected, among them one in Arkansas and another at Chillecothe, Ohio.

As soon as a camp site is selected the war department will be asked to turn it over to the prisons department. The secretary of war and the attorney general are two members of the committee.

Up to date no appropriation has been made by congress, but Mrs. Willebrandt does not believe that it will be necessary to wait for that action. There are temporary buildings already erected in the cantonments, and these could be used, if necessary, for housing the men, and she believes arrangements could be made for transfer of funds from the institutions which would be relieved by the decrease in the number of men to be cared for. In this way the prison population could be divided, and the situation relieved, pending action by congress on requests for direct appropriations.

The reformatory prisoners are to be instructed in farming under direction of expert agriculturists, and other occupations will be provided.

Industries Needed.

"Additional industries at the prisons are badly needed, Mrs. Willebrandt said. "We want to give each prisoner a wholesome employment, and to do that we must provide a job for them. Several new industries are under consideration for the Atlanta prison, but nothing has been done definitely."

Federal prisons, taxes and the legal end of prohibition enforcement are under direction of Mrs. Willebrandt, and it was rumored she came to Atlanta to interview George Remus, famous Cincinnati "bootleg king," and other noted bootleggers now serving sentences at the Atlanta prison. She declined to discuss this matter.

She stated that the new plan for prohibition enforcement in the United

Electricity Turns Mercury Into Small Bits of Gold

:: JAPANESE SHOWS PROOF OF CLAIMS ::

New York, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Atoms of mercury subjected to terrific electrical storms have been broken up into particles of gold by Dr. H. Nagaoka, of Tokio, who left today on the Olympic to attend the International Research Congress at Brussels.

As proof of his claim, Dr. Nagaoka produced bits of porcelain containing microscopic specks of gold. The porcelain once was part of the flasks in which the experiments were performed.

To get into the heart of the quick silver atoms, Dr. Nagaoka explained, he had to shake off surrounding electrons by an electric current of such high voltage that it in the air it threw a spark of 48 inches. Near the positive electrode in the porcelain flasks, he said, the voltage was magnified 1,400 times. Exhaustive tests convinced him that the gold deposits were produced by no other cause than deterioration of the mercury atom.

Dr. Nagaoka said he did not know whether gold could be manufactured in commercially paying quantities, the market value of all gold produced in his experiments being but a fraction of a cent. He doubted reports that Dr. A. Miethe, of Berlin, had obtained gold from quick silver because the electric current used appeared to be too small.

He believed that the white metal residue which remained with gold might be tin and that it could be transmuted by a similar electrical process into silver.

Mountain Counties Plan To Open Fine Highway July 4 With Celebration

Barbecue Is Staged for Neel's Gap, in Blue Ridge Section, 3,103 Feet Above Sea Level.

Blairsville, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—The several county chairman in charge of plans for the Fourth of July celebration of the Nacoochee-Hiawassee Road and Recreation association, met today in Union county, near Neel Gap on the mountain divide, as the guests of the executive committee of the association. Detail plans were agreed upon for the great Independence day occasion, when the Murphy-Cleveland link in the Appalachian Scenic highway through Union county will be officially opened.

Careful investigations were made on the ground for the selection of the site for the mammoth barbecue, arrangements were made for automobile parking space, special committees were appointed to complete the plans and program for the Road and Recreation association's annual meeting on July 3 and 4.

"Every precaution will be taken for the safe handling of the big throng of visitors expected, and the multitude on the mountain will have more than 'five loaves and two fishes' to sustain them," stated Secretary Bonnell H. Stone, following the committee meeting.

The Georgia counties represented in the association are Hall, White, Lumpkin, Union, Gilmer Fannin and Towns, together with the counties of Cherokee and Clay in North Carolina, are Herbert Tabor, H. A. Jarrard, and the chairmen for these counties R. M. Breedlove, B. B. Fite, J. W. Weaver, A. J. Nitzschke, W. O. Sparks, Mercer Fain and O. L. Anderson. The executive committee is composed of Charles W. White, president; Bonnell H. Stone, secretary; Mrs. P. Davidson, O. L. Anderson and G. W. Franks.

Picturesque Site.

The site selected for the Fourth of July celebration is about one mile north of Neel GGap, above the Bridal Veil falls, where the highway swings around through a mountain cove, and encircles a natural amphitheater, and then across the face of a rock cliff bringing into view one of the most beautiful scenes in America with Brasstown Bald, the highest mountain in Georgia, on the distant sky line.

The parking committee is in charge of Dr. J. A. Sharp, president of Young Harris college, chairman, and the Gainesville Boy Scouts will aid this committee. The barbecue committee, with B. B. Fite and Professor W. P. Lunsford, of Blairsville, co-chairmen, was given charge of concessions and the purchase of meats, etc. The construction committee has T. L. Jarrard, Blairsville, as chairman. The safety committee is composed of Sheriff Ed. Jones, Blairsville; Sheriff B. A. Rogers, Gainesville; Sheriff W. A. Jackson, Cleveland; Sheriff Wm. Housley, Dahlonega, and Sheriff J. R. Gregory, Hiawassee.

The program committee is composed of Bonnell H. Stone, Blairsville. The publicity committee has J. P. Davidson, Cleveland, chairman. The service committee is composed of Mrs. John Moore, Dahlonega; Mrs. Herbert Tabor, Gainesville; Mrs. C. C. Jarrard, Cleveland; Mrs. J. M. Berrong, Hiawassee; Mrs. J. A. Sharp, Young Harris; Mrs. B. H. Stone, Mrs. B. B. Fite, Mrs. T. L. Jarrard, Mrs. W. H. Stroud, Mrs. T. S. Candler, Mrs. C. J. Welborn, Blairsville.

Large Committee Named.

The reception committee, with Herbert Tabor of Gainesville as chairman, is the largest committee appointed. Mr. Tabor announces that all citizens of the several counties covered by this association are members of his committee.

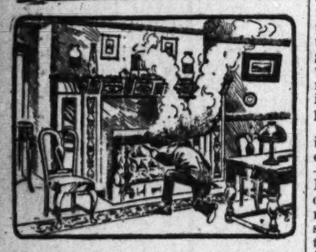

Each county chairman will arrange details for the basket dinners to be supplied from his county, and a great variety of good things to eat will supplement the barbecue meats. The program of speakers will be announced later by Chairman Stone, and following the morning session in Cleveland, automobile rides through the famous Nacoochee and Hiawassee valleys are scheduled for the afternoon of July 3. The program will begin on the Blue Ridge mountain divide, in Union county, promptly at 1 o'clock, Central time, on July 4, following which the barbecue dinner will be served promptly at 1 o'clock.

The governor and secretary of the state of Georgia; officials of the United States bureau of public roads, and the United States forest service, and a number of prominent citizens have been invited to take part on the program of this two-day meeting, and the members of the general assembly have been invited as special guests as announced by Secretary Stone.

61 Miles Long.

The occasion is to celebrate the completion of the mountain highway extending from Gainesville to Cleveland, Blairsville and thence across the North Carolina line to Murphy. The Georgia highway is built, 34 miles of water-bound macadam and 27 miles top-soiled, which gives a highway through the mountains of north Georgia 61 miles long, built under supervision of the state highway department at a cost of $1,127,000, including bridges, an average cost of $18,000 per mile.

At Neel's Gap, where the barbecue is to be held July 4, the highest point of any highway in the state is reached —3,103 feet above sea level. The Blue Ridge mountain at this point divides approximately 400 square miles of Georgia territory from the south side of the mountain or from the state, south, this section lying adjacent to North Carolina.

GOVERNMENT READY FOR PEN GRAFT TRIAL

The government is ready with its case in the prosecution of Father Thomas F. Hayden, former Catholic chaplain at the federal prison and L. J. Fletcher, former deputy warden, who will be placed on trial Wednesday in the United States district court here on charges of entering into a conspiracy to accept bribes from wealthy prisoners for special privileges it was announced Saturday by Clint W. Hager, United States district attorney.

Fletcher and Hayden were jointly indicted on the bribery charges at the May session of the grand jury. More than a dozen wealthy prisoners at the federal penitentiary were summoned before the grand jury in the investigation. Among those who testified were Willie Haar, Savannah; George Remus, Cincinnati; Mannie Kessler and M. Sweetwood, wealthy bootleggers serving sentences.

District Attorney Hager held a conference Saturday with Franklin L. Dodge, department of justice agent, who directed the investigation of the bribery charges.

Fletcher is in Atlanta and it was learned that plans are being worked out by his attorneys for his defense. When tried on similar charges last fall Fletcher was acquitted.

Sales Take Jump In Garden Hills, Manager Asserts

L. J. Boggs, salesmanager for Garden Hills, P. C. McDuffie owner, states that sales have been good and that prospects for business is unusually encouraging. In his sales organization he has J. H. Baker, M. J. Lynch, R. J. Rambo, E. W. Newman and R. W. Eubank, all of whom have had considerable experience in real estate work and are well known in the city. One of a number of sales reported by the above company is to W. E. Gathright, manager of Western Electric company, Atlanta branch. Mr. Gathright will erect a beautiful Spanish type residence, carrying all the modern improvements and conveniences designed to make the ideal American home. Mr. Gathright has been in Atlanta some time and is a very enthusiastic booster for Georgia and the south.

Paving has been completed over the entire entrance plaza to Garden Hills, and also over a greater part of the entire property. This work will be completed in the next week or ten days, it is stated.

The many handsome homes now under construction are rapidly rounding into shape and many of them will be completed the early part of July, possibly sooner. Haverty Furniture company have made plans to beautify the lawns of some of these homes with artistic settings of lawn furniture, pergolas and rustic seats. There is no section of Atlanta that is faster becoming a real residential community than the north side along Peachtree road and Andrews drive, and Garden Hills with its wonderful landscape gardening, its beautiful winding drives and home-like atmosphere, bids fair to be the very essence of a wonderful home section. Many of Atlanta's leading architects are planning some wonderful homes in Garden Hills, five of which are being erected by the McDuffie company.

CHILDREN'S CODE GROUP WILL MEET FRIDAY, JUNE 26

A meeting of the Georgia Children's code commission has been called for June 26 at the state capitol and which time final changes in the code will be made before it is presented to the legislature for consideration.

The commission has continually asked for criticisms and suggestions and urges that any suggested changes be sent in before this meeting to the commission at 249 Ivy street.

The Georgia children's code commission was created by the legislature of 1922 to study and revise the laws of the state affecting children. The children's code is its first report to the legislature. Other phases of children laws will be studied and revised later.

The commission is composed of Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, chairman, representing state department of public welfare; Dr. W. L. Funkhouser, Atlanta, secretary, representing state department of health; George H. Carswell, Irwinton, representing state senate; Mrs. Viola Ross Napier, Macon, representing house of representatives; Judge R. Eve, Tifton, representing superior courts; Mrs. E. R. Hines, Milledgeville, representing State Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Albert Foster, Madison, representing State League of Women Voters; J. C. Logan, Atlanta, representing State Council of Social Agencies; Emmett Quinn, Atlanta, representing State Federation of Labor; J. W. Simmons, Atlanta, representing state department of education; Burr Blackburn, executive secretary.

FAIR WEATHER TO CONTINUE SAYS VON HERRMANN

Fair weather will continue today, with moderate temperatures ranging from 68 to 89 degrees, according to C. F. von Herrmann local United States meteorologist.

There is no indication of rain in the immediate future, clear blue skies Saturday being the forerunner of fine weather, Mr. von Herrmann said.

Gentle, cooling breezes from the northeast bore the breath of the Atlantic into Atlanta Saturday and prevented a temperature of 90 at noon from being felt too greatly by the man on the street. The morning minimum was 70.

Fair weather is indicated the first half of the week and probably local thundershowers the latter half, with temperatures above normal most of the week. This is the outlook for the new week for the South Atlantic and East Gulf states.

Mr. von Herrmann will leave Monday for Washington to consult with officials of the weather bureau with a view to increasing the distribution of weather information in Georgia and in the interest of agriculture in the state, he said.

PRESBYTERIAN MEET CLOSES AT SPRINGS

Jackson, Ga., June 20.—(Special.) The Young People's conference of the Presbyterian Synod of Georgia, after being in session since June 11, closed a successful meeting at Indian Springs Thursday night. There was an attendance of about 300, including many of the prominent leaders of the Presbyterian church in Georgia and the south.

The boys and girls, coming from the best homes in the state, made a fine impression and efforts are now being made to bring the conference back to Indian Springs in 1926 and to make that the permanent meeting place.

New Office of Standard Oil Company Is Model and Up-to-Date Structure

New office building of Standard Oil company on Marietta street, and inset of R. E. Hodgson, district manager in the Atlanta office.

The most recent addition to Atlanta's many new and beautiful buildings is the new home of the Standard Oil company, at 746 Marietta street.

This handsome structure was designed by W. E. Glossop, of Louisville, Ky., architectural engineer of the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky, and was built by the Flagler company of Atlanta.

Constructed of face brick, terra cotta and marble, it is not only an imposing and beautiful edifice, but it was designed and built to supply every facility and convenience in the way of light, air and comfort to the 128 employees who handle the work of the Atlanta office.

The Atlanta office is the district office of the north and central Georgia territory, and has under its direction 180 stations where Standard Oil products are supplied.

The first Standard Oil company office was established in Atlanta 35 years ago, with one or two employees. The business has grown to such an extent that this new building was necessary to handle the volume.

The new building is located adjoining the warehouses and storage tanks, where the Standard Oil company has had its office for the past 35 years. The old office building will probably be dismantled to give more warehouse room.

The affairs of this district are handled by R. E. Hodgson, district manager, with offices at Atlanta.

State Aid Is Asked For Georgia Exhibit At Dixie Exposition

J. Ralston Cargill, president and executive secretary of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, conferred with Governor Clifford Walker Saturday in reference to obtaining an appropriation from the legislature for the Georgia exhibit in the Dixie exposition to be held next September in New York.

Plans are well under way for the Georgia exhibit, according to Mr. Cargill, who asserts that every effort will be made to make Georgia's showing better than that of last year. The display of last year was good but fragmentary, Mr. Cargill asserts in an appeal to the municipality to give the project its support.

Atlanta Burns Club To Fete Anniversary Of Charter Signing

The Atlanta Burns club will celebrate the 710th anniversary of the signing of the Magna Charta in 1215 by King John at Runnymede with exercises at the Burns cottage this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

The invocation will be given by S. R. Belk and Chief Justice R. B. Russell, of the state supreme court, will deliver the anniversary address. Major General Douglas MacArthur has also been invited to speak before the members of the society.

Mr. Hodgson came to the Atlanta office 15 years ago and has now been connected with the Standard Oil company for 26 years. Under his capable management the business of the company in this territory has more than doubled in the past five years.

OVERLAND CONDUCTING BIG USED-CAR SALE

Of special interest to automobile buyers of Atlanta and vicinity is the mammoth used car sale of the Willys-Overland company at their show rooms, 414 Peachtree street.

According to Mr. Cohen, used car manager, this is the finest and most complete line of Willys-Knight automobiles ever offered the public in any locality.

Most of these high-grade automobiles were used by employees of the Willys-Overland company and only through a change in the demonstrating policies of the company are they able to offer such a complete assortment of practically new cars.

The old law of "supply and demand," according to Mr. Cohen, should make this sale a banner one, as the Willys-Overland company is the only concern in Atlanta that has a used Willys-Knight to offer the buying public.

An added feature of this sale is the working model of the Willys-Knight motor, showing its special features, and the public is cordially invited, whether they are in the market or not.

$15,000 IN DAMAGES ASKED BY McDEVITT

Suit for $15,000 damages was filed Saturday in Fulton superior court by Eugene McDevitt, 15, against the Atlanta Baggage and Cab company.

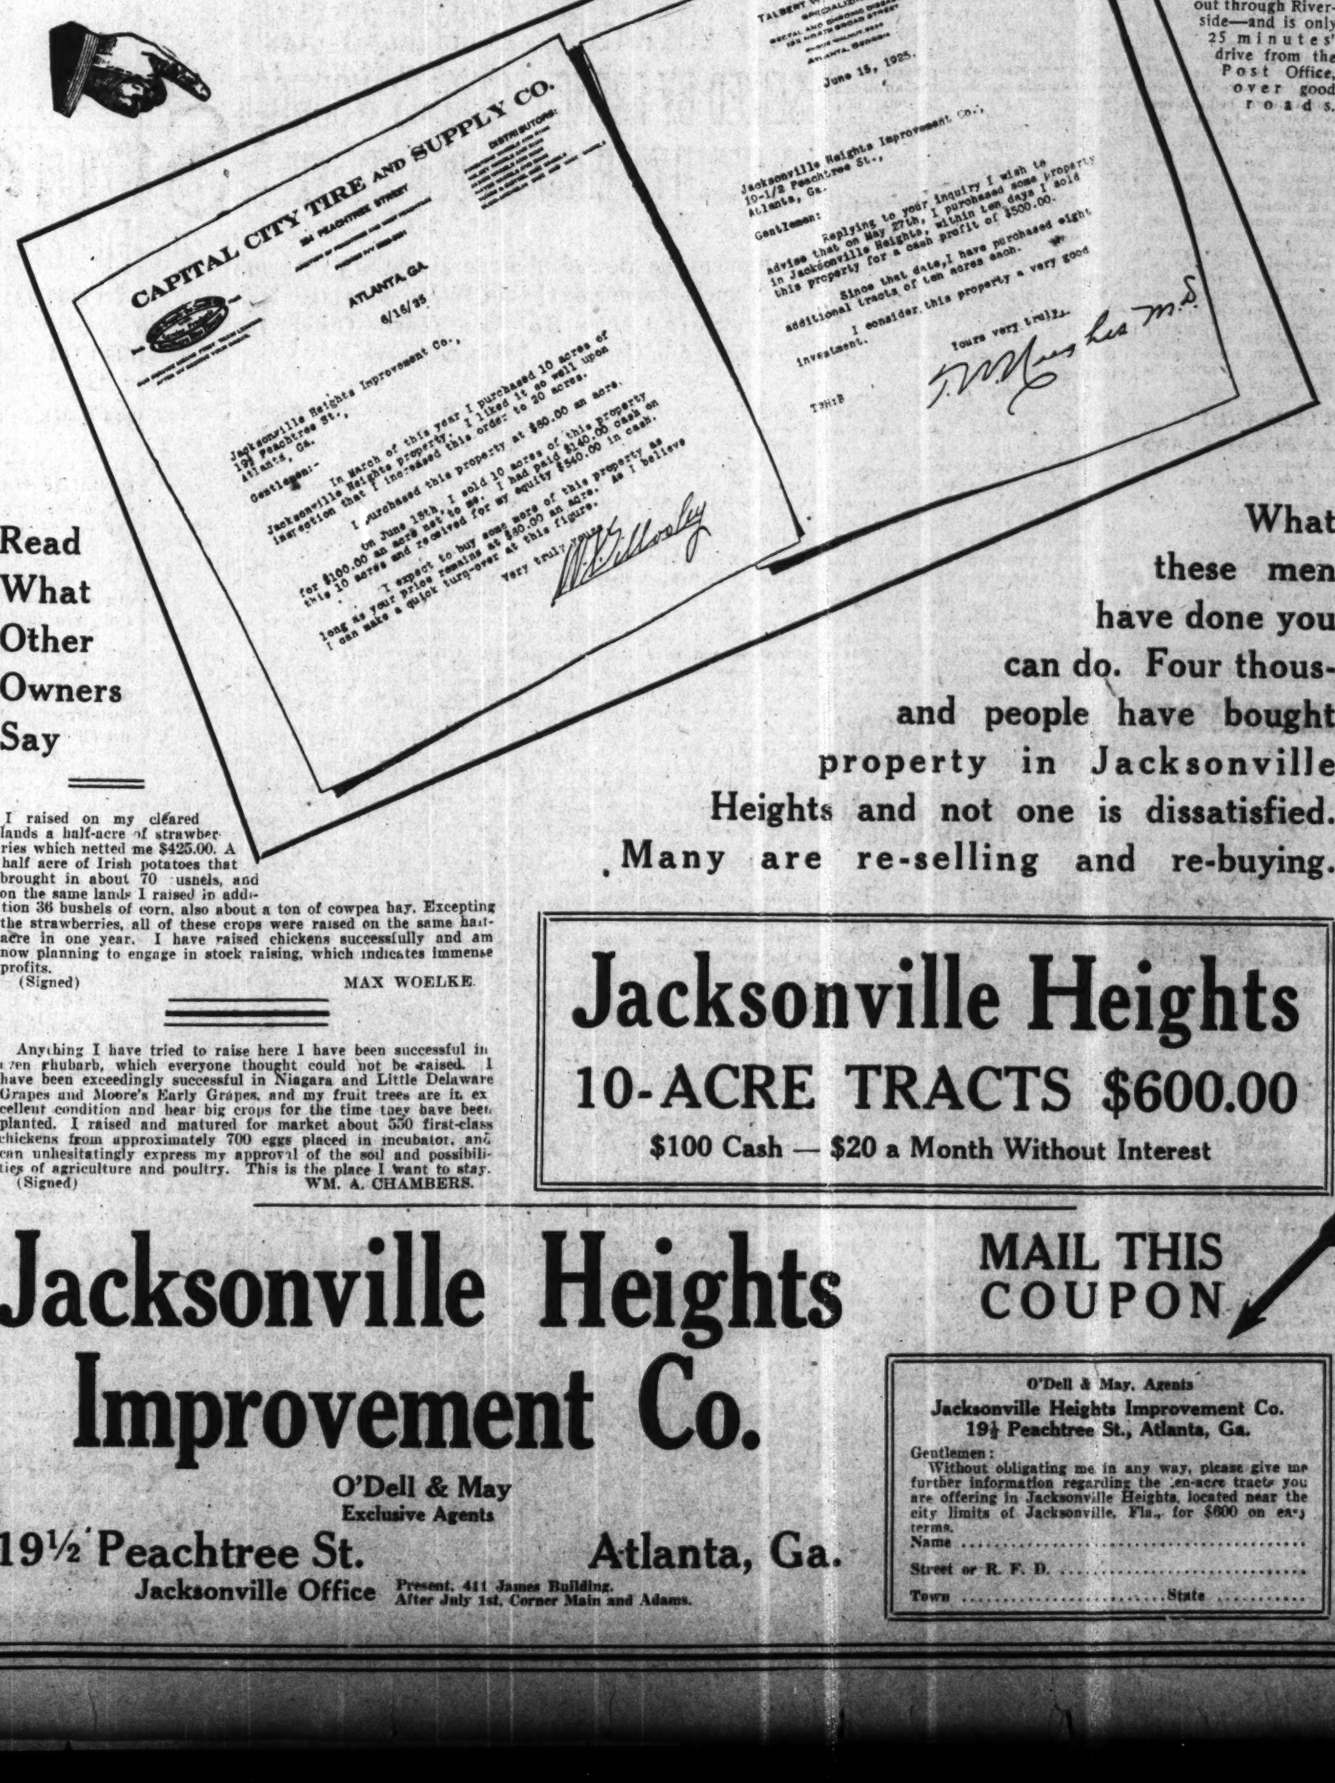

He alleged that he was struck down and badly injured by an automobile owned and operated by the cab company on May 25, while riding on his bicycle on Ivy street.

J. A. McDevitt, father of the youth, also sued for $5,000 for loss of services of his son during his illness.

Jacksonville Heights 10-Acre Tracts

Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen:

In March of this year I purchased 10 acres of Jacksonville Heights property. I liked it so well upon inspection that I increased this order to 20 acres.

I purchased this property at $60.00 an acre.

On June 15th I sold 10 acres of this property for $100.00 an acre net to me. I had paid $140.00 cash on this 10 acres and received for my equity $540.00 in cash.

I expect to buy some more of this property as long as your price remains at $60.00 an acre. As I believe I can make a quick turn-over at this figure.

Very truly yours,

Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen:

Replying to your inquiry I wish to advise that on May 27th, I purchased some property in Jacksonville Heights, within ten days I sold this property for a cash profit of $500.00.

Since that date, I have purchased eight additional tracts of ten acres each.

I consider this property a very good investment.

Yours very truly,

T. W. Hughes M.D.

OPPORTUNITY Knocks Today

Acreage tracts in the very shadow of Florida's Biggest City offer safe investment with tremendous enhancement possibilities. The property lies right in the path of the city's residential development—out through Riverside—and is only 25 minutes' drive from the Post Office, over good roads.

Read What Other Owners Say

I raised on my cleared lands a half-acre of strawberries which netted me $425.00. A half acre of Irish potatoes that brought in about 70 bushels, and on the same lands I raised in addition 36 bushels of corn, also about a ton of cowpea hay. Excepting the strawberries, all of these crops were raised on the same half-acre in one year. I have raised chickens successfully and am now planning to engage in stock raising, which indicates immense profits.

(Signed) MAX WOELKE.

Anything I have tried to raise here I have been successful in even rhubarb, which everyone thought could not be raised. I have been exceedingly successful in Niagara and Little Delaware Grapes and Moore's Early Grapes, and my fruit trees are in excellent condition and bear big crops for the time they have been planted. I raised and matured for market about 550 first-class chickens from approximately 700 eggs placed in incubator, and can unhesitatingly express my approval of the soil and possibilities of agriculture and poultry. This is the place I want to stay.

(Signed) WM. A. CHAMBERS.

What these men have done you can do. Four thousand people have bought property in Jacksonville Heights and not one is dissatisfied. Many are re-selling and re-buying.

Scandal Taint Refudiated In Teapot Case by Court, Fall Says in Statement

Edward L. Doheny Also Is Pleased by Ruling Which Gives Sinclair Valuable Lease.

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Teapot Dome, which for three years has been a storm center of national politics, was left today in the legal possession of Harry F. Sinclair, oil magnate.

Decision, rendered in the government's lease annulment suit here yesterday by Federal Judge T. Blake Kennedy, smothered every charge of scandal, collusion and fraud in connection with the leasing of the dome under a 25,000-word ruling. The government announced it would appeal the case.

The ruling of Judge Kennedy was interpreted by former Secretary of the Interior Albert E. Fall, with Sinclair a leading figure in the oil leasing investigation, as refuting all taint of scandal, a statement to the Associated Press indicated.

Doheny Is Pleased.

Through a spokesman, Edward L. Doheny, like Sinclair, a prominent oil magnate whose leasing of naval oil reserves, also has been subjected to court investigation also, expressed gratification.

Judge Kennedy held that the act of June 4, 1920, enabled the secretary of the navy to handle the naval oil reserves as he saw fit and without any assistance from congress. He absolved Rear Admiral J. K. Robison, chief of navy engineering; E. C. Finney, former assistant secretary of the interior; H. Foster Bain and A. W. Ambrose, of the federal bureau of mines, and former Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt "from any incriminating fault as to fraudulent motive" in their connection with negotiating the lease.

The decision declared that the loan of $25,000 made by Sinclair to Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, in June, 1923, was a suspicious circumstance, but it could not be judicially stamped as fraud because of the willingness of Sinclair and his attorney to explain to a senate investigating committee that it was made to the former interior secretary to enable him to go to Russia with Sinclair in connection with the latter's oil operations.

Congress Deprived Itself.

Judge Kennedy struck from the record all evidence relating to the bank accounts of Fall and declared that the evidence did not prove there was a connection between Fall, Sinclair and the Continental Trading company of Toronto that had any bearing on allegations of the government in the annulment suit. The government charged that the trading company, besides being used for a huge oil resale project, was the agency by which Sinclair passed $230,500 in Liberty bonds to Fall.

Congress deprived itself of the privilege of participating in any direction of the manner in which the navy secretary was to handle the naval oil reserves, because it omitted a comma from a phrase of the act of June 4, 1920, Judge Kennedy ruled. The phrase referred to directed the navy secretary to "conserve, develop, use and operate the same (naval oil reserves) in his discretion." The omission of a comma after the word "same," Judge Kennedy decided, preventing any construction being placed on the phrase that would enable congress to partcipate in directing the manner in which the law was to be administered. He ruled that when the navy secretary was directed to "conserve, develop, use and operate the same in his discretion" the omission of the comma made it plain that the intent of congress was to allow unrestricted handling of the reserve by the navy secretary. The insertion of a comma after the word "same" would have divided the phrase and would have made it optional with the secretary the manner of developing the leases, Judge Kennedy held. This, he declared, would have given congress the privilege of dictating the manner of administration.

MRS. WILLEBRANDT TELLS PENAL PLANS

States is the most logical and should be much more effective than the old way.

The new system provides for the cooperation of coast guards, the department of customs and federal agents, who are known as the internal department. This organization is under the direction of Lincoln C. Andrews.

"My trip to Atlanta has nothing to do with the alleged sale of postmasters' jobs in Georgia. In fact I am just here looking after the interests of the government and feel that I can't talk about it," she said. "I am intensely interested in the work of Warden Snook, and find affairs at the prison in excellent condition.

Get Man Higher Up.

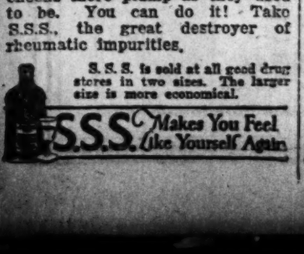

"My idea about prohibition enforcement is to get the man higher up. We have concentrated too much on the 'little man.' That's not the way to break up the violation of the liquor laws. We are planning to find the 'big guns' in the future, and when we get several of them, it will do more than getting hundreds of the smaller men."

Mrs. Willebrandt will spend today inspecting the prison, and will return to Washington this afternoon or Monday. She is accompanied by her secretary, Mrs. Margaret Smith.

Mrs. Willebrandt was born in Kansas, educated in Kansas City, and was married in Michigan. She went to Arizona with her invalid husband shortly after, and was admitted to the bar there. She practiced in Los Angeles, and about four years ago was appointed assistant attorney general by the late President Warren Harding.

Her record has been one of brilliant success and she is regarded as one of the foremost legal authorities in the employ of the government.

Rheumatism

"Yes! it's all gone."

DO NOT close your eyes and think that health, free motion and strength are gone from you forever! It is not so. You can get rid of your rheumatism by building up your blood power. It is a fact that rheumatism means "blood poverty." It is a fact with the increase of red cells in your blood, impurities are destroyed. It is a fact that S.S.S. will help Nature build these red-blood-cells! S.S.S. is one of the most powerful blood cleansers in existence. Its results in thousands of rheumatic cases have been nothing short of amazing! The medicinal ingredients of S.S.S. are purely vegetable. This is very important to remember! What can be more inspiring, more wonderful than to see the shackles of pain released from your struggling body, swellings, lingering pains, stiffness of joints and muscles all disappear; your stomach made strong; your face pink with the old sweetheart glow, your blood enriched and your cheeks more plump as they used to be. You can do it! Take S.S.S., the great destroyer of rheumatic impurities.

S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

ATLANTA POLICE SEEKING ESCAPED NEGRO CONVICT

Atlanta police Saturday night were requested to be on the lookout for Rufus Hicks, escaped negro convict from the Muscogee county chaingang, who is charged with the murder of H. J. Walker, a county convict guard. Hicks is believed to have boarded an A. B. & A. and headed for Atlanta.

Acting Assistant Chief C. P. Connally detailed a special squad of plainclothesmen to assist county police in patrolling the city freight yards.

Hicks with three other convicts escaped from the county chaingang, after he is said to have crushed the head of Guard Walker with a rock. Archie Jamerson, one of the escaped quartet was killed when a posse surrounded the convicts Friday afternoon.

METHODIST COLLEGES REPORTED PROSPERING

Colleges and academies in the North and South Georgia conferences of the Methodist church are in splendid financial condition, undergoing a continuous process of expansion, according to the report filed by the committee on Christian education of the North Atlanta conference at the annual conference held Thursday and Friday at the Inman Park Methodist church.

The report made especial reference to the program launched recently by Emory university to raise $10,000,000 in 10 years. Several other schools were mentioned as making drives for additional building and endowment funds, all of which drives were meeting with enthusiastic response.

Reference also was made in the report to leadership of the North Atlanta conference in the Christian education movement. Of the total of $193,747 subscribed by the district to the move in 1921, $104,025.46 has been paid, it was stated.

NEXT TO COOLIDGE IN POLITICAL POWER

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH

LA FOLLETTE DEATH ADDS POWER TO BORAH

dergo profound changes before Borah ever will think of leaving the republican party. It is practically out of the question. He refused to quit it for Roosevelt or La Follette, and his position within the republican party is so great now that he can exercise more influence inside than he ever could from without.

Available as Candidate.

In fact, Borah is becoming one of the most available men in the party for the presidential nomination, next to Coolidge. If within the next three years there should be a swing of the pendulum, ever so slight, away from the present conservative mood. Borah instantly would become a most likely figure.

That is—and you always have to tie so many strings to any statement about politics—that is, provided enough political insiders got behind him to give him the organized push that any candidate must have to get over the first hurdle. Borah has been a more solitary figure in politics than La Follette. La Follette had found that the only way to beat a bad political machine was to build one of his own, and he constructed one in Wisconsin that has been running for a quarter of a century

Built His Own Machine.

When he came to the senate, he gradually built up his own little group—it never was large, but he made it count for the most. He was always planning and organizing and maneuvering. His career was of the highest integrity, but he was a politician of the old school as regards methods, though not as regards ethics, and it was because he was a consummate master of the technique that old Boies Penrose liked him so well. That hulking old reactionary would shove his extra-sized chair over toward the little La Follette and they would swap confidences with great enjoyment. La Follette was the only progressive that Penrose credited with having real political ability.

Borah is different. He doesn't "play politics." He sits in his office and studies a question that interests him and then goes to the senate floor and, by sheer mastery of facts and argument, wins his point—or at least makes it. When he wins a fight, it is by sheer intellectual and forensic supremacy, not by wire-pulling or by rounding up his gang. He has no machine in Idaho and, in fact, is at odds with his state political crowd most of the time, but is always re-elected, because the state is proud of him and the politicians have to fall into line.

Has No Organization.

So Borah has no organization and an organization is vitally necessary toward getting a presidential movement under way. In the first place, money is required. Borah lives on his senate salary and could not finance any campaign activity.

La Follette's death is a severe blow to the progressive movement as an independent organization. There is no one else who can hold the various elements together. But, on the other hand, it releases a number of them to Borah and swells his following to that extent.

MRS. LUCK'S FUNERAL WILL BE HELD HERE

News was received in Atlanta Saturday afternoon of the death of Mrs. Tom J. Luck, of Wrightsville, who died at the residence in that city Saturday morning. The body will be brought to East Point this morning and will remain at the chapel of A. C. Hemperley pending completion of funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Luck is survived by two sons, W. B. Luck, of College Park, and J. M. Luck, of Wrightsville; two daughters, Mrs. G. M. Hamperley, of East Point, and Mrs. T. F. Bullard, of Wrightsville, and a brother, J. M. Cook, of Red Oak, Ga.

The annual picnic of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company's local office staff was held Friday afternoon at Pinecrest, two miles beyond Austell.

Swimming races, bathing beauty contest, pie eating contests and other events were followed by a dance. Music was furnished by the Pinecrest orchestra.

Many of the members of the force and their families and friends attended the picnic, more than 200 being present. Dinner was furnished through a canteen maintained by the company for the day. The trip was made by motor.

TWO BURGLARIES AND HOLD-UP CASE PROBED BY POLICE

Richard Perry, negro, of 74 Randolph street, was held up late Saturday night near his home by three young, unidentified negroes, and robbed of $13 in cash. He furnished detectives with a detailed description of the bandits. Two of them had pistols, he said.

Mrs. H. E. Reynolds, of 517 Courtland street, reported the theft of a diamond ring from her home earlier in the night.

Miss Helen Franklin, of a local hotel, reported the loss of a string of pearls and two dresses. She stated they were taken from her room during her absence Saturday night.

WIRELESS PHONES ENABLE TWO CARS TO COMMUNICATE

Berlin, June 20.—Telephone communication by wireless between two speeding automobiles has succeeded, for the first time, in Germany. After months of experiments, the feat was achieved in Bavaria today. Wireless sets on two motor cars, traveling at a fair rate of speed, were tuned in and occupants of the cars conversed without difficulty.

ILLINOIS SHRINERS LAY CORNERSTONE OF CHILD HOSPITAL

Chicago, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Illinois Shriners today laid the cornerstone of the Chicago Home for Destitute Crippled Children, the eighth of a national chain of such institutions established by the fraternity in American cities. The building cost $750,000 and will accommodate 500 children.

With the Chicago building, the national chain has facilities for caring for 2,000 children.

Plans are being made to place the cornerstone of the ninth structure in Philadelphia, next week.

Lucy Cobb Institute At Athens Installs Journalism Course

Athens, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—Journalism will be taught at Lucy Cobb institute here next year for the first time in its history, Professor John E. Drewry of the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism of the University of Georgia having been employed as lecturer on journalism, according to an announcement by Miss Mildred Rutherford, director of the Lucy Cobb school.

The new course in journalism will be designed to intelligently inform students of newspapers and magazines, and also to teach them the fundamental principles of writing for the press and periodicals. Emphasis will be laid upon news writing, feature articles, the interview, short stories, and magazine articles.

Professor Drewry has written "Some Magazines and Magazine Makers," a book on journalism, and also has written pamphlets and magazine articles on the same subject.

TEXTILE MEN TO MEET IN GEORGIA IN 1926

Asheville, N. C., June 20.—Electing O. D. Grimes, of Athens, Ga., president for the ensuing year and selecting Columbus, Ga., as the place for the 1926 meeting, members of the Southern Textile association brought their annual convention to a close here today.

W. H. Gibbson, of Mooresville, N. C., was named vice president. Other officers chosen were: F. Gordon Cobb, of Lancaster, S. C., secretary and treasurer; L. B. Gilbert, Raleigh, N. C., chairman of the board of governors.

Four new members of the board elected were: Frank K. Petrie, Columbus, Ga.; Carl R. Harris, Inman, S. C.; W. W. Arnold, Manchester, Ga., and J. C. Edwards, Monroe, S. C.

The convention, which opened yesterday, was attended by about 350 textile mill superintendents from southern states.

TEMPERATURE OF 98 RECORDED AT MACON

Macon, Ga., June 20.—A temperature of 98 degrees, the hottest of the year, was recorded at the local weather bureau at 6 o'clock tonight.

'Atlanta Night' Is Planned For 'The Prince of Pilsen'

Atlantans are expected to jam the auditorium Wednesday night in celebration of "Atlanta night" which will be in connection with "The Prince of Pilsen," the second week's attraction of the light opera season.

A section already has been set aside for city officials and Alderman J. L. McLendon, chairman of the auditorium convention of city council, has asked the press to issue an invitation to the mayor, all members of council and their wives to attend as guests of the Atlanta Light Opera company.

Advance sales for the entire week have been brisk, but announcement of "Atlanta night" Wednesday is expected to see the largest crowd of the season.

In addition to hearing the opera, the city fathers will be given an opportunity to inspect first hand the recently installed cooling system, which already has proven highly successful.

In further celebrating "Atlanta night" directors of the opera have decided to add another verse to the song, "The American Girl," or "The Song of the Cities," which comes early in the second act of the Prince of Pilsen.

The story has several verses, each dealing with some large American city, and the additional one will praise the beauty and extoll the virtues of "Miss Atlanta."

ACCEPT RESIGNATIONS OF ITALIAN DEPUTIES

Rome, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—The chamber of deputies today accepted the resignations of Deputies Nobili and Benassi, which were presented because of the adoption of a measure yesterday, giving the government limited authority to discharge civil servants holding political opinions contrary to those of the administration in power.

Both deputies were members of the fascist party, but strongly opposed the legislation.

2 STORES ARE ADDED TO HAVERTY CHAIN

Two new stores have been added to the J. J. Haverty Furniture company chain, it was announced Saturday. One was opened last Monday in New Orleans, La., under management of Brooks J. Covey. The other will open about the middle of August in Montgomery, Ala., under management of R. L. Heath, assisted by W. F. Thorpe.

The two new additions bring the total number of stores in the chain to 11. Atlanta has two of them, along with the general offices, while one is located in each of the following cities: Birmingham, Ala.; Memphis, Tenn.; Houston, Texas; Dallas, Texas; Charleston, S. C.; Columbia, S. C.; Savannah, Ga.; New Orleans, La., and Montgomery, Ala.

The volume of business done by the Haverty company chain, during 1924, amounted to $5,000,000 and, with the two added stores, the total is expected to run over $6,000,000 annually, it was stated. The company was organized in 1885 in Atlanta by J. J. Haverty. He started with a capital of $600, locating his small establishment on Hunter street, between Whitehall and Pryor streets.

RITES IN SAVANNAH FOR BISHOP KEILEY

Savannah, Ga., June 20.—The funeral of Right Rev. Benjamin J. Keiley, retired bishop of the Roman Catholic church, took place from the cathedral of St. John the Baptist this morning.

The procession, headed by the active and honorary pallbearers, left the bishop's residence shortly before 10:30 o'clock. It included the visiting clergy, cross bearers and acolytes, the fourth degree of Knights of Columbus, who formed the guard of honor; the altar boys, the bishop of Virginia and South Carolina, the officers of the mass and the third degree Knights of Columbus.

Special seats were reserved in front for the Franciscan sisters of St. Francis, the sisters of mercy of St. Vincents, the sisters of St. Mary's orphans' home and of St. Joseph's hospital, little sisters of the poor and for the honorary and active pallbearers.

The sermon was preached by Rev. Father Eugene, O. S. B., pastor of the Sacred Heart church. He paid a very high tribute to the dead prelate. The interment was in the Catholic cemetery.

BOY SCOUTS CAMP AT LAKE ROBERTS

Ball Ground Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—Twenty-five Boy Scouts of the Dixie division have arrived at Lake Roberts, near here, and have pitched camp, and have begun the daily routine of exercises. The forenoons will be devoted to work and study and the afternoons to recreation, such as boating, swimming and games.

The Scouts will be here several weeks.

LARGE SUM IS RAISED BY JAY-CEE BARBECUE

Favored with ideal weather conditions in the form of clear blue skies and temperature just hot enough to be enjoyable, the barbecue and outing of the Junior Chamber of Commerce Saturday afternoon at Avondale Estates proved a great success.

Featured by diving and swimming exhibitions under the direction of M. M. "Scrappy" O'Sullivan, and by diving exhibitions by Miss Virginia Ashe, champion woman swimmer of the south, the program was a very interesting and entertaining one.

Johnny Meintzer's orchestra kept the air jazzy with "red hot" selections of the very latest hits, and the food hunger of the hosts and guests was satisfied with luscious barbecued meats and all the trimmings that go to make such an occasion a real epicurean delight.

Considerable funds were raised by the barbecue toward sending a large delegation of Jay Cee members to Tulsa, Okla., this week to bring back the 1926 convention of the national Junior Chamber. The ticket sale was very large, the result of plenty of hustle and energy displayed by the members of the junior body.

The program of the outing started early in the afternoon, and lasted until night fell, the setting sun witnessing a happy and satisfied bunch of Atlantans on their way home from Avondale Estates with the memory of a real good time.

Swimming in the clean, cool waters of the Avondale pool was enjoyed by the Jay Cees. The outing was held at the estates through the courtesy of G. F. Willis, owner.

East Point forfeited the baseball game which was scheduled for the afternoon to the Junior Chamber because not enough of the East Point nine showed up for the event.

OPERA MUSICIANS TO GIVE MUSICALE AT BADGETT HOME

Selections by a string quartet will be a feature of the musicale to be given this afternoon by Mr and Mrs. Mays Badgett at their home, 11 Highland View, for members of the Atlanta summer opera orchestra and professional musicians of the city.

An elaborate program of chamber music by Hadyn, Mozart and Schubert will be played by Fritz Schaeffer and Henri Giorgia, violins; Umberto Mezli, cello, and Antoni Lavane, viola.

The instrumental music of Atlanta's six weeks of light opera is being rendered for the most part by the same musicians who came here during the spring as members of the Metropolitan Opera company's orchestra. These musicians have been guests of the Badgett home every Thursday night of grand opera week since that institution was initiated in Atlanta. Sunday afternoon's musicale will be the first of a series of similar events for the summer opera season.

Buy Your Studebaker—Now!

You may buy a Studebaker today—or on any day of the year—with the confident assurance that no act of ours will stigmatize it as a "last year's model"

STUDEBAKER has discontinued the custom of presenting a new line of automobiles each year. Instead of bringing Studebaker cars dramatically up-to-date once in twelve months, we shall keep them up-to-date all of the time—with every improvement made available by our great engineering and manufacturing resources.

Improvements and refinements, of course, will be made from time to time. New features will be added. As in the past, we shall continue to pioneer all vital betterments. But Studebaker will have no yearly models to make your July car obsolete in August.

A dramatic story

There is a dramatic story behind this new Studebaker policy that vitally concerns everyone who expects to buy an automobile this year.

Amazing records of Studebaker performance and endurance prove beyond question that the present line of Studebaker cars is so soundly engineered and manufactured and so satisfactory in the hands of owners that drastic annual changes are not required.

Authentic reports show that hundreds of Studebaker cars have given from 125,000 to 400,000 miles of s[illegible] dependable service. One Studebaker Big Six, [illegible]s a mail car, traveled almost 500,000 miles in 5½ years, giving 24-hour round trip service between Bakersfield and Los Angeles, California.

Stupendous mileage! But the same stamina and rugged dependability is built into every Studebaker that leaves the factory.

A Studebaker taxi in Jewett City, Conn., has traveled 31,008 miles without even having the valves ground or the carbon removed.

In Stockton, Calif., a Studebaker Big Six has piled up 138,000 miles over steep mountain grades and rough country roads with negligible upkeep—not a single major part has been purchased or repaired by reason of wear or accident.

It is a significant fact that wherever travel conditions are most severe, Studebaker by far outsells its normal proportion of cars.

Bus Operators, Rent-a-Car Companies, Police and Fire Departments—all turn to Studebaker year after year for their transportation equipment, because they have found that it always yields scores of thousands of miles of reserve transportation, and has low upkeep costs.

At the mileage when other cars are breaking up—Studebaker cars are breaking in. It's the second and third fifteen thousand miles that prove Studebaker superiority. It's this reserve mileage—even though you may never use it—that greatly increases Studebaker resale value.

Stamina is in-built—inherent—a vital and indispensable part of the Studebaker formula for building fine motor cars.

Buy this "One Profit" car now

Remember—under this new Studebaker policy—there is no need to delay the purchase of your new automobile until annual changes have been made. Come in and see these sturdy, dependable, "one-profit" automobiles. Today Studebaker offers greater values than ever before. It is sound judgment to buy now.

DODGE BROTHERS SET NEW MARK

Total sales of Dodge Brothers motor cars for the first five months of 1925, according to official figures just released, have broken all records for the corresponding months for previous years. Sales in the United States and Canada, from January 1 to June 1, 1925, increased 15.4 per cent and overseas sales increased 48.6 per cent over the same months last year.

"This healthy increase appears even more remarkable," said F. E. Maffett, local Dodge Brothers dealer, "when it is considered that 1924 was the banner year in Dodge Brothers history. The 1924 sales exceeded 1923 sales by over 25 per cent, compared with a loss of 11 per cent sustained over the same period by the industry as whole. This, of course, made their 1924 figures a high mark to equal and a difficult one to surpass in 1925.

"The sound condition of the business is equally apparent in the fact that total sales, week after week, since the first of March have exceeded production. On June 1 there were fewer than 15,000 new Dodge Brothers cars in the hands of dealers in the United States and Canada—less than an average of 5 cars for each dealer. Unfilled orders have exceeded cars on hand for several months.

"The size of new car stocks is remarkably small when it is considered that the number of different types of passenger cars has been virtually doubled by the addition of the special types fitted with disc wheels, bumpers and other extra equipment."

At no time during the early months of 1925, although production was increased from 900 to 1,100 per day, were dealers able to accumulate the stocks they desired in anticipation of spring demands.

Careful analysis which Dodge Brothers have made of market and industrial conditions throughout the country led them to expect their domestic sales throughout the remainder of 1925 to show an increase of approximately 15 per cent over last year, substantially the same as shown during the first five months.

Dodge Brothers' total sales, including United States, Canada and overseas, for 1925, according to the same estimate, will exceed those of 1924 by 20 per cent. They will exceed those of 1923, which was the year of maximum production for the industry as a whole, by 50 per cent.

REO EMPHASIZES HEAT TREATMENT OF METALS

"A trip through the shops of the Reo Motor Car company in Lansing, Mich., reveals the fact that, for Reo at least, the heat treatment of metals is one of the most important phases of motor car manufacture," says John E. Smith, representative of Reo in this city.

"In the metallurgical division of the research laboratories, experts are constantly experimenting in an effort to find additional processes for the successful handling of this most important material in the building of automobiles. Comparable attention to the treatment of the steel being used in actual production is given in the large portion of the main shops devoted to this work.

"For the treatment of all major parts, electric furnaces are used. This type of furnaces makes the greatest accuracy in the regulation of temperatures possible, and produces the best possible results, Reo engineers believe.

"A very careful selection of alloy steels and a correspondingly close attention to their treatment is also included in the manufacture of Reo cars, speed wagons and busses. The alloy steels are selected, of course, because of their particular qualifications to withstand certain kinds of strains, but it is believed that Reo has done an unusually fine job in giving them just the right balance of hardness, toughness and tensile strength.

"This is a phase of manufacture the results of which are not discernible in the new car as it stands on the show room floor. Constant service and laboratory tests reveal the worth of the heat treating processes, and Reo is continually employing both of these methods to check its results."

STAR PLAN INSURES CORRECT LUBRICATION

Correct lubrication and long and satisfactory service bear direct relationship one to the other. Dirty oil, diluted oil, or insufficient oil, causes premature wear of motor bearing surfaces.

A chassis that is not well lubricated and frequently inspected soon develops rattles and play and runs up costly repair bills.

Nearly all electrical failures are caused by loose contacts and may be averted largely by periodical inspection and adjustment before the trouble develops into a serious defect.

The time to tighten and adjust is when the first symptom of play asserts itself, not after the trouble has so developed as to involve expensive labor and parts bills.

The old adage "a stitch in time saves nine," applies with peculiar force to automotive operation. A dollar spent in time for oil and grease; a dollar spent in time for a bearing adjustment, the tightening of a nut or of electrical connections, frequently saves many times nine dollars in repair bills.

Experience has demonstrated that motor oil should be renewed every 500 miles; that the chassis units should be renewed every five hundred miles; that the chassis units should be lubricated at certain definite periods; that wheel bearings, valves, water pump and ignition systems should be examined at certain definite periods and requisite adjustments and corrections made.

The Durant Motor company has developed a system of inspection and service that provides for the lubrication and greasing of an automobile, the adjustment of bearings and of valves, and the tightening of nuts and bolts and electrical connections methodically and systematically, before trouble develops.

This service is based on driving periods of 500 miles, and over a 10,000-mile period costs the owner less than ¼ cent a mile. This is mighty cheap insurance against the troubles and expense incident to loose bearings, loose electrical connections, loose nuts and bolts, improper valve adjustment and inefficient motor or chassis lubrication.

Hupmobile June Shipments Surpass Those of 1924

June shipment of Hupmobiles will surpass the of June, 1924, by from 30 to 40 per cent, and will be larger even than those of June, 1923, O. C. Hutchinson, general sales manager of the Hupp Motor Car corporation, said yesterday. They will exceed those of May, 1925, by at least 500 cars, he added. May shipments were 45 per cent higher than those for the same month last year.

"Demand for the new eight is having considerable to do with our enlarged business," Mr. Hutchinson pointed out. "Since the recent reduction of $180 in the price of each model its sales at retail have already reached rate than their previous record. We approximately a 30 per cent higher expect their sales to grow still more in the next several weeks.

From June 1 to 10, 8-cylinder shipments and orders for shipment totaled more than 1,200 cars, creating another new record for all cars of the eight-in-line type, of which the Hupmobile is the largest seller."

Hupp continues to be in an unusually favorable position. It carried over into June more than $2,000,000 worth of unfilled orders, which were coming in at the highest rate it has ever known at a corresponding time of year. Orders for more than $3,000,000 worth of cars were received during the first ten days of June.

"All Kiwanian Night" Planned at Thomaston For Monday Evening

Thomaston, Ga., June 20.—(Special.—The Thomaston Kiwanis club will celebrate "All Kiwanis Night" next Monday evening in the large luncheon room of Lee Institute. A special program is being arranged for the occasion. The members and their families will participate in the meeting.

Ex-Mayor Hugh Thurston will speak on "The Meaning of 'All Kiwanis Night'." Vice President J. B. Hardy will have charge of the meeting in the absence of the president, who will be at the annual meeting in St. Paul.

The room will have a radio installed to give the convention program at St. Paul. The U. D. C. will serve luncheon.

Studebaker Special Six Coach Ideal Family Car

Better homes which have shied at the idea of a "coach" because that word seemed to entail a thought of cheaper construction, possibly less dignity and less character of a kind commensurate with a better home, are welcoming the new Studebaker Special Six coach. It is called by those who possess it a "coach in name only," because it is on the bigger 65-horsepower chassis of 120-inch wheel base and its construction smacks of the sedan's richness rather than of any lessening of standards. This coach can be seen in the showrooms of the Yarbrough Motor company, local distributors, 210 West Peachtree street.

BRAKES AND BREAKS

BY H. M'COY VAN DEVENDER
Automobile Editor

In May 59 per cent of all cars sold by General Motors were closed cars, compared with 41 per cent in May, 1924, 38 per cent in 1923 and 19 per cent in 1922. The percentages by months for the past three years follow:

	1925	1924	1923	1922
Jan.	47%	42%	34%	29%
Feb.	54	38	35	29
Mar.	60	38	36	25
Apr.	61	42	40	22
May	59	41	38	19
Jun.	..	37	35	26
July	..	37	31	26
Aug.	..	40	30	31
Sep.	..	42	35	37
Oct.	..	52	38	24
Nov.	..	71	42	30
Dec.	..	67	44	39
Pct. for year	..	43	37	28

This comparison includes Chevrolet, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick and Cadillac. As these lines of cars cover practically all price classes, carrying out General Motors' policy to build a car for every purse and purpose, the figures may be taken as representative of the trend of the industry to closed cars.

Electricity plays an important part in the manufacture and operation of automotive transportation.

The durable lustrous enamel finish of automobile fenders and many automotive bodies is a product of the electric furnace, in which the heat is so controlled that the even oven temperature required to develop the highest luster and most durable finish is maintained.

The generator manufactures electrical energy, which is stored in a storage battery.

When this electrical energy is required for illumination, the lighting switch is thrown on and a flood of light illuminates the road.

A gentle pressure on the starting switch releases a flow of electricity that propels the starting motor, whereupon a Bendix drive engages the fly wheel, causes it to revolve, turn over the motor and draw into the combustion chambers charges of gasoline mixture.

An ignition switch releases more electric current to a distributor, where electric sparks are made and relayed, via spark plugs, to the compression chambers of the motor, where gasoline mixtures are exploded that produce the power required for propelling the automobile.

Electricity plays an important part in the manufacture of certain parts used in the construction of the new powerful cars.

Automatically controlled electrical heat treatment for tempering processes of steel eliminates the mistakes of the human factor and insures uniformity of quality in important parts.

Driving the public highways comfortable and care-free, enjoying the beauties of the great outdoors, the automobile owner little realizes his debt to electricity for the beautiful finish and reliable performance of his automobile.

Not only is electricity a vital factor in the manufacture of automotive equipment, but the operation of gasoline propelled automobiles would be physically impossible without electricity.

"My only worry now is, when can I get some more Lincolns!" Those were the words of T. A. Rippey, Atlanta's newest automobile dealer. Mr. Ripley and his associates in the short time they have had the Lincoln franchise here have done what we claim to be wonders, and let us warn the public right here and now, if you want a Lincoln, better order it quick, for he is putting 'em out almost as fast as his well-known dad-in-law-elect makes cakes.

The Ivy street garage, Atlanta's latest, and the world's finest, is certainly solving the parking problem for many of Atlanta's downtown shoppers and workers. Having been open for business slightly over three weeks they are today taking care of over 200 regular customers a day. According to these figures, not including occasional and transient patronage, together with the steady increase they have shown, it won't be long before six more floors will have to be added to their now large building.

Being runner-up for five straight months and realizing an ambition the sixth month is the record of Charles P. Barron, who is connected with the Yarborough Motor company's sales force. This is a record any man should be proud of and just goes to show what sticking to your guns will bring.

Lake Jones, who has just taken the reins as manager for the Star and Durant local branch is inviting all Atlanta to ride in the well-known line he is selling. On the streets every day he has two of his closed models with large signs on them "Ask the driver for a ride." Better be careful, Mr. Jones, us newspaper people might just save some taxi fare. (When my wife sees that last line—she reads my columns every Sunday—she'll say: "You big bluffer; you mean shoe leather not taxi fare.")

Being as is, us hard working folks has to take a few days' rest once in a while, the editor is most pleased to announce that on next Tuesday morning he will catch the "Cannon Ball Special" for parts way out west. Mr. James E. (Jim) Holliday, a well-known young newspaper man in Atlanta, will have full charge of this desk during my absence. It is my wish that he receive the same wholehearted cooperation that you have so graciously given me.

REMARKABLE INCREASE SHOWN BY OLDSMOBILE

Continued increase in retail sales of Oldsmobiles and a general feeling that business conditions are good throughout the greater portion of the country is reported by D. S. Eddins, general sales manager of Olds Motor works. The Oldsmobile factory entered June with advance orders that will assure it full production throughout the month and indications are that July production will be satisfactory.

Sales of Oldsmobiles during May were more than 38 per cent greater than during the same month last year. This is the third consecutive month that Oldsmobile sales have shown a substantial increase over those for the same periods in 1924.

"The northwestern section of the country is showing remarkable prosperity, according to both the reports and orders received by our distributors and dealers in that section," said Mr. Eddins. "This excellent showing is extending practically without a break from the western shore of Lake Michigan to the Pacific coast.

"Other sections of the country which have not shown such remarkable gains as has the northwest are reporting improved conditions, and every indication points to steady, continued prosperity for Oldsmobile.

"Our export business is steadily gaining. During May we shipped nearly 600 Oldsmobiles abroad, and so far this year our exports are larger than they have been at any time in our 28 years of manufacture."

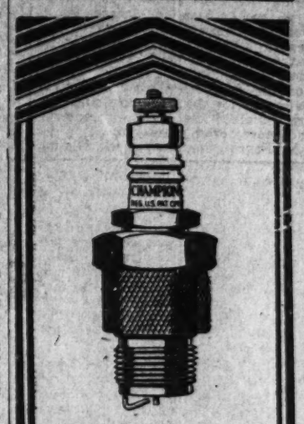

FARMERS OF UPSON TO PLANT VETCH

Thomaston, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—County Demonstrator Woodruff placed an order this week for one car of hairy vetch seed to be planted in the county. It is likely that one or two more cars may be ordered later. The farmers are enthused over this manner of soil building and are ready and anxious to bring Upson county soil up to a high standard.

The cotton crop in the county thus far is the best for many years. Good stands and much work puts the crop ahead of the usual condition at this season. The corn crop is also good.

World's Greatest Buy

Hudson's leadership is the result of ten years' engineering concentration in refining a great car around the famous Super-Six principle. Its patented, exclusive principle added 80% to efficiency, yielding 76 horsepower without added size, weight or cost. Its simplicity has always meant a lower selling price than is permitted in complicated types. No design, however costly, has been found to excel Super-Six smoothness, reliability and performance. Hudson quality has constantly been improved. Easier steering, greater roadability, more comfort, better materials, finer workmanship, handsomer appearance and more lasting finish.

It is the greatest value offered in Hudson's ten years of leadership.

FAVROT VISITS MARMON FACTORY

The automobile industry in France at the present time is in a stationary period and while trade is good there is no such volume of business as is found in America today, said M. Favrot, of the firm of Espanet & Favrot, Marmon dealers in Paris, who is visiting the factory of the Nordyke & Marmon company in Indianapolis for the first time since his firm obtained the Marmon franchise in France seven years ago.

M. Favrot, unable to speak English and expressing his thoughts through an interpreter, said that he was amazed at the bustle of activity in America. He was a guest of Nordye & Marmon at the 500-mile Memorial day race at the Indianapolis motor speedway May 30 and his enthusiasm at the speed of the American-built cars, the daring of the drivers and the color, magnitude and sportsmanlike spirit of the huge crowd, knew no bounds.

M. Favrot was accompanied to America by Frank Hambly, foreign representative of Nordyke & Marmon, who returned to the factory after a year's tour through England, France, Germany, Italy, Spain and Switzerland. M. Favrot found a friend in G. M. Williams, president of Nordyke & Marmon, who speaks French fluently and who conversed with him at length on the automobile industry, and on his trip.

"There is so much to be seen—so much I have seen—such amazing activity, such signs of prosperity that my enthusiasm for America and things American fills my heart," said M. Favrot, with characteristic fervor. "Your port of New York, the huge docks, the magnitude of New York, its life, cosmopolitanism, color, is wonderful—wonderful!

"And the speed of your elevators—they make my head swim!"

M. Favrot said that American cars far excelled the motor cars manufactured abroad.

"In design of engines and bodies they are far in advance of the cars found in my country," he said. "Americans have caught the note of beauty in design and color combinations of bodies that is most desired by motor car connoisseurs today. Your cars outperform ours—and I might say that the French put their cars to unbelievable tests of high speed on the open ground. There is an enthusiasm for American-made cars that has grown mightily in the last few years. The French and foreign market is in the primary stages of its development; there will be a constantly increasing number of American-made cars coming into our country in the next few years.

"I think it is a good thing for France and should lead to developments in the industry there. It will put our French manufacturers on their mettle and in the effort to keep pace with the forward march of the Americans will lead to better, more beautiful and more dependable French-made cars. Road races and competitive hill climbs in which American cars, in many cases, have shown their superiority have resulted in developments in the industry abroad."

M. Favrot was particularly interested in the new arrangement of the Nordyke & Marmon plant, which was rearranged several months prior to the announcement of the new Marmon "74." He spent several days in the plant studying manufacturing processes and watching the development of the finished car from the time the raw material is unloaded on one side of the plant until the finished car is run off the runways of the final assembly line on the other. He was one of the guests of honor at the dinner given at the Indianapolis Athletic club the night before the 500-mile race when notable in the industry, including Charles M. Schwab, and others spoke.

M. Favrot will return to France about the middle of June.

CHAMPION PLUGS IN TEN NEW RECORDS

Illustrating the great advancement made in spark plug construction and dependability in the last two years, the Champion Spark Plug Co., yesterday issued figures showing that spark plugs in the ten leading cars in the 500-mile classic at Indianapolis Memorial day fired some 57,000,000 times, under the tremendous stress and strain of 100-miles-an-hour speeds, without once delivering an inefficient, weak or faulty spark.

Each of the 80 spark plugs used in the 10 leading cars delivered about 720,000 perfect sparks to the gas mixture during the race. They fired for an average of more than five hours at the rate of about 40 times a second.

"Conducting a full charge of properly mixed gas vapor through the inlet valve into each combustion chamber, firing it, and expelling it through the exhaust, and then repeating that process 40 times a second, indicates the necessity for perfect spark plug performance," points out O. C. Rohde, chief engineer of the Champion Spark Plug Co. "Almost perfect combustion is vital to create the necessary power and to assure that no unburned gases waste through the exhaust.

"It was only a few years ago that sustained speeds of 85 and 90 miles an hour were considered exceptional. Many authorities on automobile construction and performance were inclined to believe that the limit had then been reached. Changes of spark plugs at those speeds every 100 miles or so were considered necessary because of the terrific punishment they received.

"Then two years ago the Champion Spark Plug Co. reentered the racing field with its new compression type, two-piece construction and exclusive sillimanite insulator. Since that time its product has definitely proved its ability to withstand speeds even higher than 100 miles an hour. Many 250-mile races have been held where average speeds for the entire distance have been higher, two of them exceeding a 125-mile average. In practically every one of these dozens of races in the last two years, drivers have proved it unnecessary to change a single plug throughout the race.

"These races have been the crucible in which the ability of the spark plug used in standard cars has been thoroughly tested. The only difference between the Champions used in racing cars and in standard automobiles is a slight one to compensate for the extreme speeds at which racing cars are driven. Otherwise the plugs are identical in every way.

"This remarkable performance record under the most terrific tests has not been confined to a few types of engines, or to this country alone. It has been made in practically every feasible type and style of engine in all parts of the world.

"Champion's victory at Indianapolis marked the 10th consecutive world's record for its product and the 20th consecutive victory won in major racing competition throughout the world since it returned to the field of racing. That is a record heretofore never approached by automotive product."

AUTO LAUGHS

Al Johnson said he got a job as chauffeur and then lost it because he took the boss's car without permission. When asked how the boss found out about it, Al replied: "I ran over him."

STUDEBAKER CONTINUES ALL PRESENT MODELS

Announcement is made today by the Studebaker Corporation of America of discontinuing the custom of presenting a new line of automobiles each year.

Instead of bringing Studebaker cars dramatically up-to-date once in twelve months, this company proposes to keep them up-to-date all the time, adding improvements and refinements from time to time as the merit of such betterments is proved to the satisfaction of Studebaker's engineering department, which, the corporation points out, is maintained at a cost of a half million dollars annually.

Studebaker believes that this policy benefits present Studebaker owners. It is also the belief of this concern that the policy of no "yearly" models enables purchasers of new cars to obtain models that are always modern, without the necessity of waiting for annual changes and without the danger of their new cars becoming obsolete.

The dramatic success of the present line of Studebaker cars is one reason for this important change. During the first five months of 1925, Studebaker dealers delivered 40 per cent more cars to buyers than during the same period in 1924. On May 31, the end of the period referred to, Studebaker dealers had only half as many cars in stock as on the same date last year.

Despite the fact that Studebaker factories in South Bend, Detroit and Walkerville, Ontario, are operating at capacity, orders for Studebaker cars are far in excess of production.

OAKLAND WINS CLOSED CAR CHAMPIONSHIP

By winning the closed car championship and class award in the recent Camp Curry Yosemite economy run, the Oakland Six has added one more to its long record of consecutive victories in America's outstanding economy events.

In this important contest, open to stock cars of any size or make, a strictly stock Oakland landau sedan not only captured these two honors, but also took second place in the grand sweepstakes—only one other contestant, a light touring car, exceeding Oakland's high score.

Oakland made an average of 22.86 miles per gallon of gasoline over the 360 mile course, which includes some of the steepest grades and most trying roads on the Pacific coast. The car with its load of passengers weighed 3,847 pounds. Only one pint of oil and 4½ pints of water were needed for the trip. No mechanical adjustments had to be made during the course of the race. The car made an average of 43.88-ton miles per gallon.

The run, as usual, was conducted under A. A. A. supervision and a most careful inspection of all models was made to make certain that every model was a strictly stock car.

Four sweepstakes victories, two closed-car sweepstakes victories and six class championships place Oakland in a class by itself for economical operation.

These victories were won in the Camp Curry Yosemite runs in 1922, 1923, 1924 and 1925 and the San Diego to El Centro and return economy runs in 1922 and 1923.

ENGINEERS DISCUSS FRANKLIN COUPE

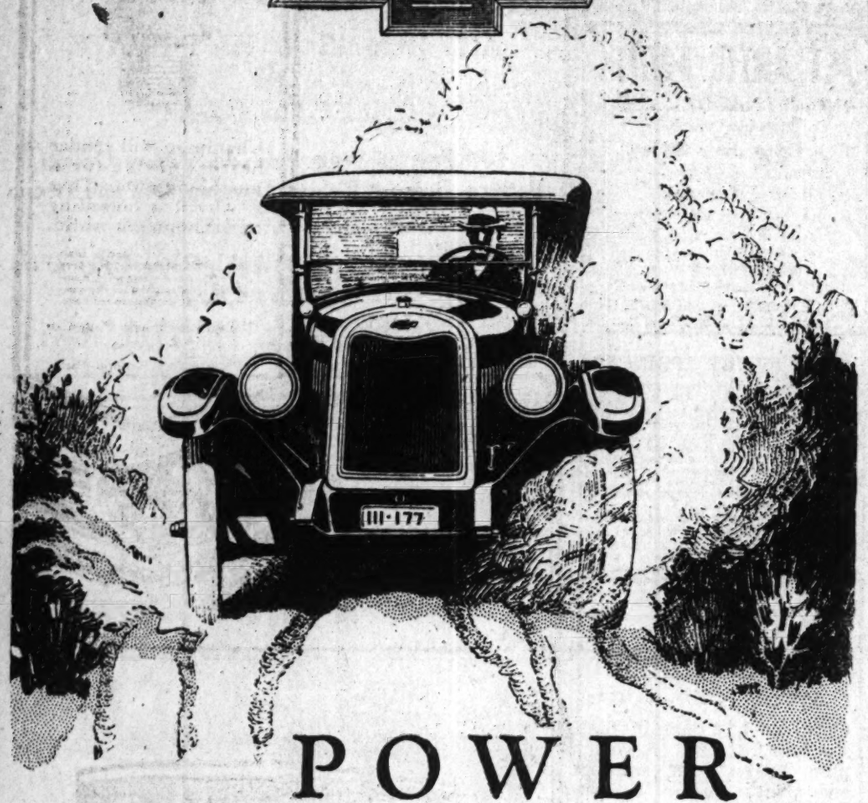

Detroit, June 20.—Intense interest in the clear vision developments in closed car construction was one of the features of the Automobile Body Builders' association in session in Detroit this week.

Efforts by body engineers to secure lessened obstruction to driver vision have been going on for some time being stimulated by the interest of traffic safety organizations throughout the country. In the same connection, Secretary Hoover's national conference on street and highway safety in their December session made the following recommendation: "Design of bodies and cabs should be carried out with due regard to the necessity of reducing to the minimum the shut-off area of driver vision."

What probably constitutes the outstanding 1925 development in clear vision body construction takes form in the new style Franklin coupe. It is known as the Edmond clear vision construction, W. H. Emond, head body engineer of the Franklin company, being the inventor. The Franklin coupe construction came in for a great deal of discussion at the Detroit session.

A NEW EXPERIENCE at 50 MILES an HOUR

Of course, 50 miles an hour isn't anywhere near top speed for the Hupmobile Eight.

But take the car at 50. You'll expect strain, but you'll actually feel at ease—safe and secure—with comfort and steadiness as never before at that speed, unless in a Pullman.

Now jump it to top speed—and what a smooth, swift flash that is!

Hold it there as long as the road is clear. That's the way you could travel all day long if you had the road.

Both you and the car could stand it.

There just isn't anything so fine as the new kind of motoring the Hupmobile Eight brings to you. Drive it yourself—then you'll know.

The NEW MARMON

IN SPITE of the apparent suddenness of Marmon's ascendancy to a position of dominance in the fine car field; in spite of the new multiplicity of New Marmons to be seen on the streets, there has been, in no sense, a departure or a revolution in Marmon engineering principle.

With the happy combination of an even finer and more beautiful car at an even lower price, all under the honored Marmon name, it was easy to forcast that Marmon would reach its new unprecedented sales records.

But underlying all of that is a growing recognition of Marmon's strict adherence to principle—a growing appreciation of Marmon's unswerving consistency of engineering and honesty of manufacturing.

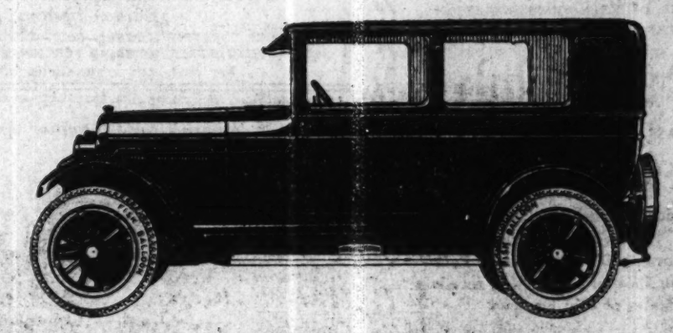

That is the basis on which Marmon is building so many enduring friendships today.

In other words, what appears to be Marmon's great new national acceptance, is only another proof of the increasingly sound judgment of level-headed, motor-wise Americans who demand that a car shall be as good as it looks and require genuine value received for their money.

COLUMBIA SEMINARY FUND DRIVE PROGRESSES

Pledges for endowing Columbia seminary after it is moved to Georgia from Columbia, S. C., and rebuilt in Atlanta are coming in splendidly, according to information from headquarters in Atlanta, Quitman, Ga., having just completed a campaign in which the quota set for $3,000 was over subscribed to $3,250. Complete returns are not yet in, and it is expected that several hundred dollars more will be subscribed, it was said.

Waycross and Americus have also completed successful campaigns, and a number of smaller churches. At Pleasant Hill, in the Macon presbytery, Presbyterian communicants subscribed to the Columbia seminary fund 100 per cent, it was announced.

The campaign is state-wide, and is undertaken for the purpose of raising an endowment fund of $250,000 to add to the small endowment Columbia seminary now has, when it shall be moved and rebuilt in Atlanta. Atlanta subscribed a buiding fund of $315,000 and donated a $40,000 site near Decatur earlier in the year, the site and building being conditional upon securing at least $250,000 from the churches in the rest of the state, with which to properly endow the institution. It is said that the project will ultimately represent a $2,000,000 investment.

Campaigns are now in progress in Columbus, Rome, Marietta, Forsyth, Eastman, Union Point, Woodstock, Lexington, Waynesboro and a number of smaller churches. Augusta will have a campaign beginning June 28, Moultrie July 10 to 12 and campaign will open in Griffin July 3. Great interest is being shown throughout the state in the Columbia seminary movement, it was stated, as being the greatest opportunity ever afforded to establish in Atlanta a graduate school of religion under the dominion of the Southern Presbyterian Church that will rank with Princeton and the other larger theological schools of the east and west.

FRANKLIN COUNTY CLUB PLANS PICNIC

The Franklin County society will hold its fifth annual picnic next Friday, at Grant park, beginning at 10 o'clock.

Colonel Claude Bond, of Toccoa, will be the principal speaker.

There are hundreds of former residents of Franklin county in and around Atlanta, and most of these are expected to attend the outing.

ADAIRS FINANCE SAN ANTONIO HOTEL

Another indication of the tremendous expansion of the Adair Realty & Trust company, of Atlanta, is the firm's participation in the construction of the Hotel St. Frances and the St. Frances Apartment hotel, $2,000,000 project now under way in San Antonio, Texas. The Adair company has made a $1,500,000 issue of 6 1-2 per cent first mortgage bonds against the total security involved, appraised at $2,626,250.

The Adair company plays a big part in bringing capital into all parts of the south for construction purposes, their field for this feature of their activity stretching as far west as Texas and as far north as Washington. Millions of dollars have been brought into various southern states by Adair through their nation-wide sale of first mortgage bonds as well as through their active representation of several of the country's largest insurance companies.

The bonds on the San Antonio project are a personal obligation of S. L. Jeffers and Mrs. Frances H. Jeffers, the mortgagors, well-known San Antonio capitalists and property owners. In addition to the land, two buildings, furniture, furnishings and complete equipment, security back of the issue includes two adjacent pieces of valuable property.

The hotel will be 12 stories in height, containing 434 rooms with private baths, while the apartment will be of the same height, with 126 completely furnished apartments.

Annual net earnings on the two structures have been estimated at $297,044, over three times the greatest annual interest requirements. San Antonio has a population of 225,000, and is in the heart of a rich country, the headquarters for a vast oil-producing region and a very important cattle and wool market.

RACCOON CAPTURED BY SERGEANT ALLEN

Police Sergeant James W. Allen early Saturday morning had the unusual experience of capturing a giant raccoon on Marietta street near Mangum street. The coon was turned over to Mat Leonard, keeper of the zoo, after being taken to the police station and fed. The animal is said to weigh about 30 pounds.

TAGGART ADMITTED TO GEORGIA BAR

Jack Taggart, of Atlanta, was this week admitted to the Georgia bar before Judge E. D. Thomas and the United States District court before Judge Sibley.

Mr. Taggart enjoys the novel distinction of studying and passing the bar examination while a member of the United States Marine Corps stationed at Norfolk, Va. He intends to affiliate with Jesse L. Moore and Louis A. Burton with offices in the Kiser Building upon his assumption of the practice of law.

Anti-Tuberculosis Society Faces Curtailment of Work Because of Lack of Funds

Failure To Raise Full Amount of Community Chest Forces Cut in Fund for Expenses.

It has been necessary to curtail essential work of the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis association because of lack of funds, it was declared in a statement issued Friday by officials of the organization.

The association is supported by the Community Chest, which has been unable to properly finance all the institutions which comprise its membership, it is set forth, because of failing to raise the full amount needed. The cost of the work of the Anti-Tuberculosis body, it is set forth, is about $2,500 per month when conducted on the most economical basis possible. Its work includes the operation of a free clinic for tubercular patients, home visitation in tubercular families by trained public health nurses and educational work among school children in Atlanta and Fulton county with a view to training them in preventive methods. All three of these services, it is stated, are rendered to both white and colored persons by a staff composed of white and colored nurses and white and colored educational workers.

The association was notified May 15, it is stated, that the budget must be cut 75 per cent by the Community Chest and, with which had been received during the first five months of the year deducted, the remainder amounted to seven payments of $1,700 each, instead of the $2,500 absolutely essential if this vital work is to go on.

Faced with this situation remarkable sacrifice was displayed by some of the workers and drastic steps taken by the board of drectors.

The secretary, the head nurse and the white educational worker each volunteered to give up their entire salary for one month.

The educational director was loaned to South Carolina for one month to do similar work there. The colored educational worker, on leave of absence, improving herself in her work, was notified to extend this leave, with senior white nurse is to be loaned to an Atlanta industry for five or six months. Two junior white nurses are to be laid off until January 1 and one junior colored nurse is likewise laid off.

Telephone conveniences have been reduced to a minimum, a reduction in rent on the headquarters building is to be asked for of the owner and other steps taken in the effort to meet the crippling cut in the association's revenue.

The statement given out by Kendall Weisiger, president of the association, in full, reads as follows:

To the Public:

"Owing to the fact that the Community Chest has been unable to raise the full amount needed to properly finance the various institutions which comprise its membership, the Tuberculosis association of Atlanta now faces the necessity of making drastic and hurtful reductions in its work of preventing and curing tuberculosis among the indigent people in Atlanta and vicinity, which it has been carrying on for more than 15 years.

"The 1925 budget of the association amounted to $33,000, which was to cover (1) the operation of a free clinic for tubercular persons; (2) home visitation in tubercular families by trained public health nurses; (3) educational work among school children in Atlanta and Fulton county, with a view to training children in preventive methods. All three of these services are rendered to both white and colored persons by a staff composed of white and colored nurses and white and colored educational workers. The original budget was later reduced to $30,000.

"The budget covers the rent and building service of the headquarters and clinic at 23 East Cain street, one full-time executive secretary and one office assistant, a head nurse, two senior white nurses, two junior white nurses, one senior colored nurse, one junior colored nurse, one white educational worker and one colored educational worker, both working in the city and country and private schools.

"The budget also included transportation for nurses and educational workers and educational literature and material, medicine, x-ray plates and other incidental things needful to carry out the doctors' instructions and transportation of indigent patients to and from the clinic.

"The cost of all of these services totals in round figures $2,500 a month when managed on the most conservative and economical basis that the board of directors of Atlanta business men and women have been able to work out.

"On May 15 the association was notified by the Community Chest that our budget would be cut to 75 per cent of the amount asked for and that what we had received for our regular operating expenses during the first five months of the year would be deducted and the remainder would be sent us in seven equal paymnts of $1,700 each.

"Thus we are confronted with the necessity of reducing the normal $2,500 a month requirement to $1,700 a month. Naturally this means but one thing—a drastic reduction in the volume of work and the laying off of experienced and well-trained workers.

"The board of directors, the medical staff and the workers have agreed upon the following procedure:

"The secretary, the head nurse and the white educational worker have each volunteered to give up full salary for one month.

"The educational director has been loaned for a month to do similar work for the state of North Carolina.

"The colored educational worker, who is on leave of absence improving herself in the field of her work, will be asked to continue her leave of absence without pay until January 1.

"On senior white nurse is to be loaned to an Atlanta industry for a period of five or six months.

"Two junior white nurses are to be laid off until January 1.

"One junior colored nurse is likewise laid off.

"Telephone facilities have been reduced to a bare minimum.

"The owner of the building in which the headquarters are located will be asked to make a 25 per cent reduction in the rent or else we shall be obliged to move.

"Patients will no longer be given free medicine or free x-rays, and carfare heretofore given to patients in order to get them to attend the clinic will no longer be given.

"By these reductions we can carry on with a skeleton organization until January 1, when we shall renew our plea for full support. In the meanstime the 25 doctors, who compose the staff and give freely of their valuable time, will be seriously handicapped in the work of the clinic and the work of home visitation will be practically wiped out. This latter means that many tubercular persons, who are discovered by visiting nurses, will not have the benefit of the work of the clinic.

"When this situation is considered in the light of the following facts, taken from the association's statistics, the seriousness of the situation is readily apparent to anyone:

"During May, 1925, the clinic treated 521 children and 940 adults, either having tuberculosis or suspected of having it and therefore under strict observation. This total of 1,641 persons is comparable with 1,239 who visited the clinic during the same month last year.

"Two hundred and fourteen families were involved in the number of persons visiting the clinic in May and 912 nurses' visits were made to persons in their homes.

"Since January 1, 241 new cases of colored persons having positive indications of tuberculosis have been treated and 123 of these were dispatched to the city sanitarium for tuberculosis at Battle Hill, which institution is now filled to overflowing.

"When the menace to the public health is considered, in the light of this large and increasing number of persons afflicted with this deadly and communicable disease, the people of Atlanta will rise to the situation and make it possible for this work to not only be restored to its original scope, but be increased sufficiently to fully meet this extremely dangerous situation."

PROHI RAIDS NET BIG HAUL SATURDAY

Nearly 200 gallons of whisky and more than 1,000 gallons of mash were seized in raids made Saturday by prohibition agents, according to reports made to Fred D. Dismukes, federal prohibition director.

Federal Agent Lon Adair and City Officers L. J. Brooks and C. E. McCrary raided a garage on Courtland street Saturday morning and took into custody John Ramey and his helper, Roy Smith, when they were caught transferring a large amount of whisky from one automobile to another. Sixty gallons of whisky was seized, the two automobiles were confiscated and the men placed under arrest, charged with violating the federal prohibition law.

Federal Agents Kimsey, Smith and Wallace seized 40 gallons of liquor from an automobile near Gainesville Saturday after they had chased it for more than 20 miles. Two men, who gave their names as C. D. Strickland and W. C. Ledcritt, were arrested and brought to Atlanta, where they were charged with violating the federal prohibition laws.

ELBERTON TO OPEN HANDSOME NEW HOTEL

Elberton, Ga., June 20.—(Special.) Elberton's handsome new hotel, now nearing completion, has been named the Samuel Elbert, in honor of General Elbert, a general in the revolutionary war for whom Elbert county was named.

Arnold Construction company, the contractors, hope to have the hotel completed and ready for occupancy early in July. J. C. Stiles, who leases the property of ten years at the rental of 17 per cent of the gross receipts, and who is to furnish it, signed the contract on the occasion of his visit to the city this week. He will open the hotel to the public just as soon after it is completed as possible. He will run the hotel on the American plan.

Mrs. Stiles, who will be actively connected with the hotel, is a daughter of the late Rev. S. H. Dimon, of the North Georgia conference, who was pastor at Bowman for some time.

PLAYGROUNDS REDUCE TOLL OF ACCIDENTS

That playgrounds are actually reducing the number of children killed by automobiles has been proven by a series of surveys just completed by engineerds of the national safety council, according to announcement by George Deibert, secretary of the Atlanta Safety council.

Staff engineers of the national organization have been engaged in making accident surveys in a number of states, including one of the entire state of Virginia in which they cooperated with officials of the state motor vehicle department. These surveys developed that those communities which have adequate playground facilities reported comparatively few accidental deaths among children, as the youngsters were enjoying themselves in playgrounds instead of being subjected to the hazards attendant on romping in the streets.

"The playgrounds in Atlanta, which opened this week under the direction of Miss Margaret Camp, are a great factor in the safety council's campaign to cut down the city's accident rate," said Mr. Deibert. "Our 'spot map' shows that the playgrounds are well located and distributed throughout the city, and the carefully-supervised play under the direction of experienced supervisors is expected to keep child accidents to a minimum."

Twenty-one playgrounds, now in operation, are located at the Exposition Cotton mills; in Adair Park, Catherine street and Maryland avenue; McClatchey Park, Mozely Park; Joiner, North Avenue and State Street; Springdale, at Waverly way and Edgewood; Forrest, on the Forrest Avenue school grounds; Candler Park, on McLendon street; Bessie Branham grounds in Kirkwood; Echols Park, at Pearl and Wylie streets; at the Hemphill pumping station; Dargan Park, at Lucile and Dargan; in Piedmont Park; Brown Park in East Atlanta; the grounds of James L. Key school; Maddox Park, on Park avenue, in East Atlanta; Maddox Park, on Bellwood avenue; at the Calhoun school; in Turman Park, near the federal prison; at Williams Street school; in Grant Park, and at Mimms Park, at Davis and Spencer streets. There are also three playgrounds for colored children located in Washington Park, at Gray Street school and at the Ralph Mimms institute.

Surely there can be no better investment than the expenditure of the necessary appropriation to insure not only the safety of our children, declared Mr. Deibert, but also their happiness, upon which our own is so largely dependent. Providing more playgrounds in Atlanta means greater peace of mind for our motorists. No driver can fail to appreciate the relief that will come when he will not have to worry so much about the possibility of running down a child. Fathers and mothers can pursue their daily duties more happily and comfortably when they know their youngsters are enjoying their birthright safely and surely.

DOUGLASVILLE PLANS JULY 4TH CELEBRATION

Douglasville, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—Arrangements have been made here for a monster celebration on July 4, when United States Senator Walter F. George will be principal speaker. Roland Turner, agricultural agent of the Southern railroad, also will speak.

A barbecue dinner, athletic events, a ball game, Douglasville vs. Federal Prison team, singing and parade by the Ku Klux Klan will be features of the day.

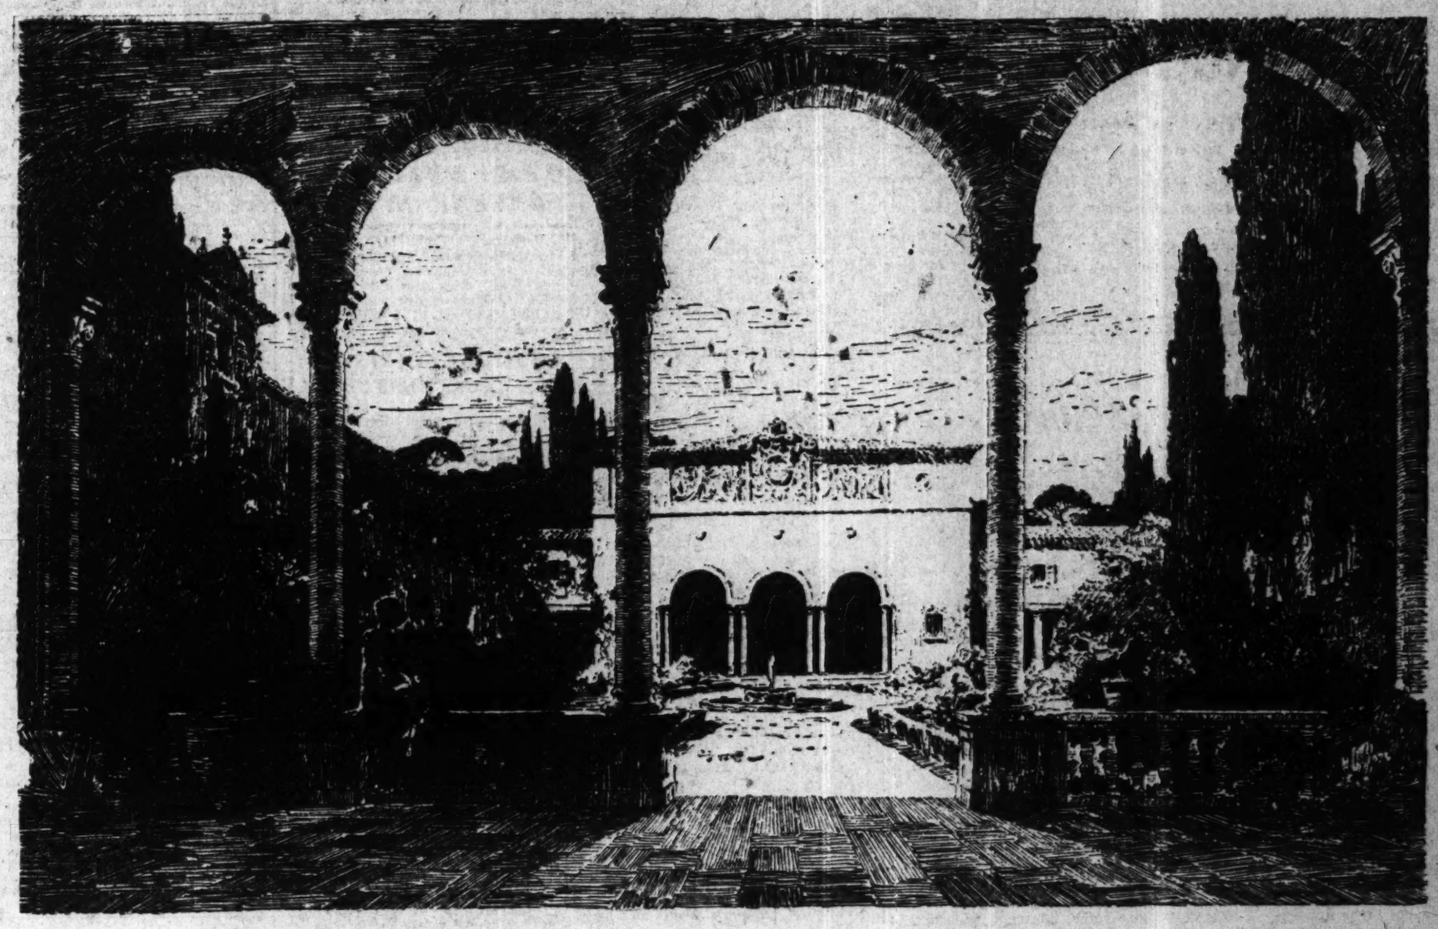

Douglasville will be decorated with national colors for the occasion.

W. J. Dozier is general chairman on arrangements for the program.

SUMMER SCHOOL OPENS SESSION AT ATHENS

Athens, Ga., June 20.—(Special.) The University of Georgia summer school opens here tomorrow and Dr. J. S. S. Stewart, director, expects an enrollment of close to 3,000 students for the session. The program for this year is considered unusually excellent. The summer school council has procured the services of some of the leading educators of the country and musical artsists for the session.

The oratory and dramatic arts department will have three instructors Miss Carolyn Cobb, Miss Carolyn Vance and Mrs. McCabe, of the Emerson School of Oratory.

The Miami Conservatory of Music

IN the group which makes up the great scheme and plan of the University of Miami at Coral Gables, Florida, there are several institutions which are now endowed and absolutely assured. One of these is the Conservatory of Music, long established in Miami and most successful under the direction of Miss Bertha Foster The new affiliation will bring to the Conservatory an enlarged field for work which will assure greater success than ever.

Around the Conservatory will be grouped the Schools of Art, Philosophy, Science, Law and other branches of higher education. Near it will be built the University High School, Shriners' Club and Sports Centers, new Florida East Coast Station, Sanitarium and other splendid features. Nearly 500 acres in the Riviera Section at Coral Gables will be devoted to these splendid institutions, golf courses and yacht basins.

The Riviera Section is the largest section which Coral Gables has offered at any one time. Its area is 2000 acres. It is also the most carefully planned section, with extensive tropical landscaping, 100-foot boulevards, fine 300-foot waterways, and other delightful features. It will also be the finest residential area in the suburban city. More than 200 homes costing from $25,000 to $200,000 each already are financed for this section, and will be built in the next year.

Every one of the Riviera's institutional features is a great enhancement factor. With their construction there will be great increases in values of plots. The early buyer — the man who invests now — has all the advantage of getting in at the lowest prices which will ever prevail there. Those who know Miami best — and the profits taken here year after year in real estate — will grasp this advantage.

A visit to Coral Gables is part of every complete Florida tour — and it makes a delightful outing. Call at our local office and let us tell you how you may see Coral Gables with no transportation cost to you.

FOUR MEN FACE COURT ON MURDER CHARGES

Four defendants charged with murder and 10 persons charged with the operation of a syndicate to steal automobiles in the state are among those slated to face judges in Fulton superior court this week, it was announced Saturday from the office of Solicitor General John Boykin.

E. C. Cameron and Millard Davis, young white men, Wednesday will face Judge J. B. Park, of the Ocmulgee circuit, who is presiding in the criminal division of Fulton court. They are charged with murder in connection with the fatal injuring of Ralph Elliott several weeks ago on Marietta road, when he was struck by an automobile. They are said to have been the occupants of the machine which caused the death. They deny the charges.

Melvin Johnson, negro, will face murder charges Wednesday in Judge G. H. Howard's division of court for the death of Tom Tanner, negro. John Wofford, negro, will go on trial on charges of murder growing out of the death of Ed Stephens, negro. Ed Reed, negro, who was tried for murder in the same case, was convicted of voluntary manslaughter last week and sentenced to serve 15 to 20 years.

The 10 defendants in the alleged theft syndicate will face Judge Park Monday and Tuesday, these two days having been reserved for the trial of the case, it was announced. Police found about 30 cars in a secluded field near Ellijay, Gilmer county, several weeks ago and these cases are the outgrowth of this discovery.

TAX LEGISLATION TO RECEIVE ACTION

Chairman Holder. These showed that at times Chairman Holder had drawn parts of his salary in advance but had always repaid these advances. It was on the strength of this partial report that Governor Walker sought to revoke Chairman Holder's commission.

At the time the Dawson concern was employed it was understood that the reason for this action was the belief that the state auditing department, under Sam J. Slate, could not, on account of other work, make an audit as quickly as desired. However, six weeks after the start of the Dawson audit Mr. Slate took charge of the department books and rrecords and began his official audit.

Dawson Report Published.

On Thursday last the Dawson audit was given to the governor and immediately made public. It did not contain any charges against Chairman Holder, but showed that the making of advances on salary was customary, over sixty such advances to various officials and employees being shown.

The audit of Sam J. Slate has not yet been completed but is expected any time.

Chairman Holder also has stated that he will not approve the payment of attorneys' fees by the members of the board for legal services in connection with the fight to retain his seat brought by him. He takes the position that inasmuch as he paid his attorneys' fees other members should do likewise.

Since the decision of the state supreme court in favor of Mr. Holder, it has developed that neither W. T. Anderson nor Stanley S. Bennett, the other members of the board, have had their appointments confirmed by the senate, although the law requires this. Just why the appointments, both of which took place before the last session, were not sent to the senate last year is not known.

Mr. Bennett, however, succeeded himself on the board and is qualified from his original appointment in any event it is said. Mr. Anderson, however, is a new member and it is held by many lawyers that until his appointment is confirmed by the senate he, at best, is but a de facto member of the board.

A strong effort will be made this year to pass a state bond issue for completion of the state system of hard-surfaced highways. It seems certain, however, that this measure is doomed to failure unless the highway situation outlined above is first straightened out and a complete reorganization of the department completed.

Legislators Aroused.

There is a strong sentiment in the legislature to abolish the present board and form an executive committee of 12 members, one from each congressional district, to be named by members of the legislature from that district and with one man at the head who shall have full power and active charge of the entire highway building and maintenance operations of the state.

In regard to tax reform, Governor Walker already has announced his platform, endorsing a program including a classification tax to reach intangible properties and also a limited state income tax.

With practically every state supported institution advancing incontrovertible proof why it should have increased appropriations, it seems inevitable that an increase in the state's revenue must be found. Yet it is unanimously conceded that there can be no increase in the state ad valorem tax, the real property owners of the state already being taxed to the utmost capacity.

A state survey committee, appointed by the governor, recently completed its work and has drawn up recommendations in regard to financial needs of the different institutions. The committee report, it is understood, also recommends various economies by the elimination of overlapping in certain educational institutions and coordination of the work in all schools.

Economy to Be Urged.

The state budget committee concluded the work last week of drawing up a budget for the appropriations bill. This committee is created by act of the legislature and by the precedent set two years ago it appears probable that solons will follow its recommendations closely.

As a general policy, it is believed that the incoming legislature will work to its utmost ability for economy in state expenditures and for the saving of the state's funds in every way possible without reducing the efficiency of the state governmental organization.

Recommendations for genuinely constructive legislation along many lines will be contained in bills to be introduced. There will be the usual number of bills poured into house and senate hoppers, of which, it is to be presumed, the usual large proportion will never pass—fortunately, for everyone—probably.

Of local legislation there are a number of bills of particular interest to Fulton county and the city of Atlanta which will center the attention of Atlantans. These include several proposed annexations of property to the city and other matters of primary importance.

Interest in Viaducts.

Chief interest centers, however, on the "viaducts" bill. In this measure the city of Atlanta will ask the legislature to approve the building of viaducts over the state-owned railroad property on Central avenue and Pryor street. The building of these viaducts are considered essential to the proper planning of the greater Atlanta which is coming within the next few years and construction ultimately will prove of great financial value to the state as well in the tremendous enhancement of property values in that section of the city, including the state-owned property.

Last year this bill failed to pass the senate by a narrow margin, but it is believed that the new bill, containing ample safeguards to protect the state's interests, will meet with but little opposition this year.

Fulton county's delegation in the house contains one new member, F. A. Hooper, Jr. The other two members, Miss Bessie Kempton and J. O. Wood, are serving their second terms.

In the senate, the 35th district, which includes Fulton county, is represented by Senator W. C. Hendrix, of Atlanta.

There are again two women members of the house, Miss Kempton and Mrs. Viola Ross Napier, of Bibb county, the same two who represented their sex in the last house.

Roster of Members.

The members of senate and house who will shape the legislative destinies of the state through the forthcoming two months of law-making, law-amending and law-repealing, are as follows:

OLD GUARD LAYS PLANS FOR CUBA PILGRIMAGE

Members of the "Old Guard" of Atlanta, one of the oldest organizations of its kind in the south, held its annual barbecue Saturday afternoon at the Burns club, followed by a business meeting, at which time plans for their trip to Cuba September 16 were discussed.

The barbecue was attended by a large number of leading Atlantans with their families. The entire program was informal, with "plenty to eat and nothing to do but enjoy it." W. M. Camp, commander of the organization, served as toastmaster.

Principal discussion at the meeting of the body, after the barbecue, centered about plans for their proposed trip. The organization intends making the pleasure trip to Cuba in uniform and "under arms." The United States government, the Cuban government and the state of Florida, through which the "Old Guard" will pass, will be asked for special permission to make the trip with their military accoutrements.

The trip will require about two weeks, Mr. Camp stated, and the organization is planning to visit many of the historic spots in the island republic, beginning with the city of Havana. A large number of the members are planning to go, and will leave Atlanta in a special train, it was stated.

GEORGIA VETERANS OF SPANISH WAR CONVENE ON JULY 3

Preparations have been completed for the third annual reunion of Spanish War Veterans in Savannah July 3-4. The program will be published later. Atlanta camps will hold their regular meetings at 3 o'clock today at the City Auditorium.

them, Coolidge will take soundings that will steer him in preparation of the administration's program for the coming winter.

This program is highly important because it sets the keynote for the congressional campaigns a year hence. Also, Coolidge has a firmer grip on the two houses of congress than ever before and it is his best chance to show what he can do in the way of constructive legislation. He has been somewhat unsuccessful in his experience with congress, having first that awful one over the oil and Daugherty scandals, then having the democrats kill his tax bill and force their own into law, and finally having his choice for attorney general, Charles B. Warren rejected by the senate in a performance almost unheard of since the days of Jackson.

But so far Coolidge's personal popularity has had such remarkable momentum that these difficulties with congress have been less noticed than normally would have been expected and such attention as they received consisted almost entirely of sympathy for the president.

So he has come through all of that very well. But another session is coming and at these quiet conferences over the cigars in the quiet recesses of white court some of the deepest political questions will be discussed. Coolidge is going to let the leaders of the country come in and think out loud for him—it may be his idea of a vacation.

Walking, reading and cruising on the Mayflower which will anchor at Marblehead, will provide the president with recreation.

Fits—Attacks Stopped in 3 Days

Mr J. L. Crossman, of Blue Hill, says his son, who was having as many as 68 fits in one night, was relieved from the attacks in three days by a treatment he procured from Mr Lepso. Everyone suffering from Epileptic (Fits) attacks should write to Mr. Lepso, 855 Island Ave., Apt 7, Milwaukee, Wis., who is offering a FREE bottle of the same treatment, postpaid to any sufferer—(adv.)

COMMISSION MAY ASK TARIFF LAW CHANGES

Washington, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Recommendations for a revision of the present tariff law as it affects the tariff commission probably will be made in the commission's report to congress early in December.

Experience with the law has demonstrated to members of the commission that improvements can be made, especially with respect to its flexible provisions. The principle of flexibility, however, would not be disturbed.

One of the most important changes suggested is the adoption of a new method of determining adjustments in the duty on imported articles. At present, this duty is based on the difference between the costs of production in this and foreign countries.

Would Change Basis.

Thomas G. Marvin, chaiman of the commission, in discussing the commission's experience with the law, favored the substitution of wholesale prices as the basis for making tariff adjustments.

"The proper basis for the operation of a flexible tariff," said the chairman, "is not the one element of difference in cost of production, but the difference in competitive conditions which would require ascertainment of invoice prices for competitive articles from foreign countries, and wholesale prices of domestic articles packed and ready for delivery.

Under the present system, Mr. Marvin declared, there are many ways of computing costs of production, with each method resulting in a different figure. The wholesale price method, he added, would be more accurate and dependable, would save an inestimable amount of time and money and result in fairer treatment both to domestic and foreign manufacturers.

ZERO TEMPERATURE SWEEPS ARGENTINE AND CAUSES DEATHS

Buenos Aires, June 20.—With the temperature below zero, Buenos Aires and this section of the Argentine are suffering from the peak of winter weather. One of the most violent snowstorms in many years is sweeping the provinces at Chubut and Rio Negro. The storm has caused a number of deaths, interrupted the telegraph lines and severely affected the cattle industry.

Three persons have frozen to death in Buenos Aires. A number of bodies of persons killed by the cold have been recovered in the storm-swept provincial sections and the others are still missing. In the northwest, snow is three meters deep.

STOCKBRIDGE TO HAVE ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT

Stockbridge, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—Work upon Stockbridge's new electric light plant, for which bonds recently were voted, is nearing completion, and the town soon will be well lighted.

The town will operate its own dynamo and power plant, which is being installed at May's mill, near town.

'PRINCE OF PILSEN' PRESENTS STARS

developed in a romantic way, rather than in the buffo style of Gilbert and Sullivan.

Thomas Conkey, who captivated Atlanta last week with his portrayal of the humorous role of "The Mikado," has the dashing character of the "Prince of Pilsen," with two big songs in each of the two acts, giving Atlanta a better chance to find out why he has been the lion of the St. Louis Municipal Opera company for the last two years.

Robert Pitkin, the inimitable "Ko-Ko" of last week, steps out this week as "Hans Wagner," a rich Cincinnati brewer, traveling in Europe with his beautiful daughter, Nellie, sung by Irene Dunne as leading woman for the week. Finding Nice beleeked to welcome the "Prince of Pilsen," Hans, with true American modesty, takes it for granted that the welcome is intended for him as the manufacturer of a beverage by the name and accepts the city's accolade to him as prince.

Meanwhile the real prince arrives, unrecognized, contrives to meet Nellie Wagner without divulging his identity and one of the several merry romances of the play ensues.

George Meador, Metropolitan tenor, sings the role of Tom Wagner, naval officer, son of Hans, who drops in at Nice to visit his father and sister and, incidentally, meets Charlotte Ryan, Metropolitan soprano, who sings "Edith Adams," a Vassar girl, under romantic auspices.

Miss Yago at "Katisha."

Anne Yago, the "Katisha" of appalling appearance last week, appears this week as Mrs. Madison Crocker, a dashing young widow, whose beauty will be a pleasant surprise to those who have seen her only as "Katisha." She finds favor in the eyes of the merry Hans for a comedy love affair that is one of the rich episodes of the composition.

"The Prince of Pilsen" is notable in that it presents both comedians of the company, William McLeod, who makes his first appearance here, as well as Robert Pitkin, already popular for his Ko-Ko. McLeod sings "Lord Artie Wilberforce," a British peer, who is intensely amusing.

Ethel Louise Wright, "Peep-bo," of last week, sings "Sidonie." Mrs. Crocker's French maid; Dudley Marwick, "Poo-Bah" of "The Mikado," sings a French gendarme; Charles Schenck, "Pish-Tush," of the opening week, sings "Francois," a hotel attache who also becomes a Sidonie attache during the tuneful course of the opera.

Giving a distinctly American atmosphere to the colorful Mediterranean scene, eight of the southern beauties of the chorus-ballet of 13 young people have been picked to represent eight American cities, girls who are wintering at the resort.

Atlanta Girls in Opera.

Miss Dorothea Taliaferro, of Atlanta, is "The Atlanta Girl;" Miss Mabel Dumas, of Atlanta, is "the New York girl; Miss Mary McCoy, of Cordele, is the Baltimore girl; Miss Eugenia Pirkle, of Atlanta, is the San Francisco girl; Miss Margaret Anderson, of Atlanta, is the Philadelphia girl; Miss Edith Moore, of Atlanta, is the New Orleans girl; Miss Eugenia Buchanan, of Atlanta, is the Chicago girl; Miss Trunie Johnson, of Atlanta, is the Boston girl.

The opera will be presented nightly at 8:30 o'clock, beginning Monday night, with a matinee performance at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Officials of the company were jubilant Saturday over results of the first week of municipal light opera in Atlanta, showing a steady increase in popularity from night to night, after the gala premiere, until Saturday attendance was greater even than the opening night.

"Atlantans in general are coming quickly to the realization that light opera is the most entertaining form of music for everyone, whether musically educated or not, and the experience of the first week indicates that the popularity of the Atlanta company will increase during the present season to the point where the immense auditorium will not be large enough to hold crowds," C. B. Bidwell, general manager, asserted Saturday night.

The volume of out-of-town patronage, it was stated, has indicated that light opera already has become an important drawing card for the city as a whole, having brought hundreds of visitors to Atlanta last week and with advance sale for a much larger number this week.

Miss Ryan's two solos, with the chorus, "Swinging Song," and "Tally-Ho," and her duet with Mr. Meador, "The Message of the Violets," promise to be rare musical treats as the singer is one of the ranking sopranos of the day and the music is of rare beauty and appeal.

FURNITURE FACTORY BUILT AT TOCCOA

Toccoa, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—Toccoa's newest enterprise, the Currahee Furniture company, soon will be completed and ready to turn out the finished product.

The structure is 660 feet long and 60 feet wide, and is located just south of the Trogdon Furniture company on the Elberton railroad. It is estimated that 100 persons will be employed in the manufacturing room furniture, in which the concern will specialize.

George D. Trogdon will have active management of the plant.

DODGE CONTRIBUTION BOOSTS COIN SALE

The sale of Stone Mountain memorial coins was boosted Saturday upon receipt of a subscription for 500 half dollars from the F. W. Dodge corporation of Atlanta, and reports from counties in the northern part of the state showing a sale of 5,000 additional coins, it was announced from headquarters.

Sales at the Atlanta banks, where coins have been on sale for one week, show that many Atlantans who did not buy coin certificates desire coins and are buying them at a fast rate. No report as to the exact number of coins bought from the banks has been made.

Counties of north Georgia have purchased more than 50,000 in the last ten days, according to W. L. Shaddix, director of the district.

Butts county, Georgia, has oversubscribed its quota more than 250 coins, it was reported Saturday by R. P. Sasnet, of that county. Bartow county reported the sale of more than 1,000 coins, while Coweta county made a similar report.

$15,000,000 Harbor for Hollywood, Fla.

Nothing could more definitely stimulate HOLLYWOOD'S growth and spur the rise of its realty values than the construction of its vast harbor. This harbor is being pushed forward to completion by a legion of workers and a big fleet of dredges and other construction forces and, when completed, will afford the most modern docking facilities, for heavy draught vessels, between New York and Panama.

Building and development progress at HOLLYWOOD does not pause. Everywhere the construction activity is tireless. Hollywood's magnificent buildings and homes are weekly being increased in number, the public utilities are continually and uninterruptedly being expanded and the extension of the beautiful street system goes vigorously forward daily.

Gulf Breezes Keep Hollywood Cooled

The average summer temperature at HOLLYWOOD By The Sea is 84. A Cool Spell---36,000 Yards of C-O-T-T-O-N-S

Another Demonstration of High Supremacy In Underselling Wash Fabrics

THE thing goes by inverse ratio. The more we buy the less we sell it for. There is no mathematical proposition more exact, more easily demonstrated than the High cotton goods underselling. We have done it time and again this Summer, and we are doing it again tomorrow.

Here are cottons with those endearing young charms, freshness and the sweetness of newness. They abound in that quality which conveys the idea of coolness—and the idea is everything.

It is suggested that people looking for a cool spell will find it here in bracing economies that may be calculated in dimes, quarters and half dollars for fabrics like the very breath of the breezes which give motion to fleeting clouds these midsummer days, and rhythm to leafy boughs.

Not Growing Pains--- Growing Pleasures

THE story of the new High's is a story of progress and prosperity. The store moves forward, developing greater powers, unfolding finer potentialities with the certainty and serenity which we observe in the great and irresistible processes of nature. It is indeed a natural growth.

In not attempting to walk before we could crawl, not to soar before we could walk—we have developed an organization that is hardy in nerve, sound in constitution, flesh, blood and bone all compact.

Lord Byron awoke one morning to find himself famous. Atlanta awoke the other day to find the new High's had done another startling thing—as surprised as if a century plant had blossomed through her window—as amazed as Lord Byron.

In purchasing the Robison Furniture Store we have added another link to our broadening and bettering service. When alterations are completed we shall invite you to one of the best Furniture, Rug and Drapery Departments in the South!

A Summary of Summery Silks Rare Qualities Underpriced

WHEN silks in "Atlanta's finest Silk Store" are reduced it means something, because women know to expect nothing but the best silks in High's stocks—silks bought from representative silk houses who take pride in their product.

Modern Residents Demand More Luxurious Dwellings

BY PAUL JONES.

Why are there so many vacant houses in Atlanta?

This is a question which is often heard, and to which few people give the real answer. The fact is that there are not an abnormal number of vacancies here and there is a real reason for those that do exist.

In the first place a certain number of vacancies is not only desirable but really essential to the progress of the city, just as it is essential for the merchant to have on hand a larger supply of goods than he expects to sell in one day. If there were no empty stores, offices or houses, people and business concerns could not be invited to locate here.

The real explanation for vacant houses, which applies to all classes of buildings is that people are demanding better accommodations than they were formerly willing to accept and are moving from the old dwellings into better homes and more luxurious apartments. This applies to business houses, offices, hotels and even factory building, and the explanation of movement toward better things is education.

During the world war people were taught the lesson of thrift. They were also taught lessons in better living. The government sent experts into all parts of the country to teach people how to arrange their homes, how to observe sanitation and to make "ends meet." The newspapers printed thousands of columns of propaganda with reference to the home, and while the millions who rushed into the overcrowded dwellings and apartments, in many of them was born an earnest desire for a home of their own.

Big Building Program.

This desire bore fruit at the close of the war, and the most gigantic building wave that ever was experienced in any country on earth spread over America—a building program that is still sweeping over this country.

Another influence that affected the determination of the people to have better homes and better living conditions was because many of the leading newspapers entered into the spirit of the movement by printing regular real estate pages, giving publicity to all kinds of real estate transactions and educational matter with reference to homes and apartments.

Prominent architects contributed plans for homes, which were reproduced in the newspapers, and articles and pictures were printed by leading landscape men. Furniture dealers and material supply men also planned publicity that tempted home owners and prospective home builders. This great wave of publicity was joined in also by the leading magazines of the country, and the schools and colleges added their quota to the educational program.

The effect of all its great program of educational publicity, coupled with the fact that the populace had been crowded into insufficient dwellings for several years, and the additional fact that there had been an enforced cessation of construction during the period of the war, opened the flood gates, so to speak, and when the building wave began its rush until it reached a flood tide never before seen in the history of the world—a tidal wave of construction that has been rushing at the rate of about $6,000,000,000 a year for nearly ten years, with little evidence of a back wash at this time, according to reports of leading mortgage bond concerns that keep their eyes upon such matters.

Renters and Owners.

In the matter of dwellings, renters, as well as owners are no longer content with the old style house with its inartistic front and it lack of luxuries and conveniences. Every resident of today insists upon having not only a handsomely designed home, notwithstanding its size, but there must be baths, electric installations, water for all purposes, sewers, gas and a garage. The interior finish must be modern and landscape engineers are consulted with reference to the location and its ornamentation. Developers of subdivisions lay much stress upon the beauty of the home sites they offer for sale and many of them will provide an architect and landscape engineer free, who will assist the prospective builder in making his home not only luxurious in every way, but beautiful to the eye.

Old houses in need of paint and repairs simply cannot be rented at any price except to people who are too poor to pay for better things, or who do not care what kind of house they are in provided it has four walls and a roof. People who have pride in their dwelling places are being induced to rent the new and highly luxurious apartments, hundreds of which have been erected in Atlanta during the past few years, or being sold homes of their own in the outlying sections of the metropolitan district of the cities, where many splendid home parks have been and are now being developed.

Some of these home developments are attractive in the extreme, practically every human wish being provided for. In one notable instance, near Atlanta, a wealthy capitalist has provided not only for well nigh every need of the average resident in the most convenient and luxurious manner, but has looked after the joys and happiness of the youngsters by equipping playgrounds with every modern out-door toy and plaything that could be found to add to the health and pleasure of the children. On this estate the owner has restricted even the type of business buildings, in order that the harmony and beauty of the little city might be preserved.

The fact that homes can now be purchased "almost like rent" and the wage earner and artisan may own his home on even terms with his wealthier neighbor, has also had its effect upon the situation, and has caused many of the older houses to be vacated. Real estate firms, mortgage bond houses, banks, insurance companies and private capitalists are ready to provide money for the erection of homes at the lowest rates ever known in the history of the country, and any man making a living wage at the present time can have his own domicile.

People Want Better Homes.

The desire for better quarters applies not only to the private resident, but extends to hotel and apartment house patrons. Never in the history of the country has there been so many luxurious apartments and hotels and contracts are being signed almost daily for other splendid buildings of these kinds.

The spirit extends also into the business world, heads of various establishments realizing that it is better to have a modernly constructed and attractively built business home than to operate in a run-down unattractive store or building. Architects make a specialty of business houses and some of the new department stores are said to be masterpieces. They are not only handsome in the extreme, but are built to meet the convenience of the patrons and assist the operatives in waiting upon the public. Even the smaller stores at the present time are designed with a special eye to appearance and many of them add much to the beauty of their surroundings. The old corner grocery, with its wooden awning and its chairs tilted against the barrel of cabbage in the front is gradually giving place to the handsome Spanish or French type store.

Those who ask why there are so many vacant houses in Atlanta will find that in practically every instance the empty house is old, without paint, or in need of repairs. Location also has some effect upon the situation, but according to the report of authorities in the real estate world of Atlanta, there is no abnormal number of vacancies in the city. This applies not only to dwellings, but to business houses, office buildings and manufacturing plants. The present rapid growth of the city will take care of these vacancies in a very usual and normal manner.

Blue Rock Heights Owners To Build Handsome Homes

Blue Rock Heights, one of the most beautiful of the newer residential developments of Atlanta, which is being improved by the Collins Construction company on Northside drive, is rapidly assuming the aspect of a handsome residence center. The white way posts which are being erected will all be set in a short time. The effect of the brilliant blue of the posts blending with the green foliage and the beautiful colors of the surrounding woodland add much to the attractiveness of the section.

A visit to Blue Rock Heights last week disclosed many improvements that have been made recently. Walks are laid on the beautiful winding Blue Rock drive, paving is being rushed to completion and building sites are being landscaped for the homes that will be started within the next few days. A number of the choice lots have recently been sold to prospective builders and the statement was made by a representative of the Collins Construction company that several costly homes will be started at once. Among these homes will be several of novel design, the types being the modern adaptation of the famous composite Mediterranean architecture, French, Spanish and Italian styles being used by the architects as a basis. The above types of architecture will be elaborated upon by the designers and these beautiful types will be modernized and rendered modern and practicable for residents of this section.

Various Building Sites.

"We have many varying kinds of home sites," said a representative of the Collins company, "each of which may be adapted by our architects to one or more of the composite types of Mediterranean houses. Our engineers are landscaping the grounds surrounding the proposed home sites and will prepare them for the buildings by the time the plans for the structures are complete."

The fact that three prominent citizens recently purchased home sites in Blue Rock Heights and that these will erect homes at a minimum cost of $30,000, was also disclosed by the Collins representative, who personally conducted the editor of the Real Estate Review over this handsome property.

"We are taking special pride in the preliminary improvements that are being made in Blue Rock Heights and we believe that it will become the handsomest and most attractive residence development in or near Atlanta. It is a fact that restrictions are placed upon this property that will not only insure the class of the neighborhood, but that will prohibit the erection of any home or building that would in any way disturb the harmony of the beautiful surroundings.

A most important feature of Blue Rock Heights, and one that is expected to add greatly to its interest and pleasure, is the proposed development of a large natural amphitheater, sunk into a picturesque ravine, and through which a brook flows, after falling into the depression over a ledge of the blue granite that characterizes the geological formation in this section and from which the subdivision takes its name. Here the Vitrolite Products company will line a large basin with its attractive material, making a sparkling pool, about which will be built galleries and stairways that will form a perfect little amusement park. This beauty spot in the heart of a beautiful group of hardwood trees will be a most attractive place.

Beautiful Amusement Center.

"We are making plans with the Vitrolite people," said a representative, "to make the pretty swimming pool for us from that handsome white material which will glow with a most attractive whiteness among the green of the trees and the crystal water that will flow into it from the miniature cascade. It will be a place where the residents of Blue Rock Heights may gather in the evening, surrounded with brilliant white lights and entertained with music or other features, spend an evening in a 'real' fairyland, if such a thing might be."

There can be no question that a most attractive spot can be arranged in the above mentioned depression or amphitheater, for it is naturally adapted to such a development, and with the plans carried out as announced by the company, it will unquestionably become one of the most beautiful and attractive resorts in this section of the country.

That the plans for the completion of improvements in Blue Rock Heights are going forward with all haste was very evident to the observer, and it is expected that everything will be ready within a short time for the splendid homes that are planned for this subdivision. Workmen are engaged on the walks, the pavement of the drives and the landscaping of the handsome building sites, and Atlantans who have not visited that section within the past few months will be given a pleasureable surprise when they drive through this subdivision and witness for themselves what has been accomplished.

Gala Celebration To Mark Opening Of Motor Coach Line

A notable gathering of both civic and a business nature was held Friday evening in the handsome Spanish Field office of the J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin company, at Morningside, "the million-dollar residential development, in the beautiful northside section of the city. This meeting, which was presided over by Courtland S. Winn, of the citizen's committee, was called for the purpose of planning a gala celebration of the opening of the proposed motor coach line that is to be installed for the accommodation of the residents of Morningside, North Highlands, Ansley Park and other residential districts that have no street railway service.

The plans discussed by the citizens, the real estate men and property owners in that section of the city, include a monster gathering on the July day, set aside for the inauguration of the motor coach line. J. R. Smith, of the J. R. Smith & M. S. Rankin Co., developers of North Highlands and Morningside park, was present and addressed the meeting in the most enthusiastic way, telling of the plans for the opening of the new transportation line, describing the handsome new two-deck motor coaches that will be placed in operation on the new line, and speaking of the splendid development that has taken place in that part of Atlanta and Fulton county.

The plans for the big celebration were also discussed by other citizens, many of whom were present to take their part in the movement. Music, speaking, dancing and other features will mark the celebration and it is expected to be one of the most important combined business and social events of the year.

The new motor coaches are to be established by the Georgia Railway and Power company, several of whose leading officials were present Friday evening to discuss the proposed celebration. The new vehicles will be of the very latest type, with large seating capacity and constructed in such manner as to permit the use of their tops for carrying passengers. The motor coaches will be finished in the most modern way, elegant in their appointments and will operate from Morningside, on Piedmont road through North Highlands, Ansley park and up to the center of the city. They will form a great convenience to the people living in that section of the city and the opening of the line will be enthusiastically welcomed.

Haynes Manor Will Become High-Class Residence Tract

Haynes Manor, one of the new subdivisions in the rapidly advancing northside residence district, promises to become one of the most beautiful and attractive of the newer developments. This splendid tract is the property of Eugene V. Haynes, a well known capitalist of Atlanta, who is sparing no expense in making the property ready for the many beautiful homes that are expected to be built within the next few months.

A feature of Haynes Manor that is expected to prove popular, is that all the improvements have been placed before any of the home sites are offered for sale. These improvements include driveways, walks, sewers, water and electric installations, etc.

The natural advantages of Haynes Manor have attracted especial attention and admiration, and the subdivision is sid to be one of the most beautifully located tracts in the county. Its topography is gently rolling, giving a basis for much beautiful landscape work, and engineers were engaged to lay off the driveways, locate the walks and recreation centers and to otherwise beautify the place. The engineers also studied out the location of the building sites, preserving every natural advantage and making them convenient for construction.

The location of Haynes Manor, in the very heart of a rapidly improving residential section, is its chief feature of advantage. Just off Peachtree road and within a short distance from the heart of the city, it is accessible from every direction.

The development of Haynes Manor has been carefully but rapidly done, and its entire area will soon be ready for the building of homes, which will get under way, it is reported, as soon as the selling campaign is inaugurated.

Haynes Manor lots will have a high value because of their beauty, the natural and artifical advantages and the elegance of the neighborhood, in which there are many of the most splendid estates in this section.

Atlanta Will Send Record Crowd of Realtors to Detroit

The officials of the Atlanta Real Estate board will leave Sunday morning with one of the largest delegations Atlanta has ever sent to attend the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. The convention will be held in Detroit, Mich., June 23-26, inclusive.

The officers and directors of the national association have made plans for the most elaborate and constructive convention program that has ever been carried out. Business meetings and general sessions will be held in the forenoon of each day, while divisional meetings and special conferences will be held in the early hours of the afternoons. Auto and boat trips to the many points of interest in and around Detroit have been arranged for the late afternoon hours, while special entertainment features will be provided for each evening for the realtors, their wives and guests. Numerous complimentary luncheons and dinners for various divisions will also be held.

The business sessions will be divided into groups and subjects pertaining to some vital phase of the real estate business will be discussed under the leadership of realtors who are notably successful in that particular line.

The Atlanta board will be well represented at the convention, as A. S. Adams, president of the board and chairman of the national committee on ethics, will be one of the principal speakers, using as his subject, "Do We Mean What We Say?" George L. Harrison, an active member of the board and a member of the firm of Ward Wight & Co., will represent the Atlanta board in the five-minute oratorical contest. The official delegates to the convention are Ward Wight, national delegate; Dana Belser, alternate; John J. Thompson, Jesse Draper and Robert T. Jones, Jr., associate delegatess.

The Atlanta delegation has invited delegates from other boards in the state to join them in the trip to Detroit and up to date over 35 have made reservations in the party which will leave Alanta this afternoon at 4:10 o'clock. Two private cars have been provided by the Southern railway and the party will spend Monday in Cincinnati, where some of them will attend the races at Covington, while others participate in golf games which have been arranged. The delegations will arrive in Detroit Tuesday morning, June 23, the first day of the convention.

Those who will make up the Atlanta party are as follows: A. S. Adams, Ward Wight, Dana Belser, John J. Thompson, J. C. Robinson, Jesse Draper, Robert T. Pones, Jr., Georgia Harrison, E. S. Veal, Z. A. Rice, F. T. Newell, Fitzhugh Knox, Brittain Knox, Brooks Mell, W. P. Walthall, Frank Adair, H. H. Robinson, W. H. Toole, Jr., R. R. Otis, Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Calhoun, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Brown, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Sheppard, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. Marshall J. Ellis and Bob Tharpe, of Macon; A. S. Harris, G. A. Mercer, Robert Cooper, C. J. Hunter, of Savannah.

The party will return to Atlanta Sunday morning, June 28.

ASBESTOS ROOFS PROOF AGAINST FLAME DAMAGE

"A great amount of trouble, inconvenience and expense can be saved home-owners by reroofing with asbestos shingles," said a representative of Johns-Mansville, Inc. "If you have ever reroofed, you know how disagreeable it is to have the wreckers mount to your roof top with their tools in hand and tear off the old shingles, sending a cloud of dust and soot into the upper rooms of your house, while the shingles possibly fall down to the lawn and injure the shrubbery at the side of the house. The chances are, with nature's perversity, that a rainstorm will come up just when the roof is off. To add to your ill humor, when the job is completed, you receive a bill for two jobs, one for tearing off the old roof and one for putting on the new.

But by the new method of reroofing all that has to be done is to apply the asbestos shingles right over the old shingles. Once you have done this, your roof troubles are over. Of course, there may be a few bad places in the roof where the old shingles have dropped out, but the replacing of these two or three new wooden shingles is a very slight matter.

The extra layer of shingles (that is, the old wood roof) insures extra secure nailing and in addition provides an effective insulator against the heat of summer and the cold of winter.

Asbestos shingles weigh no more than the ordinary wooden shingles when wet. If by any chance the roof timbers of the house are old, a few braces may be added at a cost which is much less than the cost of tearing away the old shingles would be.

And so by the process of reroofing with asbestos shingles one is not only saved trouble, time and expense, but one has, when the job is finished, a better roof all around."

Pierce-Clark Co. Will Hold Sale of Valuable Property

The Pierce-Clarke Auction company, of Atlanta, will hold an absolute sale of 79 handsome building lots in the beautiful subdivision owned by the Daniel Brothers company at Whitefoord avenue and Boulevard De Kalb at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

In addition to a delicious barbecue, which will be served free to those who attend this auction, the company will give a band concert and offer a number of other inducements to home-seekers to attend this sale.

Not only home-seekers invited to attend this sale, at which a number of the highest-class home sites will be offered for sale, but the attention of investors is called to this tract, which has a wide promise of increase in values. The location is one that has a chance for expansion and improvement and special attention is called to the surrounding developments.

The improvements already down on this property include concrete streets, gas, sewerage, water, electric lights and power and proximity to the car lines and highways.

The fact that these lots will be sold at the price offered by the bidder and that attractive, liberal terms will be permitted, is expected to make this one of the most alluring auctions of the season.

Record Building Wave for U. S. Predicted by Straus

Detroit, Mich., June 23.—America is in the midst of an era of building construction of such magnitude as no nation in history ever dreamed of undertaking, S. W. Straus, president of S. W. Straus & company, asserted today at the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Mr. Straus predicted that the record of $5,750,000,000 of new building set by the United States in 1924 would become a new record of $6,000,000,000 in 1925, and that the prosperity prevalent in the building industry today would continue indefinitely, accompanied by a condition of general nationwide prosperity in all affiliated industries.

Era of Prosperity.

His message to business men was that "In so far as the effects of gigantic building operations go, we are going to have good business." He declared that, with a $6,000,000,000 building program outlined for the year, "all business must move forward along prosperous lines; all trades and industries will be benefited." His conclusion was that "the business pessimist of today has small room, indeed, for comfort."

"Europe and the Orient no longer furnish the world its ideas on building construction, city planning and community development," said the speaker. "America, which until recently was a follower, has become a leader which now dominates, both in methods of financing and methods of executing huge development projects."

"We are not only developing our own types of buildings and improvements," he said, "we are leading and teaching the rest of the world in the arts and sciences of building, in community planning and civic development. The enterprise and vision of America's real estate men, her architects and her builders has brought about this fransfer of leadership."

Cities Must Rebuild.

"We have entered a sweeping cycle of rebuilding," Mr. Straus continued. "Every city in the nation today is confronted by the fact that it must practically rebuild itself. They already are doing it as rapidly as the tools and implements of the builder permit."

Of the 320 billion dollars of wealth in the United States, 155 billions, or nearly one-half, is represented in land and its built-up improvements, according to Mr. Straus, and, although there may be no apparent housing shortage, the demand of Americans for modern homes, as well as business buildings, portends the early reconstruction of every building erected within the last 15 to 25 years.

"There may be enough roofs today to cover every citizen of our nation, and enough floor area in which to transact all the business of the country," he said, "but building on a large scale will go on just the same.

"The question is not whether there are enough buildings and enough homes. The question is whether those buildings and homes are of a kind that the people want and demand and are entitled to by right of their education to more wholesome modes of living and more wholesome customs.

Every City Affected.

"In every American city there are thousands upon thousands of apartments, individual homes and tenements which are obsolete. They were erected 15, 20, 25 years ago. Today they are marked for demolition by the oncoming forces of progress.

"Since the end of the war building operations in this country have been gradually mounting toward higher levels. There have been brief periods of recession, but the general trend of building operations has been continually upward. A decade or so ago, or even less, you and I thought in terms of millions. Today we think in terms of billions."

The basis for this progress "is the ever-advancing standard of living in the United States," the banker said. "A majority of the people are living in far better homes today than they were a score of years ago, and the next 20 years will witness a still greater improvement.

"The impulse that today is driving the American building industry in terms of billions of dollars annually is a human force that can no more be stayed than the surging waters of Niagara."

Suburbs Are Growing.

Mr. Straus cited the recent extraordinary suburban migration as a clear illustration of building progress, declaring that the movement of millions of people from urban to semi-rural communities was a readjustment of convenience, and not of necessity. In some large centers of population, he said, there is more rural building than there is within the cities themselves. But this, he added, is but a side issue, in no way affecting the growth of cities.

"New cities grander and finer than ever were the dreams of man," he continued, "are arising everywhere out of the old. We have only to open our eyes to see everywhere this transformation—this miracle of the marching forces of progress.

"Some economists will tell you that the extent of our building operations must depend largely upon the shortage of office buildings, commercial buildings, apartment houses or small homes, but this equilibrium is being restored and the delicately balanced differences of supply and demand will be adjusted in so far as the question of actual shortage exists.

Future Buildings To Be Gigantic.

"But the great building work of the present era—the rebuilding of America—will go on regardless of momentary conditions. The ramifications of the building industry are limitless. All trades and industries are benefited by its activities. Hence, there is satisfaction and significance in the fact that current building operations are going on such a large scale."

No fair prediction could be made concerning the up-in-the-air development of the cities of the future, Mr. Straus continued.

"Fifty years ago," the speaker said, "no one dreamed of a building reaching 30 stories into the sky. Another 50 years may bring about just as radical changes and the skyscraper of the closing decades of the twentieth century may attain heights and dimensions beyond the dream of any living today.

Airplanes Revolutionize Sky Lines.

"This may be brought about by the development of the airplane. Aerial navigation may produce as many changes in the lives of men in the construction of our buildings and in the contour of city sky-lines as have the discovery of steam and the development of electricity."

A heavy obligation, he said, rests in the hands of the country's real estate men in this continued progress of the building industry, as he considered it a fact that "business inherits obligations that are most sacred."

"This would be a very sorry world indeed if our business vision were limited to the standard of dollars and cents," he concluded. "Business often is criticised, and rightly so, on the grounds of selfishness. But observation will justify the statement that American business in its entirety is making a sincere and successful effort to advance the general welfare of mankind."

Crestlawn Opens New Section for Immediate Sale

"We have completely sold our first section and we are preparing for the sale of lots in the new sections that are to be thrown open to the investing public within a short time."

This statement was made by D. G. Jones, manager of the Crestlawn cemetery, who has conducted the sale of a large number of lots in that handsome burial place within the past few weeks. Mr. Jones stated that the Atlanta people are keen judges of sound investments and that they are equally quick to recognize the value of property that is offered for their consideration.

"We have had no difficulty," said Mr. Jones, "in demonstrating to the people the advantages to be obtained by purchasing Crestlawn lots, both as burial places for their families and in multiple numbers as investments. Our appeal has gone home to numbers of Atlanta people who have bought these lots, as our records will show. Crestlawn is rapidly becoming one of the most substantial enterprises of its nature in the south, and the lots we are offering to the public now are being sold much under their real intrinsic value. They are just as bound to increase in value as Atlanta is bound to increase in population, and investors in these securities will realize many times on the value of their initial investments."

Increase in Value.

Mr. Jones cited his company's books as proof of the statements with reference to the cemetery and gave figures to prove that many of those who invested in these lots in the early days of the development are now holding their lots at many times the value that was originally placed upon them or have realized big profits upon them.

"Our business is growing," continued the manager," and we are confident that the profits to be made upon these lots will increase with Atlanta's increase in population. It is as simple as the 'rule of three' that the larger the city grows the more demand there will be for cemetery space, and as we have the most logical and the most practical place, as well as one of the most beautiful cemeteries in the south, there is no question but that our property will make money for our investors and will increase in importance every day. There are so few practical places that might be used in this way, and this cemetery hav been developed with a special view toward making it the outstanding enterprise of its kind in the south. We are confident that Crestlawn is a going concern and that every investor who has obtained one of these securities will be more than repaid for the faith and trust he has placed in our company."

Crestlawn cemetery is a notable southern achievement, having been taken from the rough, undeveloped battlefield of former days and made into one of the most modern and beautiful burying grounds, perhaps, in this section of the south. The entire development was done upon the owner's faith in the future growth and expansions of the Gate City of the South, and that the faith of Crestlawn's developers was more than justified is demonstrated by the fact that, in addition to the magnificent marble mausoleum, there stands many other evidences of prosperity and good management in the big cemetery.

Beautiful Burial Grounds.

"While we offer many lots upon which the people may place their loved one after their passing, we have the big marble mausoleum—proof against damp and decay, proof against anything that might decompose the remains. This splendid building, erected of Georgia marble, stands out as the most attractive feature of the big cemetery. Thousands of people have been attracted to this beautiful white building and many tourists have halted in their cars to ask what it is. We are proud not only of the architectural design of this mausoleum, but we are proud also of the splendid service that has been given by the building. Not one single body that has been entrusted to the care of the crypts in this mausoleum has ever caused a word of dissatisfaction and our best pleased patrons are those who have crypts in the mausoleum."

Mr. Jones said that an active campaign of selling will begin within the next few days and that hundreds of lots in the newly-developed section now being thrown open to the public will be ready for the inspection of the public within a short time. "We are making every effort to have these lots ready for our prospective patrons at once," said Mr. Jones, "and everything possible is being done to complete the improvements ready for early inspection. The cemetery is in part particularly beautiful shape at the present time and we are anxious that the people visit the place and see for thselves the many attractions that we are able to offer. There is perhaps no place in the city that is endowed with more of nature's advantages than Crestlawn and we are desirous of showing the people these many splendid advantages."

SOUTHERN STATES FIRM LANDS BIG CONTRACT

Since May 1 the Southern States Construction company has closed contracts totaling $111,484 for 20 homes in Atlanta and one in Griffin, Ga., according to Keller F. Melton, vice president and sales manager. This company recently opened a branch in Griffin and will carry on the same line of construction as they have in Atlanta.

Mr. Mellon states that, as a rule, the summer months are not as brisk building months as the spring and fall months, nevertheless he attributes much of this building of homes by the Southern States Construction company to their unusually attractive methods of financing and building.

For the family that is using their cash for some other purpose the Southern States' plan of building and financing is exceptionally attractive. All that is required by this company is the owning of the lot. They build the home, finance it and turn it over to the owner ready to live in and all the payments may be handled on convenient monthly terms over a period of years.

The officers of the company are Glenn Marshbanks, president; Keller F. Melton, vice president, and Marrie Brown, secretary and treasurer.

ATLANTAN ENTERS CATHOLIC PRIESTHOOD

The Rev. Francis Marion Perry, S. M., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Perry of 106 Juniper street, was ordained to the Catholic priesthood in Washington, D. C., recently. He will celebrate his first solemn mass at the Sacred Heart church today at 10:30 o'clock.

Father Perry was ordiained for the society of Mary or Marist Fathers, who have charge of the Sacred Heart church and Marist college in this city. The ceremony of ordination was performed in the Church of Saint Dominic in Washington, D. C., by Rt. Rev. Thomas J. Shahan S. T. D., rector of the Catholic university, and bishop of the titular see of Germanicapolis.

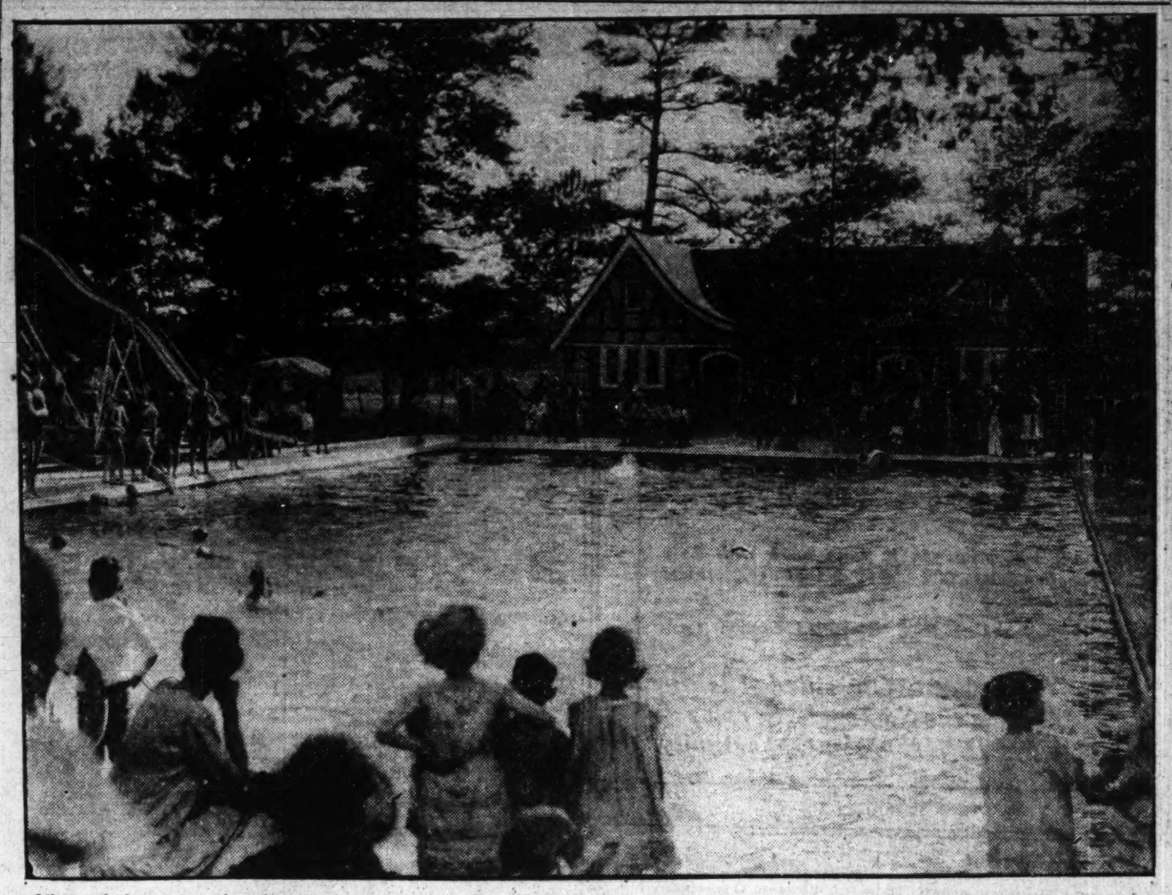

Father Perry is an honor graduate of Marist college. He began his ecclesiastical studies at Marist seminary in Washington, D. C., where he completed his classical course in six years. Another period of six years was spent in the study of philosophy and sacred theology at the Marist house of studies affiilated with the Catholic university in Washington. Father Perry's unusual talents led him to take two degrees, that of bachelor of sacred theology, and of bachelor of canon law.

His first solemn mass today at the Sacred Heart church will be his first performance of those impressive ceremonies. Assisting him at the altar will be the pastor, Rev. James Horton, S. M., as assistant priest.

The sermon will be preached by the Rev. Richard Smith, S. M., D. D., of Washington, D. C., Superior general of the Marists in the United States.

Father Perry will spend the summer in Atlanta and in September will take up his duties wherever he will be as assigned in the Washinton province of the Marist fathers.

Beautiful Swimming Pool and Bathhouse at Avondale Estates

View of the new swimming pool at Avondale Estates. The pool is fed from a continuous flow of fresh water from a group of springs nearby. The flow is sufficient to refill the pool at a rate of three and one-half times a week. The attractive new bathhouse in the background is equipped with showers, lounging rooms, and other conveniences, and has all the atmosphere of the country club. The new pool was opened Sunday, June 14, when thousands of Atlantans were in attendance.

BOY SCOUTS GIVEN MODERN NEW HUT BY CIVIC LEAGUE

The North Boulevard Park Civic league, sponsors of Troop No. 31 Boy Scouts, has presented to Atlanta council of Boy Scouts a boy scout hut a home for the troop, which is chartered through the North Boulevard Park Civic league.

Exercises were opened by the scout master, Jeff McCord, with demonstrations by members of the troop, reciting the scout laws, allegiance to the flag and investiture of a new member with the rank of tenderfoot scout.

After this, the exercises were turned over to the toastmaster, E. Stevens, member of troop committees, who opened with the song "America," sung by all present.

George W. Tumlin, who was president of the North Boulevard Park Civic league for 1924, in which the troop was chartered, gave a brief history of the troop. Haile L. Parks, president of the league, presented the hut in the name of the league to Atlanta council of Boy Scouts, represented by R. C. Darby, who accepted it and in turn presented it to Troop No. 31, represented by L. A. James, chairman of the troop committee, who accepted with scouts rallied around him. He then presented Eagle Scout Kirk DeVore, senior patrol leader of the troop, who voiced appreciation for the hut.

A. A. Jamison, scout executive for Atlanta council, made an impressive talk on boy scout work in general and Willard Davison, field executive, made a "scout-to-scout" talk to boys.

The meeting adjourned to gather around the camp fire outdoors, where refreshments were served by Mrs. Hughes, vice president of the Boulepard Park auxiliary, assisted by scouts.

The hut is located in a grove on the hillside overlooking Elkmont drive in North Boulevard park, and is surrounded by several acres of ground which is available for scout activities.

CONVICT WHIPPINGS IN NORTH CAROLINA WILL BE PROBED

Raleigh, N. C., June 20.—Charges of flogging and other mistreatment of prisoners in the convict camps of North Carolina today resulted in an order by Governor McLean that a sweeping investigation be made.

The announcement came after a conference between the governor and other state officials at which it was decided that an expert, furnished by the state board of health, would be placed with the department of public welfare in order to conduct the probe.

AMERICUS ROTARIANS FAVOR TAX REFORM

Americus, Ga., June 20.—(Special) The repeal of the Georgia inheritance tax law, unalterable opposition to a state income tax and the exemption from taxation of new industries coming into Sumter county were features in a resolution passed by the Americus Rotary club at their meeting Wednesday. The secretary was instructed to place a copy of the resolution in the hands of each of the county's representatives in the legislature and the state senator from this district.

In taking the initiative in Sumter county's war on what are termed, undesirable state taxes the Rotary club has caused other civic organizations to join the ranks in an effort to get the legislature to act.

Colonel W. W. Dykes, speaking on the inheritance tax at the Rotary club, declared it to be "confiscatory and socialistic" and that no judge had ever written a decision that gives the state the right to make itself a legal heir to any man's property.

OUTLOOK FOR TOBACCO GOOD, SAYS WESTBROOK

Athens, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—The outlook for the tobacco crop, which is just now beginning to be harvested, is very promising, according to E. C. Westbrook, tobacco specialist of the State College of Agriculture, who has just made a survey of the situation throughout the tobacco belt of south Georgia.

"The busiest season for the tobacco grower has just begun," says Professor Westbrook, "and the process of harvesting and curing is among the most important operations to be faced, for oftentimes the success of the tobacco farmer is determined by the way in which he handles his crop in these stages. If the tobacco is pulled too green it cannot be cured bright and the quality is poor. On the other hand, if it is allowed to become over ripe, it will be dead and lifeless.

"The temperature in the curing barn is also a very important point. If it is not regulated properly, the tobacco may be streaked, spotted, dark, green or otherwise damaged, and the price is of course affected."

Deaths by Autos Increase In 58 Cities, Report Asserts; Atlanta Is Included in List

Fatality Rate of 19 Per 100,000 Population Is Shown in Total of 5,030 Killed in 1924.

Washington, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Deaths caused by automobiles and other motor vehicles, except motorcycles, in 58 of the principal cities of the country in 1924 increased, in the aggregate, both in number and in proportion to population, figures announced today by the department of commece showing a total of 5,030 deaths and a fatality rate of 19 per 100,000 of population.

This compares with 4,905 deaths and a rate of 18.8 for the same cities in 1920, with 15.7 in 1921 and 16.9 in 1922.

While New York had the largest number of deaths, 1,001, the highest rate, 34.8, was reported from Paterson, N. J., and 45 cities exceeded the New York rate of 16.6. The second highest rate, 29.6, was shown in Pittsburg, and the third highest, 28.5 for Camden, N. J.

Bedford, Mass., had the lowest rate, 9.8, while the second lowest, 11.5, was reported for San Antonio, and the third, 11.7, for Des Moines.

Comparative figures on total deaths and the rate per 100,000 of populations for the last two years include:

BONUS LOAN WAR DECLARED BY U. S. TO CURB TRAFFIC

Washington, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—As a result of the seizure of 235 soldier bonus certificates in the hands of one money lender in San Antonio, Texas, the secret service today declared war on those who are trafficking in the certificates.

The veterans' bureau, advised by Chief Moran, of the secret service, also has promised immediate action.

The San Antonio money lender is said by Chief Moran to have charged $7 as a commission for making a loan, and interest at the rate of almost 100 per cent. He said the loans totaled more than $8,000.

The law permits the holder of a certificate to file civil suit against any one who accepts a certificate as a loan security prior to January 1, 1927, the first date upon which a loan can legally be made. In each such case the veteran can recover $100 damages.

HI-Y CAMP OPENS NEAR COLUMBUS; TO WORK AND PLAY

Columbus, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—For the chance of fellowship together, exchange of ideas and experiences and to enjoy the great outdoors, Hi-Y club boys from different parts of the state will begin a week of conference in camp on Monday evening at Juniper, Ga., near Columbus, under the direction of the state Y. M. C. A.

Mornings in camp will be devoted to the conference program with Bible study, Hi-Y methods, discussion, meditation period and platform addresses, but the afternoons will be given wholly to camp recreation such as boating, fishing, hiking, swimming, baseball, tennis and volley ball.

The Hi-Y clubs are organizations of mature high school boys banded together on a basis of clean sport, clean speech and clean living. The avowed purpose is "to create, maintain and extend throughout the school and community high standards of Christian character."

For two years the clubs of Georgia have sent representatives to the annual camp conference and the pending gathering will make the third consecutive effort of this kind.

Among the speakers who will be present are: W. W. Orr, of the George Muse company; Thomas Johnson, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; Dr. A. E. Wheeler, Atlanta; Columbus Roberts, Columbus; Dr. Clark Foreman, Atlanta; J. J. McConnell, of Bombay, India; A. B. Richardson, Columbus, and C. B. Loomis, regional officer of the Y. M. C. A.

The conference is under the immediate direction of H. E. Montague, state boys' secrtary of the Y. M. C. A.

PROFESSOR GRANTED DECREE OF DIVORCE

Chicago, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Professor R. C. Journey, an instructor at North Carolina State Agricultural college today was granted a divorce by Superior Judge Sabath on his cross bill to Mrs. Helen Journey's divorce petition.

Mrs. Journey was given the custody of the two children but Professor Journey is to be permitted to see them whenever he desires.

Last January Mrs. Journey filed suit for divorce, charging cruelty. The professor countered with accusations of misconduct with Oscar Harmon, a law student, who had been a roomer in the Journey home. Harmon denied the charges and testified that the professor had attempted to hire him to compromise Mrs. Journey.

YOUNG PEOPLE ELECT AT INDIAN SPRINGS

Indian Spring, Ga., June 20.—(Special).—The Young People's conference of the Presbyterian church of Georgia, which has been in session here for 10 days, with about 300 young people in attendance, closed Friday night with the election of officers.

The following were elected:

President, Wallace Alston, Decatur; vice president, Joseph Donaldson, Statesboro; secretary, Linnora Harvey, Atlanta; treasurer, Harvey Slade, Moultrie.

The committee chairmen selected are: Charlie Harris, Winder; Embry Horan, Dalton; Eloise Moye, Waycross; John Snelling, Athens, and Mary Zealey, Augusta.

Poland To Bar German Goods From Her Ports

Warsaw, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—The political committee of the Polish cabinet has adopted a resolution that will result in an economic war with Germany. The importation of various German goods will be prohibited. The amount of German products to be kept out of the country will equal the Polish loss in trade resulting from the German embargo on coal after the league of nations arrangement for the settlement in the Silesian fields expires.

The period during which Polish and Silesian coal was exported to Germany free under the agreement following the partition of upper Silesia, expired June 16. Poland sent 500,000 tons of coal to Germany a month. The German government proposed to accept one-eighth of this amount after June 16 on the condition that the Polish government would grant political concessions to Germans in Poland. Poland refused and the Berlin authorities notified Warsaw that no more Polish coal would be accepted in Germany.

Gotham Man Admits Intimate Relations With Clubman's Wife

New York, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Talbot W. Chambers, named in the divorce action of Thomas H. Symington, manufacturer and clubman of Baltimore and New York, against Mrs. Ida May Symington, admitted on the stand in the state supreme court today that he had been intimate with Mrs. Symington.

Chambers, head of a local coal company, told of a visit he paid to Mrs. Symington's New York apartment last March and of an evening she subsequently spent at his home.

A letter to Chambers from Mrs. Symington, while she was at Palm Beach last winter, which was introduced, said she would have accepted an invitation to a party at Nassau "if you were here," and "dared" him to come to Palm Beach, adding "everybody has a beau except me."

Mrs. Symington had just entered the courtroom when Chambers made his admission.

EPIPHANY CHURCH TO HOLD 'COUNTY FAIR'

The workers of Epiphany Episcopal church in Inman Park are arranging to hold a county fair and sample sale from June 23 to 26, in their Parish House on Cleburne avenue.

The fair will be open from 3 to 10 o'clock each day, and free entertainment of the most interesting kind will be given throughout the afternoon and evening.

Many merchants and manufacturers of national fame have sent goods to be displayed and disposed of. The local firms in Atlanta will be well represented and the firms and merchants in our own community have responded to a man.

ATTORNEYS HIT OPINION OF JUDGE ON MARRIAGE VOW

An unusual plea was made to the state supreme court in an appeal for a new trial in the divorce case of Evitt v. Evitt, from Wilcox county. Attorneys for A. L. Evitt objected to part of the judge's charge, where he had stated that marriages were "ordered of God, sanctified by the covenant of Isaac and Rebecca, esteemed and evidenced by all upright men."

The attorneys contended that matrimony was not so serious a proposition as these words would imply and that their result would be to prejudice the jury in favor of the wife.

The supreme court granted the plea for new trial, but not on this ground. The new trial was granted because of admission of some of the evidence of Mrs. Evitt.

Mrs. Harriett Evitt filed suit for divorce against her husband, setting forth that they were married in 1886 and had lived happily, raising a family of eight children. Discord crept into the home after the children were grown, however, and separation resulted. The lower court granted the divorce with $60 a month alimony and Evitt appealed the decision.

Kidnaping Plot Denied.

Los Angeles, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Three men accused of plotting to kidnap Mary Pickford, film star, several weeks ago, pleaded not guilty yesterday and their trial date was set for July 22. The three are Charles Stevens, Adrian Wood and Claude Holcombe.

Bringing 'Em Together

The trend of modern civilization has been to draw closer the lines between individuals everywhere. The mission that most public services perform for people today is—to bring them together.

The railways, the telephone, the telegraph, the radio, have put people in more immediate touch with their fellow-citizens—of the same city or three thousand miles away.

Much the same process has been going on in the world of supply and demand. Advertising is bridging the gap between buyers and sellers.

Here in Atlanta one of the most convenient and serviceable connecting links between people who have what you want to buy or want what you have to sell is The Constitution's Classified Section.

It will keep you in close touch with daily opportunities to save money and gain comfort and satisfaction.

RIVERS ROAD HOME

THIS is a house which we can thoroughly recommend to any purchaser on the lookout for a high class, North Side home; it is known as No. 9 Rivers Road; between Habersham Road and Muscogee Road, a locality which is one of the best residential communities around Atlanta. We realtors do not have to say anything in recommending homes located in Peachtree Heights Park; the location commends itself. One thing we know positively, THIS HOUSE IS GOING TO BE SOLD. Since we advertised it specifically we have had more inquiries about it than any house recently offered; this shows the demand for houses in that particular section.

IT IS a two-story house, containing eight rooms and two baths, with vapor heat (4 bedrooms); the arrangement is such as to give two bedrooms and bath on the first floor and two bedrooms and bath on the second floor; the lot is of unusual size; fronting 125 feet and running back 500 feet, but is much wider in the rear; it is the largest lot platted on the Peachtree Heights map; on the premises there is a two-room servants' house with bath, and also a double garage; the house is practically new and in perfect condition from top to bottom; we have inspected this house and our salesmen are enthusiastic over it; we have recently been authorized to make the price $26,500; the house has not been offered before at this figure; make an appointment with our salesmen to inspect it.

Location Alone Certifies the Desirability of

Morningside Park

And Distinguishes It As a Property of Exceptional Merit

Morningside Park lies between Ansley Park and Druid Hills, two of Atlanta's successful residential subdivisions and is bounded by North Boulevard, Highland Avenue and Piedmont Avenue, three main traffic arteries leading out from the center of the city.

Morningside Park is restricted to prevent the encroachment of the undesirable and to forever insure it as residential park.

One of the outstanding achievements of Morningside is the fact that more than three million dollars has been spent in improvements and building homes in the last twenty months. We believe this record is unequaled by any other development in Atlanta.

Nowhere In Atlanta Can You Find a Better Place To Live or Invest Your Money

Adjoining Morningside is Piedmont Park, a 160-acre tract of improved playgrounds where every form of recreation is provided for—from the sand piles and slide boards, for the little tots, to swimming, golf and tennis for the grown-ups, all within a few minutes' walk of Morningside.

A Story of Crest Lawn Development

(An oft told story reprinted from a recent Atlanta paper.)

From a bleak tanglewood of jack oak, pines and bramble briars of a few years ago, a vision is being fashioned into a reality—the vision of men who saw the need of a fitting resting place for the loved ones of those who would like the solemn quietude of outlying places, yet within easy reach of Atlanta.

Their choice was the present location of Crest Lawn Cemetery. Then it was only a stretch of land, rough by nature, and scarred in trenches made during the Battle of Atlanta.

Landscape artists have fashioned these "old red hills" into a place of solemn beauty, and today from the first moment you enter the big granite gates you will appreciate the thoughtfulness and feeling of the caretaker. The graceful rise and fall of driveways seem to say, "Linger a little longer." The shrubbery, too, seems to denote a restful mood. Yet with all the work of the architects, simplicity dominates the scene. No frivolous fancies mar the reverent beauty of this sacred resting place. Carefully laid plans and rules of upkeep assure you of even more grace and beauty as time goes on.

The idea of solemn, simple beauty and quietude, conceived in its infancy by its developers, has been religiously adhered to since the opening of the first small section, through its growth, until it was decided that a fitting monument should be erected, and this could best be personified in a great mausoleum, in which many prominent Atlantans were quick in making reservations.

Today Crest Lawn is a complete and beautiful cemetery. Its driveways are paved throughout, lawns and shrubbery are a source of beauty and comfort.

Too beautiful? Never! The place of rest for loved ones could never be too beautiful. The dollars spent for Crest Lawn's beauty will gladden troubled hearts for years to come.

Another Chance.

HESITATION and procrastination usually mean an opportunity lost. It isn't often the unusual investment is offered again. Here is an exception.

We have just completed the sale of a new section—at greatly reduced prices—The demand was so great—and our need for additional space so urgent that we are opening section No. 2 to be sold at the same low prices.

Unusual Profit Is Certain

THIS new section will be as beautiful and as valuable as the rest of Crest Lawn.
The prices of the lots we are offering are just about one-fourth their value—about one-sixth the price of lots in the older sections. Enhancement is absolutely certain.

You Cannot Possibly Lose

YOU are buying a necessity—a purchase that must grow in value day by day—no upkeep expense—no assessments. There is no possibility of loss.

When This Sale Is Over There Will Not Be Another Chance

When our Sale quota for this section is sold, it may be years before such an opportunity is offered again. In all probability it will never be offered, for Crest Lawn is taking its place as one of the most beautiful and most complete cemeteries in the South.

Don't Delay---Act Now

A phone call will bring full details—and if you wish, a complete inspection of Crest Lawn.

First Section
SOLD

The quota of lots in the first section offered in our Pre-Development Sale has been sold. Those retained by us are now priced 50% above the Sale Prices and will increase still more. Ask any of these buyers how pleased they are with their investment.

LISTEN FOLKS!
(STATION F. M. T. BROADCASTING.)

IN Dayton, Tenn., the brainiest men in the world (in their particular lines) are assembling to decide whether or not the human race descended from the monkey. That was all brought about by an enterprising yankee who wanted to show his girl friend back east that his adopted town was on the map. Well, that's that, so let me tell you how well I know about ATLANTA. I mailed a letter from MARSEILLES, FRANCE, addressed to Mrs. ——, No. —— Peachtree street, ATLANTA, (without putting U. S. A. or Ga. on it). She got it (I sure wish she hadn't), but what I wanted to say is this:
IN the GRANT PARK section I have a homey looking five-room house, all conveniences, shrubbery and all, for $2,000. Just off of South Boulevard I have a dandy new five-room bungalow and garage in front for $2,200.. DON'T offer me all cash for these for I don't want to be bothered with loaning the money. The weather is too warm to worry with it.
$2,489—IN KIRKWOOD, five rooms, all conveniences, built two years. He paid forty-five hundred, but just must go to Florida. $600 cash and I'll charge the balance.
IN WEST END—One in about the same shape.
INVESTMENT—For $12,000 and the assumption of a loan of $48,000 at 5½% I'll sell you a nearly new brick apartment on north side, worth over a hundred thousand, and bringing in about $1,000 a month.
IN THE COOL MOUNTAINS, north of ATLANTA, two little farms, springs, fruit, good houses, bottom land, etc. $1,500 each.
WRITE me about locating in ATLANTA, where BUSINESS is always GOOD.

SOUTHERN PLANTS BRING ECONOMY, SAYS JOHN LOGAN

Head of Logan-Long Roofing Company Sees Atlanta as Manufacturing Center.

More economical roofing for southern builders and prompter service on orders are predicted by John Logan, president of the Logan-Long Roofing company, Chicago Cincinnati and Atlanta, following Mr. Logan's recent tour of inspection of the Logan-Long company's half-million dollar plant just completed at 125 Sylvan road, Atlanta. Mr. Logan expressed pleasure at the prospects of being able to serve southern builders more adequately by means of the new service his organization will be able to render from this southern factory.

Through thorough plans for manufacturing and energetic sales efforts this company already has become an active factor in the southern construction field. A number of orders have been received and now are being filled. One contracting house, builders of a home that won the second prize in the national "Better Homes Contest," has reported its intention of using Logan-Long roofing exclusively on all its new structures. Other southern construction concerns have been attracted by the convenience and economy offered in the service of the Atlanta plant.

Logan a Pioneer.

Mr. Logan is a pioneer in the roofing field, a self-made man who has risen through the rough ranks of industry to the commanding position of power and influence which he has achieved in the business world of today. As former director and vice president in charge of the roofing division of one of the country's largest manufacturers of building supplies, he gained experience which has proved of untold value in developing the resources and markets of the Logan-Long company.

The two vice presidents of the Logan-Long company are Godfrey B. Long, of Cincinnati, and James W. Quigley, of Franklin, Ohio. Mr. Long is in charge of sales and Mr. Quigley is director of production for the Logan-Long organization. Other directors of the company are John C. McKeown, of Chicago, prominent contractor and one of the builders of the famous McKeown Lattis Truss Roof, and O. F. Transue, of Alliance, Ohio, for 30 years connected with and now president of the Transue and Williams Steel Forging corporation.

It was stated yesterday at the big Atlanta plant of the Logan-Long Roofing company that every officer and director of the company is thoroughly "sold" on the future prosperity of the south and that the company is going after business in this section in a big way. An estimate by one of the company's men shows that a saving of approximately 83 cents a roll frequently can be made to southern builders by means of taking full advantage of the Atlanta service offered by the Logan-Long plant

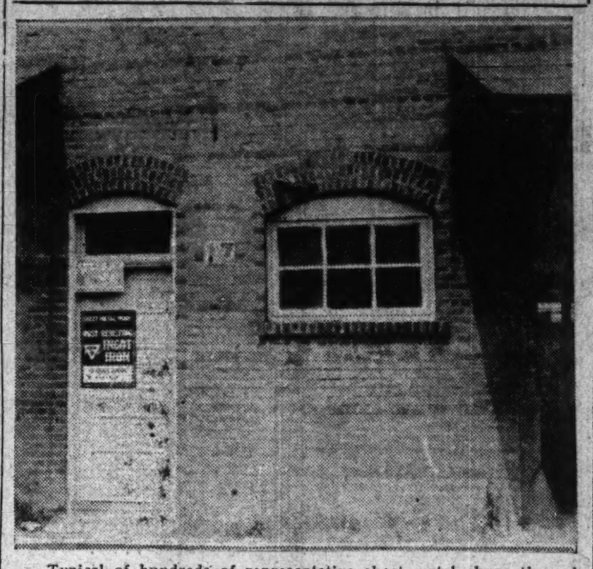

Solving Servant Problem Is Easy With Vitrolite

Vitrolite in the kitchen is attracting the attention of many housewives, say officials of the Vitrolite company, 10-12 West Baker street, "just off the Peachtrees," Atlanta. This sanitary equipment for walls and ceilings is succeeding in rendering kitchens cool and more comfortable for cooks, and in even making dishwashing a little less burdensome to some husbands.

Vitrolite is a thoroughly nonporous material fixed to walls and ceilings by means of a specially prepared cement. Accessories are furnished by the Vitrolite company, and these fittings can be permanently fastened into the Vitrolite walls to last for scores of years, strong and sanitary.

"Sno-Wite" accessories, offered by the Vitrolite Products company for installation in bathrooms, are now manufactured in shades of varying colors. Many artistic bathrooms have been outfitted with Vitrolite and "Sno-Wite" accessories, and dealers and builders interested are invited to visit the Vitrolite display rooms at 10-12 West Baker street, Atlanta. Full descriptive literature will be sent free to those who write for this information.

Distributors Mark Metal Shops

Typical of hundreds of representative sheet metal shops throughout the country is this shop of the Kennedy company, 17 Oakland avenue, Atlanta. This is one of the many sheet metal shops in the south that now display the Armco Ingot Iron sign as a badge of quality workmanship.

Officials of the Dixie Culvert & Metal Company, from whose warehouses at East Point this section of the country is supplied with rust-resisting Armco ingot iron, say: "No man's work is better than the material he uses on the job. Skilled workmanship is wasted if the metal fails to endure. That is why sheet metal workers prefer Armco ingot iron. For Armco ingot iron, the purest iron made, is practically free from the impurities that promote rust. Because there is no satisfactory substitute for Armco ingot iron, considering long life and low cost, substantial savings are always possible through the patronizing of a sheet metal shop displaying one of the distinctive Armco signs."

Charles M. Broome, Jr., manager of the sheet metal department of the Dixie Culvert & Metal Company, reports a consistent demand for these Armco signs on the part of sheet metal shops throughout the south.

Heating Hurt Building Proves Tremendous Job

One of the largest office buildings in the south is the Hurt building, Atlanta, and the heating of this building is a man's sized job, according to E. W. Klein, southern manager for the Warren-Webster company. This is the company which has supplied the heating equipment for the enlarged Hurt building.

Additional interest in the fact that Mr. Klein's organization will furnish the heating equipment for this structure is derived from the fact that Mr. Klein is a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology. In 1902 he was graduated and immediately became active in developing systems of heating and ventilating. He has made his way to the top of this field of engineering and today is recognized as one of the leading heating and ventilating engineers in the country.

Mr. Klein attributes the satisfaction which Warren-Webster systems give throughout the years largely to the careful installation and continuous service which the company renders to its customers. Every Warren-Webster system in the south, Mr. Klein points out, is doing its full duty after years of constant use.

The Warren-Webster company supplies heating systems for every sort of structure from bungalows to office buildings.

Atlanta Becoming Paris Of Southeast in Styles

You may meet her in Macon—
Or perhaps in Valdosta—
Or maybe in Rome.
In almost any Georgia town or city you'll find milady with the chic bonnet tossing itself overhead with an air distinctly Parisian.

What gives that style to her headgear?

Can it be the line of the brim? The shape of the crown? Or is it just the cute little way she wears it?

Yes, she wears it right; but there's something in the hat, too. If you should make so bold as to inquire, she would tell you in all truthfulness that the hat isn't Paris at all. Oh, my dear, no! It's Atlanta!

Atlanta today is the producing center of hundreds of thousands of ladies' hats, misses' hats and young girls' hats—hats for Easter, hats for commencement, hats for summer, hats for traveling, hats for the sea and hats for the shore. In fact, if you begin investigating Atlanta's production of hats you will wonder why in the world it is necessary for anyone outside of busy Atlanta to produce any hats at all.

Milliners say that southerners have the same talent for hat-making that the Parisians have. There is the same know-how, the knack of the thing, in Dixie that you will find in France—and Atlanta manufacturers have not hesitated to capitalize on the southerners' eye for beauty and style in bonnets.

Show Big Success.

At the spring opening Atlanta put on a millinery show this year which opened the eyes of southern buyers. The most exquisite creations in the country were gathered for the exhibit.

It has not been so many years since we all turned to the east for the last word in millinery, but due to the earnest cooperation of Atlanta's wholesale milliners this idea has been abandoned and today that which has so long held sway in the east and north now dominates in Georgia.

Last year over $5,000,000 was spent in the south in buying millinery from Atlanta houses, and this year Atlanta expects to show an increase in millinery buying that will prove beyond a doubt that the south leads in supplying the late styles. This credit will be due to active cooperation of the leading millinery firms in this city.

With the idea that cooperation and not competition would build this business big the millinery men of Atlanta overcame the petty jealousies that are so prevalent in all angles of business and have made Atlanta enjoy the distinction of being the millinery center of the south.

Distribution headquarters are in Atlanta, also, for many lines of hats manufactured in the north. Various stores handle large eastern and foreign lines, all blending into the steady stream of millinery which is handled through Atlanta.

Wholesale Association Authorities.

If the millinery business continues to increase in Atlanta, this city may be expected to outfit all Dixie in hats before many years. Families coming to the city for opera or for school or other purposes make the most of their time in Atlanta by setting apart certain hours for shopping in hats.

One of the recognized authorities on millinery style in Atlanta is the Atlanta Wholesale Millinery association. This organization has extended a cordial invitation to buyers throughout the south to visit the Atlanta market with the assurance that these buyers will see in what Atlanta has to offer the very latest and most attractive models.

Members of the Atlanta Wholesale Millinery association are: Hunter Adams company, 31 South Pryor street, Atlanta; M. Kutz company, 80 South Pryor street, Atlanta; J. Regenstein company, 40 Whitehall street, Atlanta, and Ernest L. Rhodes company, 67 South Pryor street. Each of these firms invites millinery dealers of the south and others interested to write or call in person for the latest word on stylish millinery.

Crackers Win Fast Game From Memphis 4 To 1

Memphis Defense Blows Up When Cullop Doubles; Dell Holds Hitters at Bay

Paul Fittery Released

Paul Fittery, Cracker southpaw, has been given notice that he will be sent to some other league, to make room for Frank Dodson, who arrived in Atlanta last night, signed a Cracker contract and immediately left for Nashville, where he will don a Cracker uniform this afternoon.

Just where Fittery will be sent was not made known last night.

BY H. C. HAMILTON.

With a rejuvenated Wheezer Dell on the firing line, a snappy infield, and an all-round efficient baseball club operating, the Crackers Saturday ran their victories to three straight over Memphis when they won by a 4-to-1 score. Saturday night they hit the road for a most difficult trip and will not again be seen in action at Spiller's field until July 2.

Saturday's victory was a glorious windup to a stay at home which was about as trying an experience as a ball club has been called upon to endure. Crippled by injuries, held down by erratic pitching, the Atlanta entry in the Southern league pennant race barely kept its head up, played ball hard and proved to the fans in the last three games that there is punch, pitching and hitting strength, and COURAGE in the Cracker makeup. Saturday the entire club, from bat boy down, was playing in customary positions, the machinery functioned as it was supposed to, and as a mechanically perfect baseball game it left little to be desired.

Wheezer Dell, the old man from the Pacific Coast, who has caused ssome lifting of eyebrows during his brief sojourn in our midst, pitched as if there were no question about the outcome from the very start. In all he was nicked for five hits, three of them accounting for the only Memphis run, and they of the most scratchy complexion.

Two Double Plays.

More than one brilliant play helped him keep the Chicks off the baselines, the Crackers snapping out two double plays to boost their leadership of the league in this department.

Zoeller had another magnificent day in the field, accounting for five of the putouts and registering one assist when the aging Clyde Milan lapsed into the belief that he was as fast as ever and attempted to make a double of a single. He was nailed cold when Zoeller threw unerringly to Gazella.

There is no small portion of credit due Guy Morton for a well pitched game. Had his team mates been in the contest to the fullest extent the score would have been lower. He could not have won, but the figures would have not been so large.

Memphis was the first to register a run, scoring one in the third inning. Gleason, whose batting average is nearer the size of his collar than a ball player's average should be, looped a short fly over third base which fell safe for a single. Yaryan flied out to Cullop, but Morton, swinging desperately at a wild pitch on a hit and run play, accidentally connected and dropped the ball in right field for a flukey single. Gleason went to second.

Squeeze One In.

The bases were filled when Milan singled to left. The Cracker infield played in their customary positions, hoping for an infield grounder which could be turned into a double play, but Moore dropped a hot one onto the rubber plate. It bounded so high that Gleason had scored before it dropped into Dell's hands and the only play was to get the hitter at first, which he did. Barber ended the inning with a grounder to Niehoff.

There was absolutely nothing doing after that. Two more hits were registered in the succeeding innings, but the man who produced them in each instance was speedily cut down in a double play. Only two men were left on base, by the visitors, and those two in the flukey third inning, in which the lone Memphis tally was scored.

The Crackers tied the score in the fourth when Cullop amazed the Memphis infielders by shooting a bunt down third-base line, beating the throw to first. After Smith fanned Manager Niehoff doubled to right and Cullop galloped home with the tying run.

Some extraordinary base-running by the Crackers accounted for the other three runs in the fifth. With one down Murphy bunted safely and Good placed him on second with an infield safety. Cullop doubled. Murphy scored easily, but when Milan threw to second in an attempt to catch Cullop. Good didn't even hesitate at third, but rounded the bag and was safe. Taylor attempted to head off Good, but Yaryan let the throw get away from him and Cullop also scored on the error.

BRITAIN BOWS TO U. S. POLO TEAM

London, June 20.—Aggressive playing during the first chukker of today's match between the British and the United States Army polo teams for the international military championship gave the Americans a lead they carried to a final victory with eight goals to four.

The result brought cheers from the 3,000 spectators who sat in stands surrounding the royal box from which King George and Queen Mary, the Duke and Duchess of York, and Ambassador and Mrs. Alanson B. Houghton keenly followed the match.

The series of three games, in which the Americans are defending the title won at Meadowbrook last year, will be continued June 24 and June 27.

The American four set a swift pace throughout the match and although the British scored first when W. S. McCreery at No. 3, sent the ball between the posts, America's No. 3, Captain Peter P. Rodes came back with two goals before the first period ended, giving his side a lead that could not be overcome.

Captain Rodes and Major A. H. Wilson divided the American scoring honors between them, each making four goals. For the British the McCreery's starred, W. S. McCreery making three goals and Captain R. L. McCreery one. The United States' team scored two goals in the opening chukker, three in the second and one each in the fourth, fifth and seventh. The British scored in the first, second, third, and fifth chukkers.

Despite the speedy pace set by the Americans, the challengers made an excellent start, McCreery's goal being a perfect shot from nearly midfield, but the play on both sides, although fast, was loose.

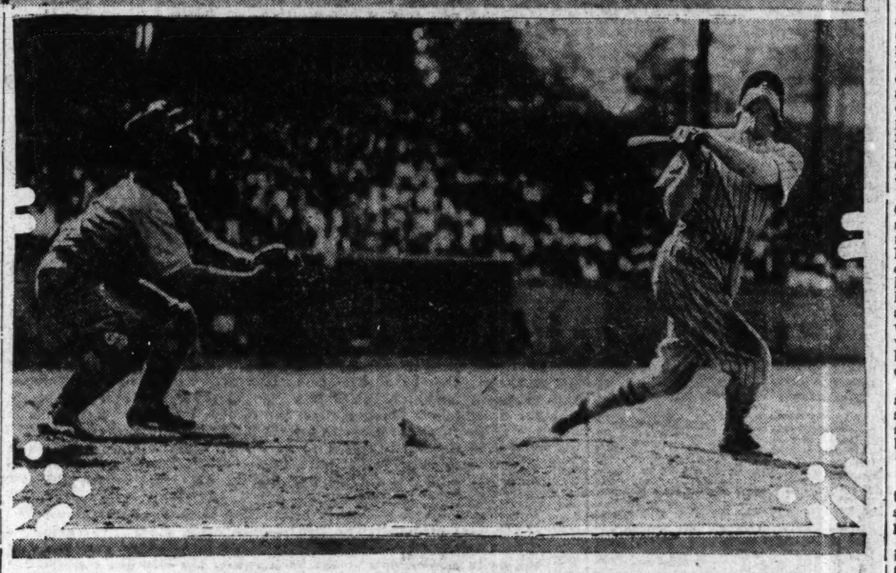

Led by Major Louis A. Beard in the second chukker, the American officers launched an attack that brought them three more points.

JACKSON JOINS EXCLUSIVE SET

Richmond, Va., June 20.—Herbert W. Jackson gained a place in the "Hole-In-One-Club" when he found the cup for a distance of 169 yards at No. 13 of the Hermitage Country club here today.

Cullop Can Also Move About Swiftly

While Nick Cullop is generally noted for his ability to smash out home runs, he can also shake a mean pair of legs. He is shown in the above picture beating out an infield hit in Saturday's game. In the picture below Frankie Zoeller is seen looking up in disappointment at a ball he has just sent straight up in the air.

YOUTH CARRIES OFF HONORS IN GOLF

Chicago, June 20.—Youth carried off the major honors of the golf tournaments of the week ending with the final matches today. Three of the winners were still in their 'teens.

Glenn Crisman, who is only 19, emerged with the prize in the southern amateur tournament, the principal golfing of the week.

Roland MacKenzie, 18, won the middle Atlantic championship.

Fred Halmans, only 16, captured the annual golf championship of Kansas. Eddie Held, 22, again won the Missouri state golf title.

Jesse Sweetser, still in his twenties, won the metropolitan title at Deal, N. J.

Oren Williams, 25, was the winner of the Mississippi annual tournament.

OWENS DROPS MATCH TO CALDWELL

Greenville, S. C., June 20.—Jack Caldwell, of Atlanta, today won the men's singles championship of the Carolina Tennis association, by taking three out of five sets from Frank "Hop" Owens, also of Atlanta. The scores were 4-6, 6-0, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5.

TILDEN BEATS RICHARDS AGAIN

Forest Hills, N. Y., June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—William T. Tilden II, today proved for the second time this season his right to the title of America's foremost tennis player by defeating in straight sets his youthful and most persistent challenger, Vincent Richards, in the outstanding match of a series of exhibitions for the building fund of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. The contest was decided in straight sets, 6-3, 8-6.

The match marked the third meeting this year between the two rivals of many seasons, the first of which, resulting in a Richards triumph, set tennisdom buzzing. Tilden evened the count later at Boston and then went to the front today two matches to one. Tomorrow the pair will renew the struggle in the final round for the metropolitan championship singles.

Tilden was at the top of his brilliant game today, driving severely behind his cannonball service to ace Richards repeatedly with clever placements. The latter played his best tennis only in spots.

BECK RESIGNS AT GREENVILLE

Greenville, S. C., June 20.—The resignation of Zinn Beck as manager of the Greenville club of the South Atlantic association was announced today by club officials. At the same time it was stated Pat Crawford former Davidson college star, had been named to succeed him as pilot of the Spinners.

MAD PLAY WINS ANOTHER RACE

New York, June 20.—Mad Play, winner of the Brooklyn handicap last Monday, raced to another impressive victory today in the Queens county handicap at Aqueduct, leading home Shuffle Along by two lengths. Whetstone was third.

ROMANO SIGNS TO MEET MUNN

St. Louis, Mo., June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Mike Romano, of Chicago, will be the opponent for Wayne "Big" Munn, Nebraska heavyweight, in a finish wrestling match here July 8, it was announced tonight.

MISS COLLETT IS FRENCH WINNER

New York, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Miss Glenna Collett's triumph today in France, where she defeated Mlle. Simone de la Chaume for the French women's golf championship, took some of the sting from her defeat last month by Miss Joyce Wethered at Troon in the British ladies' open and makes it possible for the American girl to return home with one of the two major titles she sought in Europe.

Miss Collett's French triumph adds to her already long list of links honors. The Providence girl captured the American national in 1922 and she also held the Canadian, the Eastern association and the north and south championships.

The cards:

Out:
Miss Collett	343 553 554—37
Mlle. Chaume	464 743 545—42
In:
Miss Collett	454 454 53—33—70
Mlle. Chaume	255 444 55—34—76

MATT DONOHUE BACK IN GAME

Mobile, June 20.—Pitcher Hugh Mageveney, former star hurler of the Notre Dame, Indiana college, obtained from the Birmingham club has been given his unconditional release, according to announcement of Manager Elberfeld. Mageveney failed to make good. Outfielder Matt Donohue, who was shot and wounded in an affray in Atlanta early in May, has recovered from his wounds and is back in the Mobile lineup. He will be used as a pinch-hitter for the present.

MISS HARRISON TRAINS FOR SWIM

Boulogne, France, June 20.—Training for her cross channel swim which she hopes to undertake this summer, Miss Lillian Harrison, of Argentina, today swam from Cape Gris-Nez to Sangatte, a distance of about eight miles, in 4 hours 50 minutes. T. W. Burgess, who swam across the channel in 1911, and who is training Miss Harrison, says that she is showing excellent form.

DUCKY POND WINS FOR YALE

New York, June 20.—Yale's baseball team triumphed over Princeton 10 to 9, in ten innings today, Captain Pond's sacrifice fly scoring Neale from third base with the winning run and giving the Blue the "big three" baseball championship for 1925.

Miracle Men Who Play And Lead Prove Scarce

When world series gate money reaches a million dollars, which is the present-day standard, each club owner puts into his cash box more than $250,000 extra money. And before the world series gates open all those clubs that are in the pennant fight draw big crowds and swell the income of the clubs. Consequently the manager who can bring his team home in front is worth a lot of money, in coin of the realm, to the club that employs him. Last year Buck Harris proved to be a veritable gold mine for Washington. He took a team that nobody regarded seriously, welded it into a smooth-opearting unit and walked away with the American league flag and the world series title.

Sensational reverses of form, due to the skill of a manager, are much fewer, however, than one might think. Old-timers love to talk about the exploit of Fielder Jones in winning the 1906 American league pennant with the hitless White Sox. The fact is, though, that the same team finished second the year before and that, although Jones' men could not hit, they were marvelous on the bases, in the field and at both ends of the batter. Jones deserves credit, surely, but his was no miracle performance.

Kid Gleason jumped the White Sox from sixth place in 1918 to first in 1919. Good work! And yet that same team had won the pennant and the world championship in 1917, and by wining the pennant under Gleason was merely turning to its previous form.

Boosted Red Sox.

Jake Stahl took the Boston Red Sox from fifth in 1911 to first in 1912, and that was a great achievement. Hughey Jennings copped the American league pennant in 1907 with a team that had finished sixth in 1906, and that, too, was mighty creditable.

These instances are the only ones in the American league that have approached what might be viewed as sensational management.

In the National league McGraw's Giants finished last in 1913, fourth in 1916 and first in 1917—one of the outstanding cases of complete reversal of form. Stallings took the Boston Braves from eighth place on the fourth of July to first at the end of the season in 1914, but these same Braves had finished fifth the year before and weren't really as bad as they looked on the fourth.

Mitchell's Chicago victory in 1918 and Robinson's Brooklyn victory in 1920 were also witnesses that had finished fifth the year before. When Pat Moran copped with the Phillies in 1915 the popular Irishman made the greatest jump in modern National league history, for the best the Quakers could do the year before was to finish sixth.

All these performances summarize this way:

American league—Fourth to first, Harris; fifth to first, Stahl; sixth to first, Jennings and Gleason. Total, four.

National league—Fourth to first, McGraw; fifth to first, Stallings Mitchell and Robinson; sixth to first, Moran. Total, five.

Surprise Wins.

Thus of forty big league pennants (1905 to date) exactly nine have been won by managers who sprung something of a surprise on the field, and in the record of nine no manager's name appears more than once. That might mean that when a manager wins the pennant, he usually keeps his team right up there and repeats. However, Mack, Jones, Stahl, Rowland, Barrows, Gleason and Speaker each won a single American league pennant only to "fold back again," while in the National league McGraw, Moran and Robinson twice won pennants without repeating either time and Chance, Stallings and Mitchell copped once each without repeating.

On the other hand McGraw once won three in a row and then four in a row with a chance to lengthen that string still farther. Frank Chance won three in a row. So did Jennings and Huggins. Carrigan won two consecutive pennants, and Connie Mack won two successive pennants two different times.

The failure of the intellectual giant, Branch Rickey, to make anything like a favorable showing, the failure of Connie Mack to come back in a 10 year stretch, the failure of Miller Huggins to rebuild his team in time to keep on winning—facts like these seem to indicate that miracle managers are mighty few, and that playing ability rather than managerial ability is what actually brings home the bacon. Evidently then, the value of a manager in dollars and cents depends very much on his wisdom in selecting playing talent and in keeping the team in repair rather than in controlling the actions of his men on the field.

SWEETSER BEATS LARRY LLOYD

Deal, N. J., June 20.—Jess W. Sweetser, former national champion, today defeated Larry M. Lloyd of Greenwich, Conn., in the 36 hole final round for the Metropolitan amateur golf championship six up and five to play, over the Hollywood Country Club links.

Sweetser reached the first nine, five up. On the incoming nine he was six up. Sweetser was within two strokes of tying the course record, his card reading 72 strokes for the morning. The match ended on the thirty first hole when Sweetser won the hole in par four.

This is the second time that Sweetser has won the Metropolitan title. In 1922 he defeated G. E. Hale of Upper Montclair, N. J.

Foster Loses to Student, 3-2 on Eighteenth Hole; Championship Play Is Close

BY GEORGE CONGDON,
Sporting Editor of The Constitution.

Asheville, N. C., June 20.—(Special.)—Nineteen years old, five feet, 10 inches tall, 123 pounds, and the hardest scrapping little rooster in the southern states—that's Glen Crisman, of Selma, Ala., and why he came through as the sun sent lengthening shadows over the Biltmore Forest Country club course late today for the George W. Adair memorial trophy and the amateur golf championship of Dixie.

Glen Crisman, the Selma stripling, won his final 36-hole match with a five on the 18th green as his opponent, S. E. Foster, of the Timquana club, of Jacksonville, Fla., took a six and that five gave him the southern golf crown, three up and two to play.

Glen Crisman did not fluke a victory. He came through solidly. He came through a field of golfing terrors. Why he didnt fall over in a faint after sinking his fifth shot on the 16th green is a wonder. An adoring mother, a proud father and a younger sister, who was ecstasy itself, maybe kept him from it. They smothered him. It must have been that that buoyed him up to finish to the clubhouse, a light lunch and a long sleep after the 36 holes of his final match and victory. Crisman is the slightest kind of a little fellow, in spite of the fact that he went through to the Alabama state championship not long ago. He was down as his final match started, but he came up and he finished the first 18 two up on Foster, the Jacksonville golfer who battled every inch of the way in spite of two blowups.

A Remarkable Victory.

The second 18 holes, played this afternoon, wasn't a battle to make the score impressive, five and six, or four and five; it was a struggle to win a hole now and then, taking every advantage that Foster gave, and then half the rest of them. Glenn did it, and the most magnificent trophy in golf goes to Alabama for the first time and the championship to a member of the Selma Town and Country club. It was a remarkable victory.

At the end of his first 18 holes Glenn was exhausted. He could scarcely walk from the 18th green to the clubhouse. There he didn't take lunch. He went to his room and laid down for a nap. He slept for two hours. Still without lunch, he launched into the last 18 holes, the acid test that would determine whether this kid, 19 years old and weighing just 123 pounds for all his height, could come through with the championship.

He did. He had Foster four down at the 11th, of the final 18, but his strength waned. He played the game safe. Foster won two holes, but the lead was too great.

Crisman Takes Lead.

The cards on the first eighteen in the morning didn't look like golf scores. They resembled more the appearance of the national debt.

Crisman was up throughout the play in the morning with the exception of the first six holes. He got his unsteady work for the morning out of his system early and was down on earth again as Foster leaped from fours to sevens and eights to run his medal play for the 18 holes to 84, where Crisman had a 78, nothing to brag about.

Crisman had his first lapse from form on the second after they halved the first with fours. Crisman took a six after slicing into the ditch, taking a third to the left of the green and sinking his third putt. Foster shot five with two putts and went one up.

From a six Crisman came down to a birdie two on the 140-yard third. His tee shot was 30 feet from the pin and he sank his putt for a two. Foster was 20 feet from the pin on his drive and sank his second putt.

Match Kept Square.

They kept the match square by halving the fourth with fives and then Foster took the lead for the last time during the first 18 holes by taking two to get on and a pair of putts while Crisman's third found the green and he sank his putt for a five.

A par four that Crisman pulled out of his bag of golf shots gave him the sixth to square the match and be ready to jump through the gate as Foster opened it with a miserable seven on No. 7, a par four hole. Foster didn't make a decent shot on No. 7. He topped his drive, his second was sliced into the rough, his third was in sand over the green, and on his fourth he moved his ball about two feet in the sand. He overshot the green on his fifth to come out of sand, and then took a pair of putts, while Crisman took a par 5.

The Alabama Kid went two up on No. 8 by getting his four with two putts while Foster took a third putt after blowing his second, a matter of four feet.

Both had poor tee shots on No. 9, a par three hole, Foster sinking in sand short of the geren and Crisman riding down a bank to the left. Both chipped to within 10 feet of the pin, but where Foster blew his putt, Crisman sank his first for par.

Interest Renewed.

Both men played the 10th and 11th in perfect four and the gallery, which had become rather apathetic at the quality of golf displayed by the finalists, watched the hole with renewed interest. They saw Foster play another perfect hole, getting a four on the 308-yard 12th, while Crisman, who was nicely on in two, took three putts, missing a five-footer for a half.

On the next hole, the 280-yard, 14th, Foster exploded. He pushed his drive into the rough. His second failed to jump from the trap into which he shot it, so he gave the ball one more chance, belting it into another. When he saw his ball stick in this trap he waded after it in a determined manner and shot his fourth out of bounds. He then conceded the hole and was given an eight to Crisman's par four. Foster was four down after this disaster.

On the next hole, Foster's iron was on the edge of the green and he laid an approach putt six inches from the cup. Crisman tried hard to sink his 15-foot putt for a half and failed. Crisman three up.

Another Bad Hole.

Foster had one more bad hole in his system. He hooked his drive into a thicket and found the ball nestling beneath the eaves of a summer house and in the shadow of an imbedded rock. Foster played his second across the fairway and into the edge of the rough. His third was trapped and his fourth was on. He took three putts and lost the hole. Crisman was on with a fine brassie second and contented himself with three putts for a win to go four up.

On the 17th Foster registered his first birdie, taking a four on the 475-yard distance. Foster played four perfect shots on this hole. Glenn's par five was not good enough so he finished 17th three up.

On the 18th, Glenn topped his drive. He played a fine second, placing it perfectly, and looked good for a four. His approach was short, however, and he took two putts for a five while Foster was registering a par four to end the morning round with Crisman just two up.

Their cards for the morning:

Crisman out	462 554 543—38
Foster out	453 545 754—42
Crisman in	445 444 535—40—78
Foster in	444 583 644—42—84

Crissman Pulls Away.

Crissman and Foster started their 18 holes of the afternoon with a half on the first, but Crissman went three up on the second when he got a four as Foster took three to get on the green, away from the pin and required two putts to hole out. They took par threes and par fours on Nos. 3 and 4.

Foster reduced Crissman's lead on No. 5 to two up, when he got a par four while Crissman was fiddling around for a five, as his second was trapped, but Glenn came back on No. 6 for a par four while Foster took a five. The hole left Foster three down again. No. 7 and No. 8 were halved with par fours, but Foster knocked down a birdie on No. 9 with a 25-foot putt for a two that left them with Crissman just two up at the turn on the first nine holes of the second 18.

Crissman at the start of the second nine very much resembled a residence in conflagation. He won both the tenth and eleventh holes with par fours while Foster was wild on his second shots and was taking three to get on the green. On No. 10 Foster's second was in a deep slice into the rough, and on No. 11 his second took him into a ditch just in front of the green. He took two putts on each hole for fives that didn't win for him.

Foster Strengthens.

Foster strengthened though, on No. 12 and shot a four for a win as Crissman lost a bit of his strength temporarily to take three to get on and two putts to sink for a five.

Neither shot good golf again until No. 15 after they had halved both No. 13 and No. 14. With fives on No. 15, however, Foster got a par three as Crisman missed a four-foot putt for a three and took a four. The hole left them with Crisman just two up.

Crissman was just two up after the fifteenth hole, but there were only three to play. Both had good tee shots on the sixteenth, but Foster took four to get on and two putts for a six while Crissman sank his second putt for a five, the hole and the match, three and two.

Their cards for the afternoon round:

Crissman out	543 454 442—36
Foster out	553 445 442—36
Crissman in	445 554 5
Foster in	554 553 6

AERO PILOT OF AMERICA PROTESTS

Brussels, June 20.—The American balloonist, Wade T. Van Arman, today formally protested yesterday's decision of the Aero club declaring the Belgian, M. Veenstra, winner of the recent Gordon Bennett cup balloon race. The protest automatically suspends the award of the cup to Veenstra.

A session of the Belgian Aero club will be held to consider Van Orman's protest. If it again rejects his claim it will be possible for the American Aero club to appeal.

(Van Orman, in the balloon Goodyear III, traveled 441 miles in the race which started from Brussels June 7. He landed on the deck of the steamship Vaterland over Ushant Light, France. Under the rules of the race, a landing at sea and the acceptance of assistance constitute disqualification. Van Orman maintained he landed unaided on the deck of a vessel and should not be disqualified.)

The president of the Belgian Aero club held that Van Orman's protest was without merit and that he was disqualified. M. Veenstra, Belgian pilot of the balloon Prince Leopold, traveled more than 800 miles and landed near Cape Toriana, Spain. After landing on ground he was blown to sea but the aero club said this did not disqualify him.

MRS. ARMSTRONG RETAINS TITLE

Jackson, Miss., June 20.—Mrs. J. W. Armstrong, of Jackson, southern woman's golf champion, retained her title as Mississippi state champion here today in the finals of the annual state tournament, defeating Mrs. R. H. Morehead, of Laurel, 5 and 3.

Oren Williams, of Biloxi, and W. E. Ware, of Greenwood, were all square at the conclusion of the first 18 holes of the 36-hole match for the state amateur championship. Using a mashie on the third green, Ware made a hole-in-one shot.

EDDIE HELD TITLE WINNER

Kansas City, Kans., June 20.—Eddie Held, former trans-Mississippi champion and redoubtable star of Algonquin club, St. Louis, won the twenty-first annual Missouri state amateur golf championship at Lakewood Golf and Country Club here today. He defeated Jay Ward of Kansas City 1 up.

CY ANDERSON LEADS HITTERS IN SOUTHERN RACE

Greb Favored in Battle With Mickey Walker

Man From Steel Mills Stepped in Prize Arena Without Studying Rules

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, June 20.—For three years it has been a bromide of the press row at the fights, hither and yon, that Harry Greb, when he cracks, will split wide open and fall in separate and respective halves at the feet of the fighter who happens to find his flaw and sticks an enterprising fist therein.

Greb will hop into the ring on the night of July 2 to fight Mickey Walker, the welterweight champion of the world, 15 rounds to a decision. Walker's title won't be involved at all, but Greb's middleweight championship, taken from the awful Johnny Wilson, will be at stake.

Now Walker's only chance of winning the middleweight championship lies in the remote possibility that he might find that fissure in Greb's amazing physique and poke a set of knuckles through it. It is no secret that Greb doesn't train. Tommy Gibbons, then in his prime, remarked the day after Greb had belted him all over the ring of the old garden and made him feel even sillier than he looked on that occasion, which was terribly silly: "This Greb does everything wrong; he trains wrong; he fights wrong. He's so wrong that he's absolutely right."

Greb is a man from the steel mills of the Pittsburg district. He didn't work in the steel mills for many years but just long enough to perfect that peculiar muscular development which sets him apart from all the other fighters. He began as an amateur and soon discovered that he could collect money for the sort of fighting that he was giving.

Changed Name.

Knowing nothing of the rules of fighting and being too impatient to study the same, Henry Berg, the amateur, who was gradually changing his name to Harry Greb, just dusted in, tossing his fists from here and there, landing them everywhere between the kneecap and the crown of the head, and won about 20 fights, in a row. That convinced him that he ought to be a prizefighter, not a competitor for leather medals and tin ears.

There had never been anyone like him before. There has never been anyone like him since. He has whirled and bounced and leaped around large Bill Brennan, Gene Tunney and Charlie Weinert, the same Weinert who is to fight Harry Wills, in competition for the runner-up position among the heavyweights of the world, on the same night that Greb fights Mickey Walker, and has whipped them all.

Since he beat Tunney, he has been beaten several times by the marine, but that is not germane to this case. The fact remains that Greb once blinded and almost annihilated the same Gene Tunney who stopped Tom Gibbons, who went 15 rounds with Jack Dempsey at Shelby, Montana.

All Must Fall.

But even the rock of Gibraltar will split one day and go crumbling into the water.

It may be slightly fantastic to compare the rock to a prizefighter who hasn't enough intelligence to take care of himself. But sportwriting is a hysterical calling and provocative of superlatives.

Someone, as this piece remarked at the outset, is going to find the crack in the makeup of Harry Greb one of these pleasant afternoons or evenings and split him in half. It might not be Mickey Walker but then again it might because it is about three years since Greb paused to take stock of himself and check up on the vitality that charges his amazing frame.

Greb is at his best when he is flailing heavyweights who outweigh him 30 or 40 pounds. Against little men such as Walker, if they be clever and practiced and strong, he is not as splendid.

The mode of life of a prizefighter makes little difference in the fighter's career. Greb is a night owl and one of the amazing cases of the ring. Walker sleeps from nine p. m., until six every morning and trains almost every day, and yet he is only a vigorous, affable, fairly-able fighter, who might find the rift in Harry Greb's makeup and then again might not.

Amateur Games Saturday

ROYAL LEAGUE.

Costley's Hurling Features.

Pep Class won from the Stewart Avenue Methodists, 12 to 3, in a game featured by the stellar pitching of Costley. He held the heavy hitters of the Stewart team to six hits and let them down easy in the pinches. The Pep team played errorless ball all the way through. Pirkle featured for the losers, getting a home run, a single and a triple out of four times up. Perkins, McCutcheon, Acree and McGahee all knocked triples. The Pep team wants out-of-town games, especially one for the Fourth of July.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.
Stewart	100 000 020—3	6	2

Batteries: Costley and Irons; McGahee, Cooper and Acree.

Bankers Lose Again.

Brown Mill won from the Federal Reserve Bankers Saturday, 8 to 2. Payne, pitching for the winners, not only aquitted himself well on the mound, but he led in the batting attack, getting four hits out of four times up. He struck out 14 men. Alden hit for two bags twice and Appling and Halpin each got one.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.
Brown Mill	101 030 30x—8	12	4
Federal Reserve	000 110 000—2	3	1

Batteries: Payne and Lowery: Goss, Heil and Mott.

Pullman Beats I. C. Twice.

The Pullman team for the second time this year defeated the league leading I. C. club. The score was 4 to 3, and the game was tight all the way. Hitting in the fourth inning by Culver and McCollum gave the Pullmen the three runs that gave them the game. The stealing of home by Lefty Walker and the expert fielding of Winn, who threw Taylor out at first off of a clean single, were the features.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.
I. C. Club	000 101 100—3	7	1
Pullman	010 300 000—4	8	4

Batteries: Bond and Langley; Walker and Kibler.

ATLANTA LEAGUE.

Fox Wins Close One.

The Fox Manufacturing company won a close game from the Piedmont Cotton Mills Saturday afternoon 8 to 7, when Turner knocked a three bagger in the seventh inning, bringing in the run that broke the tie. The pitching of Turner was also a feature of the game. Plumley, Duncan and Howard all tried to stop the Fox boys, but it was in vain.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.
Fox	140 000 300—8	11	3
Piedmont	010 400 101—7	8	4

Batteries: Turner and Garvin; Plumley, Duncan, Howard and Kelly.

Fulton Takes Easy Game.

The Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills won an easy game over Oakland City, 11 to 3. The pitching of Ferguson for the winners was good, and the field work of the whole team was fine, only one error being made.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.
Fulton Bag	506 000 000—11	9	1
Oakland City	111 000 000— 3	6	4

Batteries: Ferguson and Robinson; McElroy, Baker and Callahan. Umpire, Jack Johnson.

Southeastern Cinches Lead.

The Southeastern Express company cinched the top peg of the Atlanta league by defeating Grant Park who is running second 15 to 5. Billy Evans pitching for the Express boys struck out 15 of the opposing batters, making very little fielding necessary, but his team bobbled five times. The Southeastern team hit freely with 17 hits to their credit. Smith and Singleton led the list with three each. Smith also played a good game in the field.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.
Express	112 003 110—15	17	5
Grant Park	000 310 100— 5	7	1

Batteries: Evans and Smith; F. Sawyer, G. Sawyer and Etheridge.

RAWLINGS LEAGUE.

Postoffice Forfeits.

Postoffice forfeited to the White Motor team yesterday after the game had gone seven innings. A Postoffice man hit a home run in the seventh but failed to touch first. When the ball was thrown to first the umpire called him out and then the fireworks began. The score was 9 to 7 at that time in favor of the Postoffice.

Hood Wins by Landslide.

Hood Brick won from the Railway Mail Service, 11 to 1, in an easy game. The pitching of Hall for the Brickers and the hitting of Cheney, Fudge and Freeman were the outstanding features.

Score by innings:		R.	H.	E.
Hood Brick	310 320 200—11	20	2
R. M. S.	010 000 000— 1	5	3

Hall and Bray; Corrie and Exum.

Paperites Win Hectic Struggle.

The Atlanta Paper company won a hectic struggle on the White diamond Saturday, beating the Black and White Cob company, 12 and 11, in the last inning. Hammock started on the mound, but gave way to Tabby Allen in the third when a sore arm developed. Tubby, who usually plays at first, held them to eight hits during the rest of the game. Edwards knocked a long home run and Nem Allen, Bennett and Tub Allen all knocked triples. Norris knocked a homer for the Black and White team. Joe Hammock also knocked a homer for the winners.

Score by inings:		R.	H.	E.
Paper Co.	030 014 122—13	15	5
Black and White	007 010 102—11	14	4

Hammock, Allen and Swords; Owens and Lagomarsino.

Fleming Whiffs 11 Men.

Coca-Cola won from the Whittier Mills, 7 to 3, in their weekly game yesterday. Fleming, pitching for the Coca-Cola team, struck out 11 men. Queen knocked a triple and two singles and W. Cape a triple and one single. Butler and Thomason also hit well for the winners. Thomason, W. Cape, Hardin and Jacobson all fielded well for the soft dring merchants.

White's Hurling Good.

The Steel Plant won a close game from the Gordon Street Baracas, 4 to 3, thereby evening up the standings somewhat in the City league. The infield work of the Steel Plant team with four double plays was the outstanding feature. White, of the Steel Plant, also pitched good ball. Outfielder White, of the Gordon Baracas, was also good both in the field and at bat.

East Point Forfeits.

East Point forfeited to the Junior Chamber of Commerce team at Avondale. After agreeing to play the game at the Avondale diamond they refused to take the field because they thought it was too rough. It was a new diamond and had the faults customary in all new diamonds.

KEY COURSE WILL OPEN SATURDAY

With tentative plans made for an exhibition match between Bobby Jones and Perry Adair, the James J. Key municipal golf course will be officially opened for the year next Saturday afternoon, it was announced Saturday by L. L. Wallis, general manager of parks.

Both of the famed Atlanta golfers have been invited to play in the opening match, and it is expected that unless they already have made plans for that date, they will accept.

The history of both golfers is known, of course, throughout the country. Jones is present national amateur champion, and former national open champion. In addition, he has held practically every other title in the golf world. Adair is former southern amateur champion.

New greens have been built up on every hole at the Key, or stockade, course, and Mr. Wallis states that the entire course is in the best condition since it was opened several years ago. The course provides one of the most beautiful municipal links in the south, with its long, rolling fairways, and woods and other natural hazards.

The course has been in use for several weeks, but the new greens never have been playd on, and Saturday will mark the formal opening.

Reports were in circulation Saturday that the name of the course may be changed to the Bobby Jones municipal golf course, but this was denied by park department officials.

TIGERS WIN IN NINTH.

Boston, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Owen Carroll, former Holy Cross pitching ace for four years but now a member of the Detroit Tigers, made his "big league" debut this afternoon but was knocked out of the box after pitching for six innings, in which the Boston Red Sox scored six runs from nine hits. The Tigers, however, won the game, 11 to 9, by scoring four runs in the ninth. Thirty-four players took part, of whom nine were pitchers.

Wearing Out the Green

BY WALTER TRUMBULL

The duffer's game is rough with toil;
He harrows, ploughs and sweats:
The expert's game is smooth as oil
And sweet as violets.

* * * *

The duffer wallops at the ball
Till he is halt and lame:
The expert shows no force at all.
But he gets there just the same.

* * * *

It's all wrong, Colonel Bogie!

The eastern experts were qualifying at Lido, a course which is a sort of combination of the Thousand Islands, an advanced are after an artillery bombardment and Death Valley. Walter Hagen's ball was lying some seventy yards short of a green.

Now in this situation we'd have taken a mashie-niblick and given that pill a sock it would have remembered. Did Hagen sock it? Certainly not. He just took a short, gentle, lazy little swing at it.

"It won't get up," said we in the joyful, carrolling notes of the dub who sees an expert miss one. But it did get up and then lay down about eight feet from the pin.

Now, why should a golf ball act that way for Hagen when it refuses to do a thing for a guy who expends seven times as much strength and energy on it?

It's all wrong, Colonel Bogie!

And there's Mac Smith. Watching him play is about as exciting as listening to the tick-tock of a grandfather's clock. There is no element of suspense in his game. If you want to find a ball that he has hit, all you do is walk down the middle of the fairway until you come to it. With him there are no side attractions to golf, such as dropping a hook in the flowing stream, or turning aside to wander through the grass and flowers. He doesn't get any exercise out of golf. All he got at Lido was four 35's in a row. Monotonous! Just think of all numbers there are aside from 35. We've had most of them on one hole, too. There's a variety in our golf.

* * * *

Bobby Jones is disappointing in a slightly different way. Every once in awhile he may shoot one over a green into the long, clinging grass. Then you rally around merrily, prepared to get a good grin at the sight of an expert chopping away four or five strokes and taking a 7 or an 8. Does he do it? Don't be silly. After you have watched him in this situation a few times, you discover the only gamble is whether he will hole his first shot out of that morass or leave himself a putt. To be sure, the weather affects his game. Just after he started his last round at Lido it rained so hard that spectators with coats and umbrellas were driven to shelter. Bobby didn't even have a cap and was so hampered by the downpour that he only shot a miserable 72.

* * * *

The point we wish to make is: what do these experts know of the joys of golf? The stiffening of every muscle, the grip that makes the knuckles white, the slow waggling of the club, the swift exhilaration of the back swing, the bird-like rise on the left toe, tossing sway, terrific sock and frantic raising of the head to see whether the ball has gone into the trap or out of bounds, is not for them. They follow the straight and placid path. Adventure is only for the dub. It is the dub who, with ths sky for the limit, enters the game daring to take the iron from the hand of Fate and match with Destiny for golf balls. All the same, we saw one expert take a 9. Ha! Ha! Ho! Ho!

* * * *

Leon Errol, whose lower limbs have made him a fortune on the stage, mystified his friends by insisting upon following a golfer who was not a star around the course. He was pressed for an explanation.

"Look at his legs," responded Mr. Errol excitedly. "They're funnier than mine!"

At war, he perched upon a parapet
And, while the bursting shells lit up the sky,
With steady fingers lit a cigarette,
Laughing to feel Death's wings go brushing by.

He was so calm at football that they stood
Him by an icicle to cool it off;
It seemed that nothing ever could or would
Excite him—then, at last, he took up golf.

Now, see him by that little pellet stand.
He only has a foot to tap it, but
His knees are weak, his brow is clammy and
His hands are shaking so he can not putt.

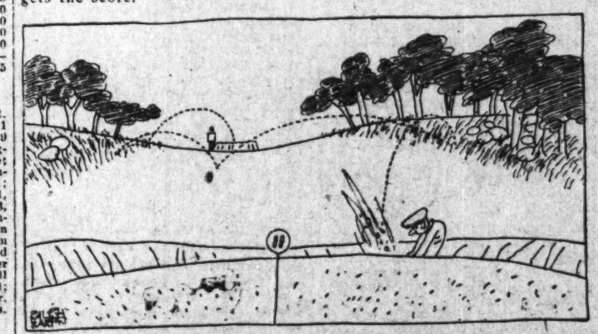

* * * *

"I'm hitting them off the tee," said the duffer, "and my iron shots are fine, but I can't putt."

"Aye, laddie, I see," commented the professional, "the same old useless game."

It's small use to have every shot in the bag so long as you leave them there.

A dub's real friend is one who remembers the good shots and forgets the score.

DOBIE, ZUPPKE TEAM UP AGAIN

Urbana, Ill., June 20.—(Special.)—Gil Dobie, of Cornell, and Bob Zuppke, of Illinois, two of the best-known fooball coaches in the country, are teaming up again this summer as instructors in the summer course for coaches at the University of Illinois. Each teaches a big class and most of their students take both courses in order to get a chance to contrast their views.

The Illinois course will occupy six weeks until August 1 and coaches from all over the United States are registering. Ward Lambert, Purdue's basketball coach, is another imported teacher. Along with Craig Ruby, Illinois' basketball coach, he is instructing the basketball classes.

Director George Huff, Harry Gill, track; Carl Lundgren, baseball, and the rest of the Illinois coaches are instructors. Dr. F. W. Maroney, of Atlantic City, N. J., is teaching a course in rural physical education, a comparatively new field. Dr. C. R. Griffith, of the university faculty, will teach a class in psychology and athletics.

The summer course for coaches will be the twelfth session, as it was started in 1914. When the course was founded 12 years ago, it was a pioneer. Now, there are numerous courses. The coaches of the United States more and more seek to broaden their knowledge by attending these courses, demonstrating that athletic coaching has become a profession rather than a haphazard occupation as it was a decade ago. Last year, 473 students registered, most of them men with experience as coaches.

One student this year will come a long way—he is Lewis Riess, a Y. M. C. A. secretary and physical director in Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, who also works in Salonica, Greece. Lieutenant Wood and Lieutenant Gillmore, of West Point Military academy, have been sent here by the government.

NASHVILLE IS BATTLE SCENE OF CRACKERS TODAY

City Tennis Tourney Is Scheduled for July 2

Several Title Holders Are Slated to Enter; Entry List Is Growing

BY BEN COTHRAN.

The annual city tennis tournament, open to all amateurs of any age in the city, will be held during the week of July 20 on the courts at Piedmont park. The events will include rounds in singles and doubles. The winner of the singles will be awarded the prized Grant-Jeter trophy, a silver loving cup, which must be won two consecutive years to become permanent property.

Jack Mooney, who won the trophy last year after a hard fight all the way through the tourney and an especially hard one when he defeated Britt Knox in the semi-finals, will enter the tourney and will put up a stiff fight for the trophy again. Mooney is also in charge of the registration. Entrants may register at any time at A. G. Spalding's on North Broad street, up until the Saturday before the tournament starts. Registration fees are $1 for singles and $2 per team for doubles.

This tournament is an annual event in tennis circles in Atlanta and arouses considerable interest each year, besides drawing a large entry of proficient Atlanta amateurs. Several of those players who were in the tourney last year will enter again and will be strong contenders for the title.

Champs To Enter.

Among the probable entries will be Jack Simpson, who is a former Emory champion, having first become known around Atlanta when he won the championship. Simpson also holds the G. I. A. A. title in tennis. He was Mooney's partner in the doubles last year in the city tourney.

Berry Grant, former Tech High star, and recent winner in the Tech championship matches, will be a probable entry. Grant has already been playing some good tennis this year, and was runner-up in the 1925 S. I. C. tennis meet. He is regarded as a strong contender for the title this year, having put up a hard fight in last year's tourney.

Ed Van Winkle, who holds the North Carolina state doubles championship, is another probable entry who will put up a good fight for the title. Britt Knox, runner-up in the tourney last year, will also be in this year's tournament, as will be Dr. E. Covington, who gave Mooney a hard fight last year.

Atlantans Interested.

Several Atlanta boys who were in the state tournament, held here during the last week, are intending to enter the city tournament. These boys will be sure to make a good showing and will give the winner quite a bit of trouble.

Malon Courts, state singles champion, will enter in the tourney, and most likely he and his partner, runners-up in the doubles in the state meet, Red Williamson, will enter the doubles. Bud Mansfield, runner-up in the state tourney, is undecided as to whether he will enter the meet or not, but most likely will be an entry. It is probable that Mansfield and Bryan Grant, winners of the state doubles title, will be entered in the doubles.

Henry Peeples and George Gardner, who won the city title last year in doubles will also be on hand to defend their title. Both are good players and a combination that is hard to beat.

From the above probable entries, it may readily be seen that a good number of proficient players will be entered and that this year's champion will be champion only after a hard fight.

TRIBUTE PAID TO DEAD HORSES

BY W. H. GOCHER.

During the hot June day on which Gordon Dillon won the 14th renewal of the Horse Dealers' sweepstake at the interstate fair grounds, Trenton, N. J., M. R. Margerum, the manager, and his son, Fred, entertained a few friends at lunch in his office in the grand stand. Edward T. Stotesbury was at the head of the table. In the whirl of horse talk the Philadelphia capitalist, notwithstanding the fact that he had passed pier 76 on life's journey, took an important part and for the time tossed aside the cares and annoyances which follow in the footsteps of those who control millions.

A glance from the office window brought into view a long row of maples which at one time stood on the edge of the Fashion Stud farm mile track. To the left in a clump of trees the roof of the house which H. N. Smith occupied could be seen. Across the broad field the last open space of the farm which was at one time the home of General Knox, Jay Gould, Rosalind, Lucy, Goldsmith Maid, Lady Thorn, Tattler and many other turf celebrities, it was possible to discern the enclosure where most of them were buried.

In a few years the home builder and road maker will remove the last vestige of the Fashion course which was on the man prior to the war between the states and its successor, the Fashion Stud farm.

Famous Horse Center.

Trenton has been a light harness racing center for almost a century. In 1833 the black gelding, Edwin Forrest, won there over the Eagle Course. The following year Sally Miller, afterwards the dam of Long Island Black Hawk, defeated Columbus and Screwdriver at two-mile heats.

Since that date the Quintons, the Konovers, the Pitmans and others kept Trenton on the racing map. Meetings were given at intervals but they did not become regular until the interstate fair was organized in 1888. Since that date the trotters and pacers appeared the last week in September and made considerable turf history.

When reference was made to the Fashion Stud farm and the champions buried there, Mr. Stotesbury said: "I remember as a young man going to Aristides Welch's farm and seeing on the lawn two stone slabs under which two famous horses were interred. I do not remember their names, do any of you?"

Names Recalled.

One of the guests said: "The stones to which you refer were placed over the remains of Flora Temple, the first trotter to beat 2:20, and imported Leamington, sire of Iroquois, the only American-bred horse that ever won the English derby."

"A splendid tribute," said Mr. Stotesbury. "They were worthy of it."

Later on he referred to the days when he owned the great race mare, Sweet Marie, 2:02, by McKinney, and said: "George Webb, who had charge of my horses, purchased her for me. In 1907 she appeared at a number of places and tried to reduce her record. She failed on the mile tracks but she made a remarkable showing on the half-mile courses. At Allentown she defeated Major Delmar, who had a record below two minutes in 2:07, and later on trotted the same course against time to harness in 2:07 and to wagon in 2:08. At Lima, Ohio, she trotted another half-mile track to harness in 2:07 and to wagon in 2:09¼."

As the conversation drifted on horses for the road, track and show ring, Mr. Stotesbury said: "From a boy I always wanted to be about horses. While I did not have to do it, as a youngster, I took a special delight in grooming the horse, cleaning the harness and washing the wagon I used on the road. From that time until the autos and hard-surface roads took away all of the pleasure of driving I had one or more teams and drove every day. Some of my teams were fast enough to win in any company. All of them were sound, handsome and had perfect manners. This in time prompted me to exhibit them at the horse shows.

"About this time Alfred Vanderbilt asked me to join with a number of other horse lovers and put the national horse show on a sound basis. It cost us over $25,000 a year but it was worth it. From that time I became a regular exhibitor in the road horse classes, winning my share of the honors and receiving the usual number of defeats. At times my manager resented the awards, but I told him to take the bitter with the sweet, as if he did not some one would say Stotesbury would not show unless he could win.

"For a number of years Colonel Kipp and I were rivals. The honors were very close. The colonel always exhibited at the national. One year he came to Philadelphia and was defeated. He loaded his horses on the cars and went home. For a time there was a little letter writing, but like all other troubles it blew over.

"I am still a director of the National Horse show as well as the show in London. One year when my horses were in England, Webb was taken sick. I did the driving. It afforded me great pleasure to win with American-bred horses before the king and queen. Finally we came to what looked like a difficult class. Webb insisted on driving. The doctors told him that he was liable to die in the wagon. 'Nothing would suit me better,' said George. He was helped into the wagon and won. From that time he began to get well.

"In my day I have had a lot of pleasure buying and selling horses. One day I was in Pierpont Morgan's New York office. He took me aside and said, 'Ed, up in Fifty-eighth street there is a dealer who has a pair of horses that look good to me. I want you to go up and buy them.' I suggested that he send some one who was unknown to the dealer and told him he would be sure to know me and fix the price accordingly on account of having seen me exhibiting at the shows. He would not have it that way, so I went.

"The dealer spotted me as soon as I entered the stable and led out his team. I never asked for the price. Later he telephoned that he had an offer of over $5,000 and asked if I wanted them. I told him that I was not interested. When I saw Mr. Morgan I told him that I did not like the team, but that I would send him a better pair with my compliments. They proved a little too much horse for him and I think he passed them along to his son.

NEW MARKSMEN RANKING HIGH

New marksmen are beginning to forge to the front in the weekly shoots at the Atlanta Gun club, held on Saturday, and are hanging up marks for the old heads to bang away at. In yesterday's shoot Dr. J. S. Derr won the 50 singles event when he turned in a card of 47, three less than perfect. Dr. H. N. Alford was second when he came one point behind Dr. Derr with a 46. Mrs. Walter Andrews, famous woman shot, was tied with J. H. Fuller for third place, each having a score of 45.

Dr. Alford again came to the front in the doubles when he shot a total of 47 out of 50 to win the event. W. H. Letton was next with 23 targets out of 24, while J. C. Calhoun placed third, having a score of 38 out of 48.

In the 25 handicap Dr. Alford stayed in the limelight, tieing with Joe Cothran for first place in the event, each getting 24 targets. Dr. Derr was tied for second with Dr. C. C. Howard with a score of 22, while J. B. Hale was third with a score of 18.

The results follow:

"I'll Help You With the Dishes and Everything"

EVERETT SCOTT WAS RETAINED AS LONG AS POSSIBLE--PEGLER

:: HE SAW OTHER VETS REPLACED BY YOUTH ::

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, June 20.—Everett Scott an old ball player of 33, who didn't miss a scheduled game of ball in more than eight seasons, ambled out of New York Wednesday on kinky legs and feet of clay to join the Washington Senators. He used to be a pretty heroic piece in the baseball gallery. Two years ago, just before he trotted out to pick up his ragged old glove with the hole in the palm, to field his post for the 1,000th time without missing a game, Warren G. Harding, who was then president, gave him a watch or some cuff links or some similar souvenir and cheered him along with the presidential equivalent of "kid, you're there!"

It wasn't Scott's fault that the legs got knotty beneath him after he had played in 1,307 ball games without being reported absent once. But nobody but Scotty was responsible for what happened to the feet. They turned from heroic marble to very common human material the day that Miller Huggins, the manager of the New York Yankees, finally took him out of the line-up and replaced him with a new fellow, a kid named Wanninger.

That was a few weeks ago. Scotty moped on the bench hoping until there were two men out in the ninth inning that Huggins would send him in for the final put out and thereby save his record. But Huggins didn't cal on him and when the last out was scored and the game was over and Scott's string had snapped at last, Everett, or the deacon, or Trolly Wire Scott, as they variously called him, fizzed up like a Seidlitz powder.

Scotty Crabbed.

Scotty crabbed and crabbing sounded unusually hars, coming from a fellow who had been kept in the line-up quite a spell beyond his time just out of consideration for his feelings and his record. Other ball players, notably Casey Stengel, the tourist of the major leagues, and old Jack Quinn, the pitcher who had spent 12 years with the Yankees, had been displaced by younger fellows when they stilll had lots of play left in them, but had taken the rap with a cracked laugh.

Scotty's legs had been buckling for a long time and he was trying to renew the exhausted snap at the drug store, where he bought some elastic bandages to make them feel as springy as they did in 1916, when he started his steady job with the Boston Red Sox. Scotty had lost something though, that the drug stores didn't have in stock.

The pitchers began to complain that he was fielding his position on a dime. He couldn't cover his acreage. There isn't a pitcher living, unless it might be Walter Johnson, who won't share the blame for his defeats. Pitchers are generous that way.

Cleaver Withheld.

Huggins withheld the cleaver as long as he could, but Scott should have known it was coming. He might even have had his neck shaved to take the blade neatly when the time came to let him have it. He had seen dozens of others get it and the signs were familiar to him.

Scotty pouted like a temperamental tennis player. He wasn't going to warm anybody's bench. He would either play ball or he wouldn't.

Considering that Scotty had put in four seasons on the most generous pay roll in the major leagues and that he had picked up three shares of world's series money to say nothing of a second-place share last year, he hadn't been abused very badly in being benched.

Men's Peck Again.

Scotty will halve the job of shortstop for the Washington club with Roger Peckinpaugh, who was discharged by the Yankees to make room for him in 1922. Peckinpaugh may be pardoned if he doesn't exactly ather Scotty with love and kisses. He lost one good job to the deacon and also lost two world series shares that went to Scott.

The record that Scotty was so proud of was pretty tenuous in spots. There were lots of games in which he played only a few innings. But just so he happened in the box score, it counted as a game. But it's a record, nevertheless, that no other ball player has even approached and probably it never will be matched.

He was dropped into the Red Sox line-up on June 20, 1916, and he took some part in every scheduled game of the club whose colors he wore until the spring of 1925, 1,307 games without missing.

Thirty-Four States Fail To Protect Migratory Birds

New York, June 20.—(Special.)—The failure of 34 state legislatures to pass laws limiting daily bag limits on migratory game birds during the past winter shows that the unorganized defenders of wild life have been unable to wake up those legislatures to the threatend extinction of the wild ducks, geese, brant and other migratory birds now being slaughtered by millions of so-called sportsmen," said Dr. William T. Hornaday, noted naturalist and defender of wild life, who has been making strenuous efforts to save migratory game birds from threatened extinction.

"I have heard from forty-one states and only eight of them made reductions in bag limits, open seasons, or both, on migratory game birds," said Dr. Hornaday.

"Two states, Texas and Michigan, made many excellent reforms in bag limits. Five states, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Kansas, Idaho and Minnesota, have made good reductions in bag limits and open seasons. West Virginia reduced the seasons on six different kinds of migratory game birds.

"But in the other thirty-four states the slaughter can go on at its former rate. As the birds migrate and pass state to state, adequate protection can only be established through laws in all states. Power to make nation-wide regulations on migratory game was given by congress in 1918, to the secretary of agriculture. Why is it not exercised now? Those states that have not passed special reduction laws are fattening up the game birds to be ruthlessly slaughtered by hunters in other states.

Birds Doomed.

"Recent reports from unbiased observers in the south and in California, where wild fowl usually congregate in great numbers for winter feed, bear out the predictions made a few months ago that our migratory game birds are doomed. The last shooting season in California is described as 'rotten.' The lawmakers do not even seem inclined to save them," said Dr. Hornaday.

"Here in the east, apathy and opposition to killing reductions are barring all progress. The commercial interests have the upper hand. They have millions of dollars of capital to back them, millions more at stake, and wide influence. They are able to block the passage of gun legislation that they do not like. The defenders of wild life who stand for reforms are without large funds, they are unorganized, and they are utterly unable to have personal representatives in the various legislatures to introduce and back up bills for the better protection of the birds.

"Reports made during the past hunting season covering much of the United States reveal an alarming diminution in our supply of migratory game birds. I am convinced the present limited volume of it will follow the long list of native American mammalia and birds already locally extinct over wide areas. Nature lovers will not be able to prevail, unorganized as they are, against the powerful and thoroughly-organized game-killers and optimists who put lawmakers to sleep with optimistic talk."

Duck Supply Low.

Dr. Hornaday has just received a letter from Herbert Robert McCherry, of New York. McCherry recently returned from a six months' observation trip in the Mississippi and southwestern Louisiana marsh lands. He says: "My observations warrant me in stating that the duck supply on the American continent is becoming more alarming each year. There were comparatively few large flights in southwestern Louisiana, where in former years duck ponds fairly teemed with canvas backs, mallards, pintails and teal. Shooting clubs operating there were required to feed the ducks very heavily with rice, and pump water into the levees, in order to keep the ducks that inhabited these marshes from migrating further south. Despite the heavy baiting, only a few hundred ducks were seen the latter part of December. The Louisiana shooting season on ducks ends January 31, and in January comparatively few flights of ducks, never numbering more than 50 in a flight, were seen.

"I deplore the tactics of the alleged sports' clubs in baiting their blinds and keeping laborers in the blinds overnight to keep the ducks from feed, water and rest until sunup, and the entrance of the wealthy members of the club into the blinds. You will appreciate the outcome—the tendency of the ducks—used to finding feed in the blinds—to come tumbling in and fall an easy prey to the shooter, no matter how poor a shot he may be. The greener the shooter is, the more birds are slaughtered, for in most cases the novice will become excited and start shooting when the birds are practically out of range, crippling vast quantities in excess of the daily limit, and beyond the retrieving point, with the result that many times the game limit falls prey to vermin or dies a lingering death.

Evade Law.

"I deplore the fact that guides in the southern ducking clubs are provided with a hunting license and a gun, making the limit twice as much in number for the member of the club whom they guide. In addition, I urge a closed season on wild-fowl shooting in the south, particularly Louisiana, on account of the many duck clubs cropping up adjoining or between the large game preserves situated there—notably Marsh Island refuge, the Audubon society and the Paul Rainey reserves.

"According to the records available, over 4,000,000 hunting licenses in 48 states of our union were issued last year and, based on an average kill of 10 ducks per licensee, a total of 40,000,000 ducks would be killed each season. I beleive you will agree that 10 ducks per person over a three month's shooting season is underestimated. I would state an average of 100 ducks per season per person, but refrain, for I know there is not that number left on the American continent; nor do I believe there will ever be again.

"There is no sport like hunting. But the degrading part of it is that individuals are organizing clubs near or between game refugees, encroaching on the natural feeding, breeding and resting places of our wild fowl and killing them off with just as much sport as one would get on a poultry farm, shooting chickens. Unless we get some legislation ere long, closing for a few years southern duck shooting and reducing bag limits in other states, the wild fowl of this continent faces certain extinction."

MANY ENTER LAKEWOOD RACES

Dewey Tidwell, of Savannah, is the latest entry in the annual Fourth of July automobile races to be held on the Lakewood oval, according to announcement made Saturday by R. M. Striplin, secretary of the Southeastern Fair association, which is sponsoring the annual midsummer program.

Not only will there be two races July 4, but there will be four feature harness events with three heats each. There will be two pacing and two trotting events.

Two carloads of race horses owned by J. B. Armstrong, of Woodville, Ga., and Turner Pressley, of Valdosta, Ga., arrived at Lakewood Saturday morning, and those owners immediately began preparing for the harness races that will be held July 4.

With the arrival of the seven horses Saturday, more than 20 horses are at present in the Lakewood barns and are working out each morning and afternoon on the mile track.

Other arrivals are expected daily and horses from the stables of George Stiles, of Rome, have not been entered as yet, but word was received Saturday that Stiles will be here early this week.

Extra workmen will be placed on the Lakewood track during the week and every effort will be pushed forward in order to have the track in the best possible condition for the double-header race attraction for July 4.

ANTHONY SIGNS AT CARNESVILLE

Carnesville, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—Mark Anthony, former Georgia grid star, will teach and coach in the Franklin County High school next year, according to an announcement made here Friday.

Last year Anthony coached in one of the schools just above Atlanta and it was after much consideration that he finally accepted the offer to coach here.

For four years Anthony was a star member on Georgia's grid teams. He played guard in his freshman year and then guard for three years on the Bulldog varsity.

Anthony takes the place of Suddith who has left for Hartwell where he will coach during the next school year.

Locals To Meet Lookouts, Barons Before Returning Here With Pels, July 2

BY JULIAN GRIFFIN.

Just as the Crackers were returning to normalcy, or hitting their stride again, Dan Michalove turned Saturday to look over the schedule and sent word to Bert Niehoff to tell his players to get their personal belongings together, for it was time for them to hit the road again.

The Crackers spend ten days in foreign ports, stopping off today at Nashville to play a series of four games with the Vols.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday will find Niehoff and his athletes at Chattanooga, sliding past Devormer and making an effort to cut down the lead of three and one-half games which the New Orleans crew now holds over the local entry.

To top off the road trip, the homelings will stop over at Birmingham to have it out with the portly Barons on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday of next week.

By the time all of this has transpired it will be next month and the boys will return to the fold to play before a friendly home crowd which has not been so friendly during the past week or so, during the terrible slump.

Pels Here July 2.

The enemy during the home-coming series will be none other than the pace-setting delegation from New Orleans, and it will be a merry battle for first place between these two clubs, provided some other club hasn't pulled the act of the uninvited guest and stuck its nose in the pie by then.

The Cracker club which left home last night was a better team than the one we saw lose game after game during the home stand by miserable exhibitions.

Niehoff is now back in the line-up and the boys have snapped out of it. They have ridded their systems of enough rotten baseball to last a season, and it is high time for injuries to lay off the local club for a while. The locals will not show their heels to Southern league opposition during the next few weeks.

The acquisition of Frank Dodson, promising hurler from the Virginia league, in place of Paul Fittery, is calculated to help the hurling staff.

We hated mighty bad to see Fittery go. He is a smart pitcher with plenty of stuff, but three different operations slowed him down to an extent that he could not make the grade.

Lost His Strength.

In addition to his famous "half-balk" motion, he was throwing them across with everything on them, but his strength had been sapped and he was not able to get 'em across hard enough.

Cracker officials realized his value and held on to him as long as they could possibly afford; time came when the guillotine had to fall again and this time it caught him. But he is not through. The man who made such a splendid record for St. Paul is going to pitch some more fine baseball for some club later on. We hope another Southern league club doesn't get him.

During the past eight games, including Thursday's double header, all the Crackers combined have been at bat 261 times, hit safely 72 times and scored 35 runs, for a team batting average of .276. But it must be remembered that this includes the worst slump of the season.

The composite Cracker box score for the past eight games, through Friday's game, follows.

TUNNEY SCIENTIFICALLY TRAINED FOR TITLE BOUT

Conqueror of Gibbons Has Best Chance To Gain Dempsey's Crown--Edgren

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

For three years Tunney has been scientifically developed and prepared to fight for the world's heavyweight title. Three years ago Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager, planned a campaign to lead to the championship. Tunney, when Gibson first took him in charge, was a lightweight with some skill, plenty of fighting spirit, and a habit of breaking his hands in his anxiety to land knockout punches. He was an unusually intelligent young boxer, and Gibson's experience has led him to consider intelligence much more important than bulk or muscle.

Tunney's trouble with his hands started with his early matches. He was in the Marines during the war, and began boxing while in active service. He developed quickly and fought some of the biggest and best men in the army. He defeated Bob Martin in four rounds, winning the decision, and also beat Ted Jamison in ten rounds, taking the inter-allied light-heavyweight championship. When he came back from the war he started as a professional boxer and knocked out a lot of well-known light-heavyweights. At that time Gene's ambition was to work his way to the top by tipping over all who stood in the way, and he swung his punches. A swinging punch is likely to be slightly inaccurate, and Gene broke his hands on two or three hard leads when he was shooting for the chin.

Handled Ax.

When Billy Gibson took charge he sent Gene up into the Maine woods to handle an ax in a lumber camp for a few months to strengthen his hands and forearms, so that he could hit effectively with a short punch. Then he had him study the knack of hitting straight, short blows and using hard-driven hooks for the body. He made Tunney stop trying to knock his opponents out in a hurry, made him learn the art of defense, had him box a lot of fast and clever men so that he would learn how to avoid being hit, and how to take instant advantage of openings. All the time Tunney was improving his own hitting.

The result showed in several of his fights last year, when he beat Martin Burke, knocked out Erminio Spalla and Georges Carpentier, decisively outboxed Harry Greb for the third time, and outboxed clever Jeff Smith in a 15-round no-decision bout at New Orleans.

Tunney was beginning to show that he could either box or fight. He was taking a college course in fighting, under Professor Gibson, who has had a score of champions fighting in his clubs during the past thirty years, had made thousands of matches, watched thousands of boxers training in his gymnasium, has studied them all keenly, and who developed Benny Leonard from a novice without punch to one of the cleverest fighting lightweight champions in ring history.

Too Cautious.

Until Tunney knocked out Spalla he had the reputation of being too cautious in the ring. In fact he was fighting according to Gibson's directions and restraining his own inclinations to go in and trade wallops. He saw other promising heavyweights come along and dash into prominence for a few months by slugging their way through a few fights, only to be slugged in turn and drop out of the news columns.

No college athlete ever lived more cleanly and trained more consciously than Tunney. Gene lived in the country, stayed away from the city except when he came in to fight. He kept early hours, lived like an ancient Greek under the training oath of the Olympic champions. He never dissipated in any way.

As a result he developed a perfect physique, perfect coordination of nerve and muscle and brain. He grew into a heavyweight.

This year Tunney is ready to go after the big title. The bout with Gibbons was taken on to bring him into a challenging position, for Dempsey cabled Gibson that if Tunney beat Gibbons, Tunney's challenge will be accepted by the champion "if the promoters make a suitable offer."

In knocking out Tom Gibbons in 12 rounds—the first time Gibbons was ever knocked out or even dropped to the floor in his 14 years of fighting, Tunney showed the public the result of scientific preparation. He fought like a champion though every round. There was not a single weak spot in his work.

Tunney went into tha tfight with a carefully laid plan, and never forgot it. The fight had hardly gone three rounds before the crowd felt that Tunney was the master and that Gibbons was in for a beating. All the craft of the veteran who stood up to Dempsey 15 rounds was useless against Tunney.

Carpentier couldn't lay a glove on Gibbons. Tom's defense was good against Dempsey. But Tnnney penetrated his defense easily and often. Gibbons has a trick of forcing his way in, both arms protecting his chin, his body drawn back out of range, swaying to offer an elusive target and to add force to his puneh when he finds an opening.

Wore Gibbons wn.

When he tried this Tunney did something that no other fighter has ever been able to do to Gibbons. He stood straight, refusing to take a backward step, and peppered Tom continually about the head with a short, jarring left that held him away, threw him off balance, kept him from "setting" for a punch, and gradually wore him down. When Tom rushed in desperately Tunney shifted a bit to one side or the other and drove in terrific body punches. Only once in the fight was Tunney in danger.

Then a hard smash in the body slowed him up visibly for a minute or two, but he fought so steadily that Gibbons couldn't press his advantage, and in the next round Tunney was last and as strong as ever.

Throughout the bout Tunney was too fast to be hit effectively. He had the defense skill developed in many cautiously fought bouts, when Billy Gibson wouldn't let him cut loose his heavy punches. He had the speed and skill to land punches almost at will. And when Tom, dazed and weary, relaxed for a single moment in the 12th round, Gene shot over the hard straight right hand punch to the jaw that he had been reserving for the knockout. That punch was a paralyser. It might have dropped any other heavyweight.

Tunney today is a much faster fighter than Gibbons was at Shelby. He is faster, stronger, bigger and a harder hitter.

Jack Dempsey always says, when you ask him, that he likes to fight big men. They move slowly and they are easy to hit. Dempsey has a punch in either hand and that discounts strength and bulk. But he admits that it's much harder to place that punch right on a swiftly moving target. He pictures Harry Greb as his idea of a hard man to fight, because Greb is always moving.

If Gene Tunney fights Dempsey it will be a real championship battle, and very likely it will go ten rounds or more. I don't think Tunney has developed far enough yet to have a chance in the world to beat Dempsey as Dempsey was at Toledo, but Jack never will be in his Toledo condition again. He has grown bigger. His ambition isn't so keen. He has soft years behind him now, instead of the lean years before the Toledo fight. If he has slowed up appreciably through not fighting often enough and through living too luxuriously, Tunney may beat him. The wiry, nervous Dempsey of five years ago, with the speed of a featherweight, the endurance of a Jeffries, and the fastest and hardest punch ever carried by a champion, was unbeatable.

Would Fight Hard.

Against Dempsey, Tunney would fight much as he did against Gibbons, using his speed to keep out of trouble and to get in with sharp punches now and then. He could hardly hold Dempsey off the way he did Gibbons, by standing straight and using short, jerking punches at his head, because Dempsey doesn't cover his chin and push in to get to close quarters. He comes uncovered, bent over, leaping in with furious blows. He doesn't sway as he used to, and he is much easier to hit because he moves in straight lines.

It would be Tunney's plan to hit sharply and slide away, to keep moving every second of the time and make Dempsey keep moving, to use his favorite body punch at every opportunity. His hope would be that Dempsey might tire and grow slow. If he found that skill and speed couldn't offset Dempsey's powerful rush he might have to risk everything to get a right hand punch home on Dempsey's chin. Even then Tunney would have taken a chance. Spalla is square-jawed and built to take punches, and the first right-hand Tunney let go in the Spalla fight knocked one side of the Italian's face out of shape and floored him. The body punch that finished Carpentier or the right that dropped Gibbons might stagger Dempsey.

However the fight went, it would be worth looking at. Entirely a different proposition from a Dempsey-Wills bout, which could hardly be anything but a slugging bee on Dempsey's part and a holding, wrestling, mauling match on the side of Wills.

ANGLEY HURT AS JACKETS WIN

Marietta, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—Marietta Yellow Jackets triumphed over the Power company team here today in a pitchers' battle fought between Lefty Bean and Reeves. While the former only allowed three hits, costly errors by his teammates paved the way for the victory. Edwards surrendered only six hits.

Two unfortunate occurrences marred an otherwise beautiful game. In the fourth inning a foul tip split Angley's hand and he was forced to retire in favor of Vandergriff. Marion, first baseman for the visitors, also received an injury and retired from the game.

Marietta plays the strong Cartersville team here Wednesday.

AIR STUNTS HERE TODAY

Candler flying field will be unofficially christened this afternoon when a noted dare-devil will drop with parachute from Pilot Beeler Blevins' airplane. The dare-devil's name is withheld by Pilot Blevins for a surprise to those who witness the drop.

It is rumored that an associate of Blevins, whom he met recently in Kansas City, Mo., will make the drop. Pilot Blevins is well known in Atlanta, having made this city his headquarters for some time past.

If the wind allows, the dare-devil will make the highest parachute drop ever seen in Atlanta. Pilot Blevins will arrive in Atlanta this morning from St. Louis, Mo., where he has been spending several days on business. He has done a great deal of work in the interests of Candler field in furnishing ideas used in the construction of the field and his ability as a stunt flier is unquestionable.

Large crowds are expected to view the parachute drop, with fair weather forecast by the weather man, and flying conditions showing excellent promise.

SPORT FOR ALL AT OHIO STATE

Columbus, Ohio, June 20.—Eighty per cent of the male students at Ohio State university participated in intramural games during the past year, according to statistics compiled by Grant P. Ward, director of intramural athletics at the university. The total number of individuals taking part was 4,811, not including several hundred men out for varsity sports and varsity freshman teams, nor those taking part in compulsory physical education work. There are about 6,000 male students enrolled.

Thirteen thousand dollars is spent annually on intramural sports, the report shows. Basketball is the most popular sport, 281 teams being enrolled with a total of 2,500 players.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY.

"Renascence" and "Second April," the two books of poems which first made Edna St. Vincent Millay's fame, have been taken over by Harper & Bros. and have just been republished, uniform with Miss Millay's new book of poems, "The Harp Weaver," and with her other books of plays and verse.

Now, at last, "Renascence" and "Second April," which for the past several years have not always been available, are again on the market.

It was the title poem of "Renascence" which first won for Miss Millay the admiration and the wonder of our time. When the poem appeared Carl Van Doren wrote:

"It was like suddenly finding wings to come upon these lines. The diction was so plain, the arrangement so obvious that the magic of the opening seemed a mystery; and yet the lilt and truth of these verses were magical, as if a lark had taken to the air out of a dreary patch of stubble."

"Second April" contains the familiar ode, "Silence," "Elaine" and other poems quoted so often that they have become almost a part of our language. "The Blue Flag in the Bog," "Song of a Second April," "Rosemary," "To a Poet That Died Young," "Wild Swans" and "Journey," whose closing lines one feels to be very true of the poet:

"The world is mine; blue hill, still silver lake,
Broad field, bright flower, and the long white road
A gateless garden, and a nopen path;
My feet to follow, and my heart to hold."

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The Barbarian. By Wadsworth Camp, whose writings, whether fiction or otherwise, are always eagerly read by the men and women who know his clever style and who thoroughly enjoy it.

The story is located in the south and begins with the life of Jefferson Harmon during his senior year—a time when he alone and unbefriended, had worked his way through the long school years which had now brought him to the last year.

But college life had given him a creed—"In this world a man can't get more than he aims for." He never lost sight of this and with all the mental strength he had fought his way into politics, and step by step he finally became "the people's man" which placed him in the open road to congress.

He falls in love and marries an attractive girl belonging to the classes which he had been fighting since his college days, and from this time the reader will become more and more interested in the career of this determined hero of the masses as he sees the success he has fought for just ahead. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

THE SCARLET COCKEREL.

The story of "The Scarlet Cockerel" and how it came to be written is still being discussed in literary circles. It was published in these columns, but 1925 readers of this entertaining story asks that it be "told again." It is as follows: "When Charles Boardman Hawes, author of "The Mutineers," "The Great Quest" and "The Dark Frigate," died in the summer of 1923 at the age of 34. The Atlantic Monthly offered a prize of $2,000 for the best story of adventure—a story that would rank with the Hawes stories mentioned above.

The Atlantic prize was intended as a memborial to Mr. Hawes, whose adventure stories had been so thoroughly enjoyed by the public. Among the many contestants was C. M. Sublette, who was 37 years of age, who had never written a novel, though he had devoted much time and thought to the writing of short stories of the adventure type. Mr. Sublette is an up-to-date historian and he gave his novel a historical background, being a sixteenth century tale of the French Huguenot colonists in the Carolinas and their difficulties with the Spanish from Florida. (Atlantic Monthly Press.)

Spendthrift. A novel of the Great Lakes. This is the story of Carl Jarrison, master of the Yacht Norseman, who was convicted on circumstantial evidence of the murder of the owner. It is the story of a man who does not propose to be downed by an enemy. It is the story of a man's fight against an enemy who did not dare to come out in the open and fight.

Years passed and only the memory of an evil face remained to a hunt him in his search for his enemy. Time and again he became, discouraged, but his tremendous will urged him on, and the knowledge that he was innocent of so great a crime, until he found himself on the right track, and the story of the great battle he fought not only for himself, for his good name, but for the girl he loved, carries with it the victory of a golden-hearted man, even though a heroic figure created by Harold Titus in one of the best books he has written. (Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

Yorke, the Adventure, and "The Adventures of a Supercargo" are the latest books in the collection of sea stories by Louis Beckie, all of which have been among the most readable books of the sea.

While the story of Louis Beckie has been told time and again in this column, there are young readers who would like to hear how he left his native town, Port Macquarrie, a seaport of New South Wales, at the early age of 14 years for commercial training in San Francisco, Cal. But the sound of the waves was always beckoning to him and finally he could not resist the temptation to follow the call which led him to the South seas, where he followed the occupation of supercargo of a trading vessel, during which time he had many thrilling experiences.

He was induced by the editor of The Sydney Bulletin to write these experiences for publication, and this was the beginning of his adventure stories written under the title "By Reef and Palm," with an introductory by Lord Pembroke, who said "Lois Beckie knew the Pacific as few men alive or dead have ever known it." (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

The Clutch of the Corsican. A tale of the days of the downfall of the great Napoleon. By Alfred H. Bill. Frontispiece by Frank M. Rines. This story is one of the selections which was submitted in the Atlantic's prize contest for stories of adventure perhaps a year ago.

The following recommendation made it worth while for publication: "It is full of dash and go, all the time overshadowed by a tragic doubt, yet lightened by a woman's unreasonable hope."

It is the story of an American boy and his beautiful mother who are held as British hostages over in France during the last years of Napoleon's reign. The vital question of the story is the disappearance of the husband and father. It is entertaining from the first page to the last, all leading up to the long delayed knowledge of the father's fate which is cleverly woven in with the dramatic return of Napoleon from Elba. (The Atlantic Monthly Press, Boston.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Synonyms and Antonyms. For cross-word "puzzlers." By Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows, formerly of the University of Wisconsin. This is perhaps the most complete book that has has been issued as a help in the cross-word work, for it contains 10,000 words of similar and opposite meanings—all of which will be of assistance to students, literary men and women, and writers, public speakers, and it has already been pronounced the best of its kind. (Fleming H. Revell Co.)

Bucolic Beatitudes. By Rusticus. Illustrated by Decie Merwin. The author while in a very inspirational mood a la the country, tells of the peace and charm of his country and takes you all over it and introduces you to the "farm folks."

The first chapter is entitled "Blessed Be the Dog"—this being followed by the pig, who is called the humorist of the farm; the cow, the ..n, the horse, etc. And then he gives you a glorious ride through the country that would make any man living in the city long for a country home.

This is a book of wit and wisdom and the reader will find that it is filled with real philosophy. The Atlantic Monthly Press, Boston.)

Horseback Riding. A practical guide for beginners. This little volume contains brief and helpful hints on how to ride a horse, riding equipment and the acquirement of skill and good form in riding. By Dorothy Louise Burkett.

Now that riding has become one of the popular exercises for boys and girls again, as it has been many times in the past, this book should become very popular with beginners, as it is simple in its rules and very explanatory. (Orange Judd Publishing Co., New York city.)

The Road to Beauty. Mabelle Burbridge writes a most interesting book on "An Adventure in Rejuvenation." The frontispiece drawing is by Emmet Watson—silhouettes by Paul A. Lobel. The book is dedicated "To my little Brown Betty and my Gray Man." This is a book that every girl will read with much enthusiasm. The titles of the different chapters brings a smile. For instance, "Eat, Drink and Be Merry, for Tomorrow You Diet." "The Downtrodden Pair" "Care of the Feet," etc. (Greenberg, publisher, New York.

JUNIOR BOOKS.

Among the attractive books for juniors, especially for girls, are the following two which have received so much praise from their young readers:

The House in the Golden Orchard, by Dorothea Castelhun, author of "Penelope's Problems," "Penelope and the Golden Orchard," and now comes a story woven around "Penelope and Her Frends." The artistic illustrations are by William C. McNulty. (L. C. Page & Co., Boston.)

Barbara Winthrop at Boarding School. By Helen K. Broughall. Illustrations by Elizabeth R. Withington, whose beautiful quotation in the beginning of her book is worth remembering:

"Keep your face towards the sunshine, and the shadows will fall behind you."

Every girl who sees herself on the way to boarding school, and those who are already among the great number who are experiencing the pleasures and the "ups and downs" of a boarding school life will thoroughly enjoy Barbara's "Babs," as she is called by her girl friends describing school life. For instance:

"Peggy, dearest, Oh, there's such a load of things I want to tell you about I don't know where to begin! I sure do want to thank you again for that perfectly scrumptious farewell party you gave for me. . . .

"And, Peggy, I appreciate that darling little watch, your mother's parting gift. Surely, if anything can succeed in getting me up on time, that will. I wonder if I will ever be prompt.

"And now comes the real excitement! Peggy, I was so thrilled I wanted to squeal, but my lately developed dignity didn't permit. He, Bobbie, was in a 'speckled blue haze, honestly. Well, we just had gobs of fun and I am going to write you every little detail later, but good night, Peggy, dear, and with oceans of love and a kiss on every wave from Babs." (L. C. Page Company, Boston.)

BOOKS FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Tommy Tucker on a Plantation. By Dorothy Lyman Leetch, with introduction by Louise P. Latimer, director of work with children, public library, Washington. Pen and ink full page and text illustrations by L. J. Bridgman.

Tommy was christened "Talbot Matthew Tucker," but he was such a likable little fellow that "Tommy" suited him so much better. While he had a beautiful home in Norfolk, Va., in the Colonial days, he made a most enjoyable trip to England and while there he spent some time at his uncle's Myrtle Hill plantation, where he just enjoyed everything to eat, all kinds of pleasures and even found lots of interest in visiting the negro quarters where they sang for him and told him stories of the good old days.

The little folks will enjoy the information which is given about the customs, the industries, and how they used to dress in the Colonial days in Virginia. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., Boston.

CURRENT MAGAZINES.

Scribner's Magazine for this month discusses some very important subjects by well-known and popular writers. For instance, "How Free Is Speech?" by Robert W. Winston; "Recent Strides of Federal Authority," by William Cabell Bruce, senator from Maryland; "Nowisky, Otherwise Volstead," by a college president;; "As I Like It," by William Lyons Phelps; "The Writing of Fiction," by Edith Wharton; "Apples of Gold or Pictures of Silver," by Lawrence S. Morris; "The Bridegroom," by Clarke Knowlton. There are also poems by Clement Wood; "The Mocking Birds," by Paul Hamilton Hayne, with a note by William Hamilton Hayne, and other contributions of prose, and poetry which makes it quite an interesting number.

The Golden Book for June presents a most attractive cover design by Haweis. This is a most popular magazine filled with fiction and true stories that will live, says the author, Henry W. Lanier. The selections, as usual, are by well-known authors, among them being William J. Locke, Owen Wister, Fernald, Jack London, Dr. Samuel Johnson, Henry Wallace Phillips; and there are many appealing poems by such writers as Riley, Yeats, Millay, etc.

The Century Magazine continues to give its many readers an attractive table of contents. The drawing entitled "June," by G. H. Mitchell, is full of charm and grace. Among the titles of the contributions for this month are "The Professor Goes Slumming," by Stanley Walker; "A Bum," title story, by Floyd Dell; "Wash-Tubs and Woman's Duty," by Charlotte Perkins Gilman, who discusses the question "Is a Mother's Business Child Culture or Housework?" "Glimpses of Interesting Americans"—Amy Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Hughes, and E. A. Arlington—by Walter Tittle; Irwin Edman writes on "Richard Kane Reads the News," which is a lively discussion of what newspapers mean to us. There are articles by Padraic Colum, Carl Van Doren, Glenn Frank, etc.

The World Traveler for June has for its cover design a most beautiful picture of the June bride in the long ago as the finishing touches are being given to her bridal veil. "The Frontispiece" is an attractive view of Feather River canyon, California. As the reader of this welcome visitor knows there's always a splendid collection of readable articles with attractive illustrations by authors and artists whose work is always appreciated. Among the most interesting articles for travelers are "A Summer Cruise to Europe," "Paris," "Exhibition of Decorative Arts," "Touring Europe by Automobile" (an article by Bishop Morley), "Paris to New York by Airplane," "Colonel Bogey Abroad," "Real Meaning of the Rhine," A most interesting Paris letter, followed by "About, Aboard and Abroad," with entertaining features about the bride, "Marriage Customs in Many Lands," and "The Trousseau."

Current History. Illustrated. The following are the titles of some of the articles that have been contributed to the popular magazines for June: "A Defense of U. S. Naval Policy," by Dudley W. Knox, captain, U. S. N., retired; "A New Estimate of World War Casualties," by Rex F. Harlow; "A Month's World History;" "Who's Who on Soviet Russia;" "America's Dependence on Foreign Goods;" "The Methods of Teaching in American Schools;" "Canada Reaping a Harvest from Liquor Business;" "Prohibition Crisis in Finland;" "Armies and Navies of the World;" "The Charm of Czecho-Slovakia," with other up-to-date articles by well-known writers.

One of the most attractive cover designs for the month of June is carried by The St. Nicholas and is entitled "The South Wind," and there's everything else in the way of stories, poems, pictures, sports, etc., to entertain. Then there's the Watch Tower, the St. Nicholas League, the Letter Box, the Riddle Box and the St. Nicholas Stamp Page, all of which have given a great deal of pleasure to the juniors in the past. It is truly an up-to-date boys and girls magazine, and this number is the best number for your vacation collection of magazines.

Georgians Urged To Join in Fight Against Weevil

John R. Slater, president of the Georgia association, was in Atlanta Thursday in conference with railroad officials and with prominent local bankers relative to an intensive statewide effort during the next six weeks to save the 1925 cotton crop through a general use of poison in the cotton fields by the farmers of the state

"Georgia can and must save her 1925 cotton crop in order to maintain herself on a firm and sound economic basis, looking toward the brightest period in the history of our state," said President Slater in an appeal which he mailed out from association offices in Atlanta to offices of the Georgia association in various parts of the state and to heads of railroad organizations to whom he tendered assistance and cooperation in whatever plans they might have in their respective territories for spreading the gospel of boll weevil destruction.

Mr Slater particularly commended the plans for definite cooperative work recently undertaken by a number of civic organizations over the state in cooperation with officials of the A., B. & A. railroad and especially that part of the plan by which each member of the local civic organization is asked to visit a certain number of farmers within a limited time, to ascertain if there are any who are not using poison against the boll weevil and if not, why not; and to make himself responsible for any financial or other aid necessary to enable each and every farmer in the county to have every possible chance to produce the maximum yield of cotton.

President Slater called attention to the fact that Georgia has prospects of a splendid tobacco crop, a profitable peach crop, a good watermelon crop, a large yield of pecans, a good hay and feed crop, as well as a profitable truck crop and, therefore, every force should be united during the next six weeks in an effort to obtain a big profit for Georgia out of the state's major money crop.

He stated that Georgia had advanced in the development of the textile industry until her cotton mills have a capacity for handling a cotton crop in excess of the one million bales produced in 1924 and that the only way to make the crop profitable this year is to increase the yield per acre by poisoning against the greatly increased infestation reported.

He said that the stake involved for Georgia, in this contest with the boll weevil amounts to approximately $135,000,000 and that if vigorous poisoning should result in an increase of only 20 per cent in production, the savings would amount to more than $25,000,000 to the state.

Lead Battery Firm Opens Atlanta Office For South Territory

The National Lead Battery company, of St. Paul, Minn., has opened its southern headquarters in Atlanta, Frederick T. Newell, secretary of the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, announced Saturday.

F. M. Brown, secretary of the company, spent several days in the city last week looking over sites and getting in close touch and contact with business conditions of the south.

Property at 21 Bradberry street has been leased and from this office salesmen will cover the southern states.

"The company's business has been growing in the southern territory to such an extent that it was necessary to open a southern branch in order to serve more advantageously and promptly users of National batteries. Atlanta was chosen on account of the splendid distribution facilities it offers."

All of the above teachers have served in the schools here the past year, with the exception of Professor Hammack. He is a graduate of Emory university, in the class of '24. He has been in charge of boys' work at the Atlanta Y. M. C. A.

CARTERSVILLE MAY INSTITUTE Y. M. C. A.

Cartersville, June 20.—(Special.) Quite a number of local people gathered at an informal dinner to discuss Hi-Y work in the local schools, and the Y. M. C. A. movement in general. A party of Atlanta gentlemen came up to address the meeting.

The party was headed by W. W. Orr, president of the George Muse Clothing company. He was accompanied by Thomas Johnson, state executive secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; H. E. Montague, of the boys' work committee, and Dr. A. L. Wheeler, who served as an executive of the Y. M. C. A. organization overseas.

These gentlemen, together with Warren Jackson and Victor Little, students of the high school made talks during the evening. Z. M. Jackson, prominent Cartersville business man, was toastmaster.

The Hi-Y movement has already made considerable progress in the local school, and the dinner has given the idea added impetus in this community.

Psychology Lecture.

"Personality and Success," will be the subject of a free lecture to be given by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, psychologist, this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. The public is invited to attend.

LIQUOR RUNNERS WIN LEGAL POINT IN COURT DECISION

Contraband liquor runners won a technical point in their warfare with law enforcement officers Saturday when the Georgia supreme court handed down a decision holding that a person who obstructs an officer endeavoring to overhaul a liquor runner cannot be punished under the laws of Georgia.

However, if the officer is armed with a warrant in his chase after the violator of the liquor laws, the principle does not hold and the obstructionist is liable to arrest and punishment.

The supreme court's ruling was made in the case of F. C. Pritchard vs. the state, from Campbell county. Pritchard was charged with having driven his automobile across the road in such a manner as to block officers about to overhaul a liquor runner.

The supreme court held that the law only penalizes persons who obstruct officers engaged in serving legal processes and in the Pritchard case the officers had no warrant. The decision was rendered on a question certified from the court of appeals.

Newell Will Tour North To Invite Industries Here

W. R. C. Smith, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, announces that Frederick T. Newell, secretary of the industrial bureau, is being sent on a trip today in the endeavor to secure additional industries for Atlanta. The following cities will be visited: Detroit, Chicago, Toledo, Cleveland, Buffalo, Rochester and New York. He will specifically interview prospects who have had correspondence with the bureau in regard to the location of manufacturing plants, warehouses or sales offices in the city of Atlanta. The bureau has sufficient data which is believed will result in the early announcement as to the decision of two or three very large plants locating here.

It would help Atlanta greatly as a whole if our business people would promptly inform the Chamber of Commerce as to their knowledge of individuals or firms who are considering establishing a business in Atlanta or Georgia at this time. This information would prove invaluable to Secretary Newell on his visits to various cities.

"2 KILLED—4 HURT

In Accidents in Atlanta June 4."---Newspaper Headline.

From a headline in The Constitution June 4: "Train-Car Crash (near Forsyth, Ga.) Injures Two Women."

Such headlines as these tell their own story of the growing wave of traffic tragedies.

Although The Constitution has been telling the people of Atlanta and Georgia of the great Travel and Pedestrian Accident Insurance Reader Service it is rendering to its subscribers and their families between the ages of 15 and 70—telling them and urging them for nearly four years to secure this protection at once, not one of those killed or injured referred to in the headlines had taken advantage of The Constitution's great accident insurance protection offer.

Would $7,500.00 $2,000.00 or $1,000.00

be worth anything to your family if you were killed or maimed in a travel accident, automobile accident or wreck, or by being struck or knocked down while crossing or walking the street? If not protected, why delay, when the cost is only $1.00 to Constitution subscribers?

Do It Now! Tomorrow May Be Too Late!

YOU MAY BE KILLED TODAY!

Get This Protection NOW---Today! Before It Is Too Late!

Over $26,000.00 has already been paid to Constitution subscribers in death and accident claims. The best is none too good for Constitution subscribers and their families, and the protection you get through The Constitution is by far the best offered by any Southern Newspaper.

CONSTITUTION POLICY COVERS YOU IF KILLED or INJURED

While riding or driving in an auto, truck or horse-driven vehicle, either for PLEASURE or BUSINESS, or while riding as a passenger in any public omnibus, taxicab or automobile stage, or the wrecking of a passenger elevator.

If struck or knocked down while walking on a public highway or public street by an automobile, street car, or other vehicle, or burned to death, or suffocated therein, private residence, office building, lodge building, etc., or while riding as a passenger on a street car, railroad train, or steamship.

To Subscribers of The Constitution

$7500.00 Travel Accident Insurance Policy

For a Registration Fee of $1.00

New York, June 20.—A further slight decline in the cotton market at the opening today was followed by rallies on apprehensions of continued dry weather in the southwest and rather better reports from the cotton goods trade. October sold up from 23.07 to 23.46 and closed at 23.36, the general market closing steady at net advances of 12 to 26 points.

The opening was 4 to 7 points lower under a renewal of yesterday's selling movement, encouraged by relatively easy cables and private reports of prospects for unsettled weather, with showers in the south. Offerings were much less active after Friday's rather heavy liquidation, however, and the market soon turned steadier on covering for over the week-end. This became more general after publication of the western belt forecast which pointed to continued dry weather in Texas. There probably also was some buying in the belief that recent improvement in demand for cotton goods would keep southern mills employed during the summer. July sold up from 23.30 to 23.65, and December from 23.27 to 23.63, but the market closed a few points off from the best under realizing.

Private cables said liquidation had been absorbed by covering and trade calling in Liverpool.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.

New York, June 20.—Cotton, spot quiet; middling, 24.25.

GAINS ARE SEEN AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, June 20.—The short Saturday session in the cotton market was a fairly active affair and prices were on the upgrade most of the day, mainly on failure of rain in the drouth stricken sections of Texas. Liverpool was about as due at the opening here but the local market showed initial gains of 2 to 5 points. After advancing to 22.85 for October and 22.95 for December, or 7 points above the close of yesterday, October eased off to 22.75 and December to 22.86. These were the day's lows. After the weather map showed fair rains in the east but little in the west and none at all in the drouth areas, the market rallied and the advance was increased when the official forecast promised generally fair weather for the entire belt over Sunday. October traded up to 23.09 and December to 23.30.

From these high points the market reacted slightly in the late trading on realizing by satisfied longs for over the week-end and the close showed net gains for the day of 14 points on July and 20 points on new crop months. New crop activity is extending to March in which there was fair trading today.

The July fluctuated rather more violently than other months despite the small trading and after dropping to 23.20 in the first hour advanced to 23.65 in the second hour and closed at 23.58. Cotton goods market reported a much better demand with the largest sales in many weeks.

SPOTS IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, June 20.—Spot cotton closed steady, 15 points up. Sales on the spot, 401. To arrive, none; low middling, 22.95; middling, 23.95; good middling, 24.55. Receipts, 617; stock, 109,241.

Cottonseed Oil.

New York, June 20.—Cottonseed oil was steady to firm today with shorts covering on the strength in lard. Closing bids were 1 to 2 points net higher. The census report will not be issued until the first of the week. Sales 16,100 barrels. Prime crude nominal; prime summer yellow, spot 10.75@11.25. July closed: 10.88; September, 11.32; October, 11.28; December, 10.65, all bid.

To Unveil Marker To Pallbearer Of Washington

Commerce, Ga., June 20.—(Special.—In recognition of the splendid services rendered during the revolutionary war by Colonel James Little, of Franklin county, the United States government has furnished a marker to be erected over the grave of Colonel Little in the Little family cemetery near the home of Crawford E. Little, which will be unveiled at 2:30 p. m., July 4 by the D. A. R.'s

Colonel Little served with distinction under General Washington throughout the revolutionary war, and was one of the pallbearers at Washington's funeral at Mt. Vernon. Colonel James Little was born in 1737 and was buried in Franklin county, Georgia in 1807.

From McCall's history of Georgia, page 312, it is stated that "It became necessary to seize Cameron, British agent for the Cherokee tribes. This hazardous enterprise was confided to Captain James McCall, Lieutenant James Baskin and Ensign Patrick Calhoun, with a detachment of 22 volunteers from Carolina and eleven from Georgia. They proceeded into Cherokee territory, were betrayed and attacked by Indians. So close was the engagement that James Little of Georgia (later Colonel James Little) killed two Indians with his knife."

After the close of the revolutionary war Colonel Little settled in Franklin county and became one of the most prominent and influential citizens of that county.

The public generally and the descendants of Colonel Little are especially invited to attend the unveiling of this marker. It has been suggested that everyone bring well-filled baskets and assemble at the home of Mr. Crawford Little promptly at noon so that the descendants of Colonel James Little and their friends may meet and mingle together for a while before the unveiling of the marker.

PADEREWSKI PLAYS FOR VICTOR RECORD IN NEW RELEASE

Franz Listzt's "Polonaise in E Major," rendered by the incomparable pianist, Sergei Paderewski, is the feature of the week's release of Victor records on sale Friday.

Another of the classics is "Danse Macabre," the scintillating work of a Saint-Saens, which is interpreted by the Philadelphia orchestra under the direction of Leopold Stokowski.

The Polish National orchestra, making its Victor debut, contributes Moszkowski's "Polonaise" and "The Postilion—Mazurka."

Lambert Murphy, famed singer of songs and sentiment, offers "Dreams" and "One Little Dream of Love" in his characteristic fashion.

Four fox trots, "Ah-Ha," "Just a Little Drink," "Honey I'm in Love With You" and "Charleston" are rendered by Paul Whiteman's orchestra and Fred Hamm and his orchestra introduce an additional brace of the foot warmers, "Stomp Off, Let's Go," and "Flag That Train."

Husband Withdraws Suit for Injunction Against 'Other Man'

Jesse F. Tompkins withdrew a petition seeking to permanently enjoin Harry W. Duncan from sending flowers, candy and love messages to Tompkins' wife, Mrs. Ella Tompkins. The action was taken through H. W. McLarty, attorney for the plaintiff. Judge E. D. Thomas, of Fulton superior court, ordered the temporary injunction, already granted, dismissed, and the action was dropped.

A counter suit, filed by Duncan to prevent Mrs. Tompkins calling him on the telephone, still is pending and she can not communicate with Duncan under a temporary injunction granted the petitioner. Hearing on this suit, which was filed by George McLarty, brother of H. W. McLarty, is slated sometime next week.

Georgia Law Bans Opening Graves Of Indian Race

The law of Georgia forbids exhumation of human bodies, irrespective of the type of burial place and the length of time they were laid below the sod.

This information was forwarded to H. M. Conley, of Athens, on Saturday by Assistant Attorney General T. R. Gress, after Mr. Conley had inquired as to the legality of digging corpses out of Indian mounds in Georgia.

Therefore, archeologists who are interested in the prehistoric races that once roamed over Georgia and have discovered an old burying ground of the aborigines, had better secure official permission before disturbing the last long sleep of the noble red men.

For, as Mr. Gress pointed out, the law provides from one to ten years' imprisonment for illegal exhumation of the dead, with no exceptions. But the assistant attorney general remarked it was doubtful if any interested parties could be found nowadays to prosecute in the case of Indian graves.

Baptist Church To Stage Picnic At Lakewood Park

Members of the Second Baptist church and Sunday school and their friends will hold their general outing and picnic, and regular old-fashioned basket dinner at Lakewood park next Saturday afternoon from 4 o'clock until midnight.

A committee has been appointed to look after the entertainment for the party and reports from the committee assert that some interesting things are certain to be staged.

Every member of the church and Sunday school and their friends are invited to picnic with the Second Baptist church, and everyone is requested to bring a large basket dinner, which will be served in the automobile building at 6 o'clock.

Mrs. H. R. Fisher, of the Woman's Missionary society of the Second Baptist church, is in charge of the picnic committee.

New York, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Bond prices drifted rather aimlessly in today's dull trading, which was featured principally by the rise in several United States government obligations to record high levels and a reaction in the oil issues after yesterday's last minute rally. The volume of business fell off sharply.

Aside from a 2-point recession in Sinclair Oil 6s and losses of more than a point in the Skelly and Pan-American liens, price movements of corporation issues were limited almost entirely to narrow fractions. Realizing sales, invited by the sharp upturns which followed Sinclair's Teapot Dome court victory, was responsible for the setback to the oil group.

Western railroad liens were inclined to follow the upward trend of the Granger stocks, but prices made little headway. The application of these lines for an increase in livestock freight rates stimulated buying. Denver & Rio Grande Western general 5s advanced a point. Sugar and Copper Company obligations continued to respond to improvement in the trade outlook.

A $2,000,000 4½ per cent bond issue on the city of Winnipeg, Canada, has been purchased by local bankers and will be offered at 95½.

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, June 20.—Despite constant switching from one group to another, the stock market has given a fairly good account of itself this week and promises to improve during summer months. We have been consistently bullish and see no reason to change our opinion at this time. The general public fail to see great possibilities in oil stocks and will probably become buyers at much higher prices. Good rails are cheap and there will be several upward moves in certain speculative issues. We favor White Motors, International Paper, U. S. Rubber, Colorado Fuel, rails and oils.

JNO. F. CLARK & CO.

New York, June 20.—Weekly mercantile reviews reflect little change in the business situation. On the whole, however, they are reassuring, although this is not the season for expansion of trade. We expect eventually higher prices. While reactions must be expected during the next few weeks, and may at times reach even more serious proportions, it is merely a result of conditions within the market itself.

Cotton Letters.

H. & B. BEER.

New Orleans, June 20.—(A. V. Curran & Co., correspondents.)—Next week numerous monthly private crop estimates will likely be released in advance of the government's first yield forecast of the season, due July 7, and while a large production is apt to be indicated, the world will probably need another large crop for next season, and crop forecasts at so early in the year are no criterion as to ultimate results, much depending upon the future conditions and activity of weevil.

C. P. ELLIS & CO.

New Orleans, June 20.—The market has been more or less unsettled by recent developments in July, and continued erratic fluctuations in the latter can probably be expected pending first notice day next Thursday. The action of July on the other hand can have only passing influence and the market will be controlled by weather and crop developments, and unless there should meanwhile develop some indication of relief of the drought in Texas, the market will probably rule higher next week.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, June 20.—In the mill end of business increased sales are commanding marked attention and the difficulty with which covering is encountered in futures cotton are all cumulative evidences of strength that show a strong market undertone and point to the probability of a further advance. Purchases at the market and on any easiness seem advisable until or unless the dry sections of Texas get relief. Liverpool due Monday: July, 12.83; October, 12.46.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, June 20.—There has been no relief to the dry sections of Texas, but while the buying in the market aside from short covering has not been of a very confident character, as most people feel that on any signs of rain the decline would be very rapid. Interest in the market depends on whether relief comes to the drouth area in Texas and few care to assume the risk. Declines will hardly go far until rains or good signs of them make their appearance.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, June 20.—The general impression now is that unless good rains occur in the early part of next week the market will continue its advance. We continue to receive telegrams regarding boll weevil in the Atlantics and the rains that have fallen there recently are so light that they will benefit the boll weevil materially. We look for no further advance next week if the weather reports continue to be unfavorable.

POST & FLAGG.

New York, June 20.—After yesterday's liquidation the market today appeared pretty well sold out and selling contracts were scarce. General business, however, was light as the trade are apparently preferring to remain on the fence till more definite crop advices are out.

Grain Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, June 20.—Wheat: There was good buying early largely credited to northwest interests. There were no indications of any important buying by the east, however, and market weakened later in sympathy with Winnipeg and because of seaboard advices indicating continued sluggishness in the export demand. We continue to feel that the possibilities in wheat are on long side of market.

Corn: Met with further liquidation and eased off late on larger receipts here and continued optimistic crop advices. Cash basis steady to one cent higher. Corn acts heavy and looks lower with favorable weather.

JNO. F. CLARK & CO.

Chicago, June 20.—Wheat: Featureless trading in wheat today, sentiment about evenly divided. Those who believe in higher prices point to the possibility of future damage to spring wheat while others are impressed by the refusal of importers or domestic millers to enter the market in any volume. Exports cables were flat in tone, seaboard finding only a few scattered lots sold, but the amount on passage is decreasing steadily and according to one English authority the total as low as 44,000,000 from which it is argued that importers will soon be buyers.

DAVIS FAILS TO END BUILDING TRADE ROW

Washington, June 20.—The conference between Secretary Davis and representatives of the plasterers' and bricklayers' unions, and contractors ended today without having reached an agreement for the settlement of plasterers' strike called last week by the plasterers' union.

Secretary Davis said the presidents of the plasterers' union had agreed to arbitration but that the bricklayers as a prerequisite to arbitration insisted on withdrawal of charters issued to newly-organized plasterers' local unions in Florida. The secretary said he was unable to get the contending interests together.

In a formal statement Mr. Davis urged organized labor to "rise to the occasion and vindicate its intelligence, its leadership and its appreciation of economic necessities by putting an end to this strike."

"A crisis is no longer looked upon as a sudden break in the normal course of things, like war or pestilence."

Psychology, Business Cycle---What Is Commerce Crises Cause?

"Business rarely remains for long on an even level. At almost all times it is either improving or declining."

BY ALLYN A. YOUNG.
Professor of Economics in Harvard University.

The earliest explanations of commercial crises ascribed them, not to such things as crop failures or over production or the over-expansion of credit, but to ingrained weaknesses of the human temperament. For some reason or for no reason at all, it was thought, a spirit of reckless speculation would sweep men off their feet and would spread through a whole country like a contagious disease. Crises were held to be merely the inevitable results of these outbursts of speculative mania.

Back of this "mania theory" of crises lay the memory of certain fantastically extravagant outbursts of speculation, like the "tulip mania" of 1630 in Holland and the "bubble period" of ninety years later, associated with the John Law's Mississippi company in France and with the South Sea company in England. Such periods of speculative frenzy, along with the crises that followed them, were thought of as sudden interruptions of the steady natural progress of industry and trade, like occasional rapids in a sluggish river.

This notion that crises were distinctly abnormal or even unnatural events is what, more than anything else, distinguishes the older view now commonly held. There are many who still think that certain traits of human psychology are to be blamed for crises, with all of their attendant costs in bankruptcies, business stagnation and unemployment. But a crisis is no longer looked upon as a sudden break in the normal course of things, like war and pestilence. Instead, it is viewed as an inevitable result or even an integral part of the normal cynical movement of business activity. Business, as we now know, rarely remains for long on an even level. At almost all times it is either improving or declining. Its movement is wavelike.

A Greater Wave.

Once in a while there comes a wave of unusual magnitude. Recovering from depression, business enters upon a period of prosperity. Prices and profits increase, employment is plentiful, and wages are high. But sooner or later something brings the upward movement to an end. The wave of prosperity breaks. Industry finds itself in the grip of a crisis. What is it that puts a sudden stop to the period of prosperity? Is it overproduction? Or the pinching out of business profits by the increase of wages, of interest rates, and of the cost of raw materials? Is it a crop failure? Or is it the exhaustion of the resources of the banks and the contraction of credit

Some students of the problem attach especial weight to one explanation, some to another. Others hold, apparently with more reason, that a number of factors may play a part in bringing about a particular crisis. But all are agreed that crises cannot be explained except in their relation to the whole cyclical movement of business activity. And all are agreed, furthermore, that human psychology has something to do with business cycles. But just what part psychology plays and how important that part is are matters about which there are differences of opinion.

It is common to attribute the excesses of business expansion to "over confidence," just as it is common to attribute business depression to "lack of confidence." It is reasoned that when business men think that the business outlook is favorable, they will act accordingly, and by their own activities—the placing of orders, the production of goods, the payment of wages—they will create the prosperity which they had anticipated. In a similar way, when they fear that the outlook is unfavorable, business men will curtail their orders their output and their employment of labor. Thus they will bring about a situation about a situation which will justify their fears.

Bull and Bear Movements.

Doubtless there is truth in this view of the matter, but is it the whole truth? There are bull movements and bear movements in business, as well as in the organized speculative markets. Optimism carries busines prosperity farther than otherwise it would have gone, and pessimism intensifies business depression, just as bull and bear movements on the stock exchange are likely to be overdone, and to lead to exaggerated swings of security prices. Psychological factors, we may grant, increase the magnitude of cyclical fluctuations of business activity. But why should there be these recurrent alternating states of optimism and pessemism? What conjures them into existence? What determines when they shall begin and when they shall end and when one attitude shall give way to the other?

The great majority of economists hold that underneath these psychological cycles, as we might call them, as fundamental changes in the economic conditions which govern the business outlook. The psychological cycle, despite its undoubted importance, is, in this view, an affair of secondary importance, controlled and "timed" by stubborn facts which business opinion cannot alter. The crops, the conditions of the banks, the possibilities of foreign trade, the purchasing power of consumers—such factors and others like them are held to be things which prompt and justify an optimistic or a pessimistic attitude on the part of business men. Opinion must rest on something tangible. In particular, reversals of the general trend of opinion can only be brought about by changes in the conditions upon which opinion rests. The human will cannot create prosperity unless fundamental economic conditions are such as to make prosperity possible. And even if, at a certain time, the prevailing opinion among business men is characterized by uncertainty and doubt, there are plenty of courageous, self-reliant, independent men who will go ahead whenever they are convinced that conditions (aside from the timidity of their fellows) are favorable.

Exceptions in Cycles.

Such is the general view, but there are some notable exceptions. The late Vilfredo Pareto, professor at the University of Lausanne, was one of the most distinguished of European economists. He declared boldly that business cycles are merely particular cases of "the general law of rhythm, which dominates all social phenomena." For example, he said, there are military and naval "panics." A nation fears foreign aggression; it rapidly increases its outlays for armaments. Then comes a calmer period, during which men give less thought to military preparedness.

So, too, in business life. "In certain periods men are full of confidence, in others they are completely discouraged. But nowadays these mental states may be modified by experience. The memory of the last previous crisis dampens exaggerated hopes of success, just as the memory of a preceding period of prosperity exercises a buoyant force in a period of business depression."

It may be that Pareto is right. It is possible that the alternating periods of prosperity and depression which characterize the operations of modern business are merely the outward signs of a mysterious rhythmical movement of the hopes, the ambitions and the energies of men. And yet no one will be fully satisfied with such an explanation until these psychological cycles, if such there be, are traced back to their source, and until some reasonable explanation of them is found. Periodic changes in the fundamental conditions governing the business outlook will not serve as such an explanation, for that would involve reasoning in a circle.

Climate and Business.

An interestiing theory has been advanced by Dr. Ellsworth Huntington, the Yale geographer. Climatic changes, he holds, are closely related to health, health affects mental attitudes, and ment attitudes affect business. The suggestion that the weather has an important effect upon business is, in itself, not new. Many economists have observed that there must be such a relation, and some have even thought that they have found a fairly exact agreement between weather cycles and business cycles. But generally their view has been that weather conditions influence business by affecting the crops. Dr. Huntington, however, emphasizes the importance of the weather in its relation to health and disease. There are time, he says, when optimism literally is "in the air."

"Not only, in certain periods, does the death rate drop to a low level, but sicknesses are rare, people do not suffer so much as usual from colds and headaches, and those who are well have a feeling of strength and buoyancy. We all know that feeling, and we know that it makes us hospitable to new ideas. The ideas that have been floating in men's minds seem more feasible than formerly, the difficulties do not see so formidable. Hence one man here and another there makes a final decision which may have been hanging fire for a long time. Thus a long train of circumstances is set in motion." In support of this conclusion Dr. Huntington says (in his work on "World Power and Evolution"): "The statistics from 1870 to the great war show that a high death rate regularly precedes hard times, while a low death rate precedes prosperity. By no possibility can the reverse be made to appear the case. Health is cause far more than an effect."

Social Consequences.

Some further evidence seems to point in the same direction. Dr. Maurice B. Hexter, director of the Federated Jewish Charities of Boston, is the author of an important book entitled "Social Consequences of Business Cycles." Upon the basis of a careful study of the fluctuations of birth rates and death rates in Boston, Dr. Hexter concludes, first that there is a definite relation between such fluctuations and the oscillations of business prosperity and depression, and second, that the variations of birth rates and death rates precede rather than follow the fluctuations of business activity.

Possibly so, but the case is by no means fully proved. Neither Professor Huntington's or Dr. Dexter's figures are conclusive. Closely examined, the evidence of real connection between business fluctuations and the variations of vital phenomena is found to be fairly strong, but the evidence that one type of phenomena precedes rather than follows the other is exceedingly tenuous. Moreover, it is impossible to blind the fact that a number of variable factors, such as the crops, or the amount of gold held by the banks, which are known to have a very important influence upon the expansion or contraction of business activities, are not matters of psychology. They are stubborn facts which men have to reckon with, whatever their moods and their emotions may happen to be.

Early Fall Stock Advance Is Prediction of Platt

BY C. H. PLATT.

New York, June 20.—(Special to The Constitution.)—There were periods in the past week when stock prices rose as if a new bull market was in the making, with many going to new high levels for the year and others to near the best figures for 1925. Even while this strength was in progress, however, there were some parts of the list which were declining, some of them going down quite a lot. Then there were other periods when the major trend was down, and as a whole, there was really a weaker tone than appeared on the surface. This was because there was no "follow through" in the buying. Prices were easy enough to run up, for there was little stock for sale, but there was just as great a scarcity of new buying at the higher levels and sometimes, reactions were much more rapid than theadvances had been. The situation appears to be the reverse of what a little but slip off again very easily because of lack of buying power, until a time is reached when the selling "dries up" and a new advance is in order.

The market looked in the past week as if some scattered buying could be found for a ways up, then prices would slide down when this buying was finished, and it appears also as if the time is not far off when there will be a lack of enough buying power to attract any following and there will be some new selling power developed. This is not a prediction of a severe or a long-continued decline, but there are plenty of evidences of a period of two to four weeks of generally lower prices, with occasional good rallies. It is not expected that this will be anywhere near as severe as the March declings, and it may be just a period of irregularity with moderate recessions and rallies.

Quiet Setting.

There are internal evidences in the market of the kind of quiet selling that precedes a period of lower prices, but it is also believed that many of those who have sold in anticipation of declines will replace their line of stocks on the lower levels and will again support the market for an advance before a month has passed. The basis for a decline at this time is technical, with many people loaded up with stocks and with new purchasing power rather small. Those who did buy in the past week included people looking for scalping profits. They would run prices up a bit and then hurry to take a small profit. Few of the active traders were buyers for the sake of holding stocks, many of them stating that they would not buy to hold until there had first been a good reaction. If the expected period of technical correction and lower prices does develop, it is expected to be followed by another good advance later in the summer ro in the early fall. The basis for this is the large amount of money available for investment and trading and the prospects for better business conditions. As the news takes a more optimistic turn and one trade after another reports increasing activity, which is looked for later in the summer and in the fall, people will get enthusiastic over stocks and will buy, and then many of the big holdings will be distributed. Strong and active markets are expected which this distribution is in progress.

A basis for this strength later in the year will be found in the plans of the government for a sharp reduction in taxes, which is expected to bring about a number of increases in dividends and stock dividends. The public always buys stocks on that sort of news and the "insiders" always sell. So while right now there is a prospect for some decline in prices, this is the temporary swing, and is a reaction in a bull market rather than the final windup of the bull market, which probably will not come until well into October or even in November. Therefore, a good setback at this time would be an excellent buying opportunity. Leading brokers are advising that if sales are made on rallies at this time, the seller should be prepared to buy back on fair reactions.

Idle Money.

It has been somewhat odd recently to hear about slow business conditions in various lines where the stocks of the companies affecting have been steady or strong, but one reason for this is that the companies affected have had a lot of idle money which has been invested in some cases in their own stocks. It has resulted that these stocks have been steady or strong when business has been dull, and it is likely that as business improves some of this money will be taken out of the stock market and these stocks will decline. Many other cases are likely where an actual improvement in business will be followed by a decline in prices of the stocks because money that is being put in them now because of no other employment for it will then be used in industry. Therefore, while business is expected to be much better late in the year, it may happen that stocks will then be declining after another rise in the latter part of the summer and early autumn.

Money was in plentiful supply through much of the week and rates were steady. Banks are now starting to get ready for the first of July need for business, and for dividend and interest payments. There is also some withdrawal of funds expected for moving the winter wheat crop. That may bring about a firmer trend in money in the near future. So much money that merely sought any employment that might be available was loaned for stock trading that some calling of stock loans might result when there is a greater need for liquid funds. For several weeks the only place that could be found for large sums was to loan it on call to stock market operators. There was also a fair amount of two or three months time loans available for stock market operators at a trifle under 4 per cent.

New Bond Issues.

Several new bond offerings were made in the past week and there was an immediate oversubscription. The government financing on Monday also was a great success. Many of the highest-grade investment bonds have been so well bought for a long time that they have advanced to the highest levels in many years. Gilt-edged issues in some cases sell to yield well under 4 per cent and a few at not much over 3 per cent on the money. There is a general feeling that the investment market has gone too high and that some time in the course of the next four months, or possibly a bit longer, there will be a rise in money rates of importance that will bring about heavy selling of the low-yield issues, and quite a drop in their market price. This is expected to be reflected in a gradual decline for a few weeks, possibly not perceptible at first, and not a serious reaction in bond prices before the last month or two of the year.

The oil industry is in the strongest condition it has been in for many years. The serious overproduction of light oil in 1923 and 1924 has been a thing of the past for months, but this was lost sight of because of the great increase in the output of heavy oil. Now even heavy oil production is on the down grade and there are fears of such heavy withdrawal of of light oil from storage that it will cause a scramble to get supplies. Higher prices for light oil and gasoline seem quite probable. As a result, it is felt in the stock market that any reactions that occur in oil stocks at this time will not last long. There are many close observers of the market who believe that the oil shares will regain their advancing trend before any other part of the list and that they will move upward no matter what may happen to the majority of stocks.

Motor car price changes are expected in the near future, and it is believed that there will either be cuts in some places or that new models will be brought out on comparatively lower prices. While a few companies had a very wonderful spring season, this was not true on all motor lines. Some have been selling much less than last year, including one of the leading companies, and price reductions are expected in order to get back some of the lost business. Therefore, such companies as have had so fine a season this spring are expected to meet with much more competition the balance of the year. Some observers of the market are therefore predicting quite a reaction in motor shares, but others believe that there will be another wave of strength in these stocks (after just moderate declines at this time), and that they will not go into serious reactions until late in the year.

Copper Tone Better.

Copper metal conditions have improved and there has been a small advance in prices. It is a rule of the stock market that every bull market has a period of strength in the copper shares, usually at the finish of the general advance. There has therefore been some accumulation of leading copper stocks in hopes of a good upward movement in them before the end of the summer or in the early fall.

Steel market conditions are slightly better and while a dull summer is normal, it is believed that steel orders will start to increase late in August and that fall business will be good. Many ofthe steel stocks are not far from the low of the year and they never did have a really big advance, with few exceptions. It is felt, therefore, that the steel stocks will also have a good forward movement some time in the next two or three months and that they are good purchases on any recessions that may develop at this time.

Cotton was strong early in the week, then ran into a lot of profit taking and a lower trend. Weather conditions will govern the movement in the near future, also reports on boll weevil damage, as well as news on the goods market. This will probably result in considerable irregularity in prices over the next few weeks, with many rallies and reactions rather than a definite trend up or down.

New York, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.) — Conflicting price movements, governed by professional operations and devoid of any special significance marked today's quiet stock trading. A few brisk rallies and equally sharp declines took place, but they represented merely the play of opposing speculative forces and a retracement of ground gained or lost earlier in the week. The normal Saturday reduction in volume of business occurred.

Railroad shares gave the best demonstration of group strength, although price movements were by no means uniform. Support for the earlier stocks was based on indications of a favorable May showing in view of increased earnings for the Kansas City Southern, the first railway to submit its monthly report.

Western rail issues responded to the filing of an application with the interstate commerce commission for a 20 per cent increase in livestock rates and the growing belief that a general upward revision will be ordered throughout the northwest. Chicago and Northwestern, Northern Pacific and Union Pacific scored moderate gains. An advance of more than four points in Omaha preferred, presumably represented last minute buying of these shares for an exchange into Northwestern Securities. The extended time limit for the exchange for stocks expired today.

Interest was revived in the motor shares by heavy buying of General Motors, which was pushed up two points to 79, matching its previous high for the year. Broadening activity also was noted in accessory stocks. Hayes Wheel standing out with a 2-point gain. Pierce-Arrow prior preferred, however, has broken almost 15 points to 150, where it was 20 points below the year's high record achieved earlier in the week. Official denials that favorable developments were in store for this issue punctured the speculative bubble which previously had been a spectacular feature of the trading.

The flurry in Sinclair consolidated oil shares, which was ushered in yesterday by the announcement that the Teapot Dome lease of oil reserves had been upheld, failed to last throughout the day although accumulation of overnight buying extra brought an initial advance in price. Profit taking later developed and was helped along by the news that the government would appeal the decision. Sinclair Consolidated Oil common closed fractionally lower at 23 1-2 and some of the other petroleum stocks also eased off after an early showing of strength.

The continued recovery of Italian lira which carried the rate above 3.80 cents, about 30 points higher than the week's extreme low of 3.55 cents, featured trading in the foreign exchanges. Sterling held steady around 4.85 3-4 but French and Belgian francs were slightly lower.

The Remarkable Change in Our Foreign Trade and How It Is Altering Our Position With the Rest of the World.

New York, June 20.—Comparatively few people even in Wall street the country's financial center seem to realize as yet the remarkable change that is taking place in our foreign trade and how that change is altering our position with the rest of the world. If the rapid swing now under way continues no great stretch of imagination is required to see the time when we will be following in England's footsteps by having our army and navy follow the dollar.

When the war and post-war demand of the rest of the world for our goods began to fall off it became a growing habit to predict a slow-down for our excess farm, factory and mill facilities. Certainly these predictions seemed warranted. For example, for the eleven months of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, our foreign trade mounted up to the staggering total of $12,165,000,000 made up of $7,480,000,000 exports and $4,585,000,000 imports in round numbers with the excess of exports over imports no less than $2,795,000,000.

From these figures there was rapid and steady decline until for the first 11 months of 1923 our total foreign trade amounted to only $7,097,000,000 compared with the $12,165,000,000 for the corresponding period of 1920. This decline, however, tells only part of the story. For the first 11 months of 1923 our excess of exports over imports was a bare $175,000,000 against the $2,795,000,000 reported for the same period of 1920.

There were months when our imports exceeded our exports. But then there was a sudden about-face. Both our exports and imports began to increase with exports increasing faster than imports. Figures published this week by the government at Washington covering our foreign trade for the 11 months of the current fiscal year up to the end of May show the excess of exports over imports back to $1,038,000,000 compared with the $175,000,000 for the corresponding months of 1923. Here are the figures for the first 11 months of past five years with three ciphers omitted in order to get the table in one column:

	Exports.	Imports.	Excess of Exp. Over Import
1925	$4,170,943	$3,502,029	$1,038,843
1924	4,004,661	3,280,121	724,539
1923	3,636,908	3,461,683	175,315
1922	3,436,225	2,347,618	1,008,607
1920	7,480,761	4,685,746	2,795,015

With the merchandise foreign trade figures given out this week for the first 11 months of the current fiscal year, the government gives out for the same period the movement of gold. With the remarkable recovery in the excess of merchandise exports over imports there should be a corresponding increase in our gold imports. But instead, what is found is that for the 11 months we shipped out $242,004,000 gold and got in only $129,730,000, making the excess of gold exports over imports $112,274,000, whereas for the corresponding period of last year we got in $391,844,000 and shipped out only $9,938,000, making the excess of imports over exports $381,906,000.

What has happened is this: During the war our merchandise exports leaped by jumps and bounds through purchases made here from the loans advanced by our government to foreign governments and the foreign loans placed by our bankers with our investors. Some of these war-time foreign loans turned out next to worthless and consequently when the war ended and foreign countries made necessary post-war purchases of raw and finished materials here, payment was made in gold because our government had stopped making advances to allies and our investors were no longer interested in foreign securities.

With our investors taking this attitude toward foreign securities our supply of gold increased rapidly, but purchases of merchandise here gradually declined until the excess of merchandise exports over imports at this time in 1923 was only $175,000,000. But in the meantime, because of the country's greatly increased wealth as reflected in our greatly increased gold holdings our investors and speculators began bidding for our own bonds and stocks until prices were so high that many turned to foreign securities where the income return and speculative possibilities were more attractive. Recent estimates placed the total of this year's purchases of foreign securities at a new high record of $1,600,000,000. Our renewed heavy purchases of foreign securities explain how our excess of merchandise exports over imports should show such a remarkable increase and at the same time that more gold was going out of the country than coming in.

In recent weeks the offerings of foreign loans to our investors have fallen off in number. The quality has not been so good and our investors evidently have decided that it is not wise to sacrifice safety of principal for a higher income return than can be found in our own domestic securities. However, idle money continues to pile up here which is a guarantee against a break in our security prices and in view of the existing high level of our security prices, buying of foreign securities proceeding more carefully is likely to continue.

According to figures recently given out at Washington, American investments abroad, exclusive of the war-time loans extended by our government to other governments, footed up at the end of 1924 to $9,000,000,000, which was an increase for the year of $1,000,000,000. This year's offerings of foreign securities, as has already been stated, is estimated at a new high record of $1,600,000,000. Up to the time of the world war our foreign investments were only $2,000,000,000, according to figures recently published by our government, with investments of foreigners here far in excess of that amount.

Hence, since the war we have changed from a debtor to a creditor nation and as such we are likely to follow the example of England in having our army and navy follow the dollar. It is possible that we will after all join other countries in policing the world and thus reduce the overhead for such protection. But, however it is done, it is plain that we have changed our relations with the rest of the world without realizing that the change was taking place.

Tenancy in Georgia and Other Cotton States

BY MARTIN V. CALVIN,
Specialist in Agriculture and Economics, Georgia Department of Agriculture.

The question as to the practicability of introducing Japanese as farm laborers, tenants or land-owners in Georgia, and in other cotton producing states, is being freely discussed. Reference is made to the fact for the reason that it directs extra-special attention to an associate fact, namely, that there is a positive lack of farm laborers of old time reliability and capability; further, that, by reason of negro migration to western and eastern industrial centers, there are now idle broad acres of cultivable land in each of the cotton states.

There is also a shortage of labor in eastern manufacturing states. This fact has suggested to the National Association of Manufacturers that congress should be petitioned to so amend immigration statutes that greater flexibility be given in the matter of admitting skilled labor considerably in excess of the restricted quota required by law.

Western agricultural groups are advocating amendments that will admit farm laborers in excess of the restricted quota. This means that a large number of laborers have been drawn from the corn and wheat fields of the west to western industrial centers. This means a steady influx of foreign laborers to the west.

The south has never encouraged the immigration of Europeans to her fields or to her industrial plants. it has been heretofore remarked in this correspondence that the presence of the negro discouraged foreign immigration to this section of the United States. It is an interesting fact that, in 1910 and in 19220, of the white population of Georgia, only one per cent was of foreign or mixed percentage; only six-tenths of one per cent foreign born.

Acreage Limited

Apropos of the discussion of the labor question and the ownership of land in Georgia, it is pertinent to state that, under the provisions of an act approved 1893 and amended—making the same more specific—1895, no foreign corporation can own a greater number of acres of land, in this state, than five thousand acres unless incorporated by this state; provided that the law shall not apply to corporations in other states which, having loaned money on such land, became owners of the property in order to avert loss. A greater rate of interest than eight per cent per annum is forbidden.

It is a grad-grind fact that, having been so long and so continuously utilizing negro labor, we do not know just how to manage white labor on farm or plantation or elsewhere. We need to readjust ourselves in advance of attempting satisfactorily to adjust the inequalities which ramify the labor situation. We know the negro; therefore we prefer him as laborer on farm and in our homes. Largely, we prefer the negro as a tenant because he will try to grow cotton. But the negro can not now reasonably be depended on to any great extent as a farm hand. He has learned by experience that there is more money for him in western and eastern industries than can be paid him on a farm.

That suggestion—a truelsm in itself—brings up instanter the fact that higher ages must be paid and better accommodation in dwelling and comforts, must be provided. Both of the reforms signify under wise direction, eminently better service.

You see, we are boiling down the situation as to the reliable few compared with the undesirables whatever the number of the latter. The few must be taught the use of the latest improved labor-saving farm implements and more especially improved farm machinery. The value, the indispensability of farm implements and farm machinery cannot possibly ve overestimated or magnified. Those appliances will enable three capable men to accomplish far better results than has been possible to eight men of the average class of workers. This is the economic view of a strictly practical question.

Individual Landlord.

Let us talk about an individual landlord with broad acres profitably to be cultivated and handled. In point of fact, such landlord's farm will be a plantation. No objection to that. We shall gladly resume the activities of a real plantation vre long. Indeed, the plantation is the remedy for existing evils.

The writer has in mind a plantation of four thousand five hundred (4,500) acres under systematic management and cultivation—every acre of it. The writer is perfectly familiar with every detail as to the big farm or plantation. With the exception of a few wages or day hands, the workers were negro tenants.

The landlord has made his home on the plantation. That was a guarantee absolute of joyful success in which all hands shared. A comfortable house was provided for the occupant and his family, near the acreage he worked. On his lot were shed barn, cow house, poulty house, hog lot, corn crib, smokehouse, a deep well of pure water, etc.

Attached to the plantation was a spacious pasture through which meandered a bold brook. Each tenant was required to plant and cultivate a specified number of acres in cotton. In addition thereto, a given number of acres in corn, oats, sweet potatoes, sugar cans or syrup, etc. Each tenant had a vegetable garden. Each tenant paid the landlord, who personally directed the operations of the plantation, a tithe of each crop produced. At the close of the year there was a settlement in full between landlord and each tenant. Every tenant found himself and family owners of 600 to 800 pounds of cured pork of his own growing, and a full share of each of the crops mentioned.

Under the system which covered the entire plantation, the soil, the horses and mules, etc., were always in A-No.-1 condition.

Prosperous and happy landlord! Well-to-do and happy tenants. We once had duplicates of the 4,500-acre plantation all over Georgia. We ought to revive and reestablish such plantations. It can be done. Bear in mind, that plantation was conducted long after the war between the states.

Since the spring of 1865, there has never been so splendid an opening, so magnificent an opportunity to the young men and the middle-aged men in Georgia as offered now. Delightful activity, great prosperity, usefulness and happiness await those who will close in with the opportunity and devote themselves systematically and persistently to a revival and reestablishment of the Georgia plantation.

AMERICAN RAYON TOUCHES NEW HIGH

New York, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Proceedings on the curb exchange today continue to follow the active pace that prevailed in the recent forward movement and a number of wide variations again were recorded in the higher priced industrials shares. A new high mark wrs established in American Rayon and Libby Owens Sheet Glass moved up 10 points from the opening quotations. Whatever profit taking was indulged was well absorbed and later prices were generally higher.

Petroleum shares ignored the report of the estimated production of crude oil announced by the American Petroleum Institute. Production for May in California was estimated at 707,107 barrels daily as against 598,655 daily in April, Pacific Coast crude oil stocks gained 2,381,956 barrels in May. With the exception of a point decline in Prairie Oil, the list of oils was moderately improved.

There were many important changes in the curb market during the past week which in most cases were said to be due to developments at hand or understood to be close to announcement. These factors were effective in causing advances over a wide range in a number of stocks carrying several of them to new high records. Miller Rubber was one of the features in this group, advancing from 148 to 173 and then yielding to 158. It was stated by some of those concerned in the affairs of the company that the preferred stock would soon be retired and the present common stock split up into four shares for one. Canada Dry Ginger Ale when issued stock rose from 34½ to 38¾. Libby Owens Sheet Glass range from 186 to 210. Serv-El and Nizer, two stocks prominent in the refrigerating group, both made new high records during the week. There was heavy trading at times in the baking issues, Continental Baking being among the stocks that made new high records when it crossed 35.

As the result of Harry F. Sinclair's victory in the government's suit to set aside the Teapot Dome oil lease the market value of outstanding Sinclair oil securities has increased nearly $13,000,000 already.

After the decision was announced yesterday the common stock of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil corporation shot up 2 1-2 points to a high of 24 3-8. First lien 6 per cent bonds of the corporation soared 4 3-4 points. Other bonds of the corporation scored lesser gains. As there are about 4,491,893 shares of common stock outstanding, the gain of value for this item alone is figured at 11,229,732.

Edward L. Doheny is also substantially wealthier on paper, although the government won its suit so far as high companies were concerned.

The Kansas City Southern, first railroad to report earnings for May, which is generally accepted as an indication of the trend of the month business for the carriers, increased its gross revenue $3,188, and showed a balance of $424,633 after taxes, a gain of $123,618 over May, last year. For the first five months of 1925 balance after taxes amounted to $1,915,250 against $1,876,871.

The pamphlet report of the St. Louis Southwestern for 1924 shows an increase in assets to $141,019,657 from $138,818,640 the year before. Profit and loss surplus was $7,369,550 against $6,918,341. Current assets were $10,636,276 and current liabilities $3,916,776. Income account, previously published, showed $8.37 a share earned on the common stock after 5 per cent preferred dividends compared with $14,71 a share in 1923.

The third new high record for membership on the New York curb market within a week was established today when Frank E. Snow, paid $15,000 for the seat of R. L. Bigelow, an advance of $1,000 over the previous high transaction.

The outlook for the Lehigh Valley railroad is very good and net earnings for 1925 will show a substantial increase over last year, E. E. Loomis, president, said today on his departure for Europe.

Hudson Motor Car company more than doubled its income in the three months ended May 31 compared with the same period last year, the total of $5,968,783 after depreciation, federal taxes and charges, contrasting with $2,699,610. This is equal to $4.52 a share, against $2.90 in the preceding quarter and $2.04 a share in the same quarter of 1924. Net for the six months ended May 31 was $9,795,715, equal to $7.42 a share against $3.03 a share a year ago.

Wizards of Finance Gather From Every Point of Globe For Brussels Trade Meeting

Europe's Restoration Will Be Theme at Congress Which Will Be Opened by King Today.

Brussels, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—King Albert tomorrow will open the third biennial congress of the International Chamber of Commerce. This promises to be one of the most important gatherings of business and financial men ever held.

Twenty-eight countries have sent official delegations while several other countries will be represented by members of various international associations, which will be admitted to the work of the chamber.

The influence of the United States in world affairs is indicated by the fact that its delegation is overwhelmingly the most numerous of all.

English Bloc Strong.

With the British contingent it forms an English speaking bloc of nearly half the whole strength of the congress. An inclination to consider the Anglo-Saxon preponderance of danger has disappeared and continental delegations regard it as an excellent thing for the future of the international chamber that Americans are assuming leading part in shaping its destinies.

Three hundred and forty-seven national chambers of commerce, twenty-four national associations of bankers and one hundred and five industrial associations will be represented on the floor when the congress opens. The leading topic, which comprises some features of all the other separate questions down for deliberation, is the economic restoration of Europe.

To Talk Dawes Plan.

It will incidentally bring the execution of the Dawes reparation plan into the discussion. The delegates will be asked to give their expert opinion whether it is possible for Germany to continue deliverjes in kind on the reparations payments to the extent provided in the Dawes plan without upsetting the internal economy of the country's industry.

The congress has been organized so that the committees will have the entire mornings for their work, while the public discussions will take plnce in the afternoon. The American delegation is the object of a great deal of attention on the part of the Belgian people and authorities and invitations are pouring in in such numbers that it would take several weeks time for the Americans to undertake an appearance at all the receptions, dinners and luncheons tendered them. Among the functions in their honor will be a reception by the American ambassador and Mrs. Phillips.

Americans Draw Interest.

A cargo of billionaires come to save Europe from bankruptcy, was the description given by members of the Belgian reception committee to the American delegation.

The American captains of industry and finance are looked upon as crusaders by Europeans whose patience has been tried in waiting for the politicians to bring about the economic resoration of Europe and who are glad to see the Americans coming over in such numbers to ascertain what the applications of real business methods can do in the situation.

U. S. Party 300 Strong.

The American party, including the families of the delegates, numbered 300 strong. It included the following men who will take an active part in congress: William H. Booth, retiring president of the International Chamber of Commerce; A. C. Bedford, of the Standard Oil company, of New Jersey; H. L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock company; Alton B. Parker, of New York; R. F. Grant, president of the American Chamber of Commerce; E. A. and A. L. Filene, of Boston, and John E. MacCarthy, mayor of Asheville, N. C.

These men will be aided by representatives from nearly every branch of big business from every important center in the United States.

Great Britain probably will have the second delegation in point of numbers and prestige. The continental countries, although they will have a smaller showing in point of strength, are sending their ablest financiers and economists.

BASEBALL GAME SCENE OF WORK OF PICKPOCKETS

At least one of the light-fingered gentry spent a profitable afternoon Saturday at the Atlanta-Memphis ball game, John R. Smith, of 103 Walton street, reporting the loss of a billfold containing $28 in cash. Mr. Smith stated he missed his bill-fold shortly after leaving the ball park.

The theft of a gold watch from the home of Mrs. Phil Ibison, 73 Bedford place, was reported to detectives Saturday. The burglary occurred before daybreak. This was the second watch theft reported from the Ibison home within the past three weeks. A watch disappeared from the house May 31, under similar circumstances, it was reported.

Newspapers Provide Way for Gotham Boy To Visit in Florida

Jacksonville, Fla., June 20.—Frederick John Stacey, 12-year-old son of Rev. Fred W. Stacey, pastor of the St. James Methodist Episcopal church of New York City, who ran away some months ago "to see oranges grow in Florida," will leave New York for Florida aboard the Lenape next Tuesday as the guest of the Clyde Steamship company. In Florida he will be the guest of a group of newspapers, including the Jacksonville Journal, Daytona News, Palm Beach Times, Miami Herald, Tampa Times, St. Petersburg News, Lakeland Star-Telegram and Orlando Reporter-Star.

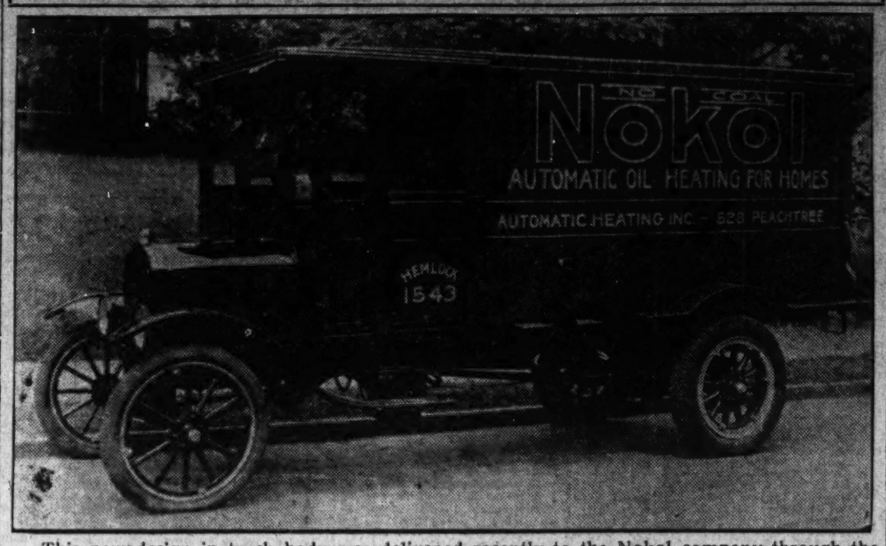

The newspapers sent the youngster an invitation to visit Florida as their guest shortly after his attempt to reach here on a $6 bankroll, failed. His tour through the state will occupy about two weeks providing for a stay of two days in each city. All of the cities he will visit have arranged programs for his entertainment.

SON OF CLEVELAND WEDS AT PRINCETON

Princeton, N. J., June 20.—Francis Grover Cleveland, of New York, son of the late President Cleveland, and his widow, now Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., of Princeton, was married today to Miss Alice Erdman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles R. Erdman of Princeton.

Dr. Erdman, newly elected moderator of the Presbyterian church and a member of the faculty of Princeton Theological Seminary, performed the ceremony in the Old First Church, of which he is pastor. A reception was held at the Princeton graduate school following the wedding.

Nokol Gets Popular Martin Parry Body

This new design in truck body was delivered recently to the Nokol company through the local branch of the Martin Parry Body corporation. This body features the sliding door on both sides of the driving compartment and promises to become one of their most popular models.

Czecho-Slovakia And France Plan Debt Settlement

Washington, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Further indications that both France and Czecho-Slovakia are preparing to make formal moves toward negotiations of war debt refunding agreements have reached the Washington government through official channels.

The advices are regarded as too indefinite to permit any formal announcement. The messages received, presumably from the American diplomats at the two capitals, were said, however, to contain information justifying the belief that both countries soon would set in motion debt-settlement negotiations.

The development points to a possibility that before the summer is over a good part of the long-troublesome, war-debt problems may have been cleared away. Negotiations with Italy are to begin June 25 and Belgium will send a commission here in July.

The Czecho-Slovakian account involves an item of expense for repatriation of the Czech troops by shipping-board vessels.

A Czecho-Slovakian commission spent several weeks here two years ago, but was unable to reach an agreement with this government. As calculated by the treasury, this debt amounts to $117,679,000.

France has been paying $20,000,000 interest annually on the $400,000,000 she owes for surplus war supplies, aside from her cash borrowings. This interest amounted to approximately 1½ per cent of the total French obligation of $4,200,000,000, and some officials believed that France may be willing to increase the payments so as to liquidate a portion of the debt.

'Miss Palestine' Event Is Nearing Its Close In Maccabee Circles

Elaborate preparations are underway in Atlanta Maccabee circles for entertainment of several thousand visitors to the city July 9-10-11. Much of the interest centers in the naming of girl representatives of Maccabee tents. Just now Palestine Tent members are conducting a contest to name "Miss Palestine," the young woman to wear tent colors in the Atlanta celebration and later to participate as the tent's representative at the national convention in Washington, opening July 20.

The event has narrowed to four young women, Miss Sylvia Fine, Miss Mollis Shamos, Miss Lottie Bryan and Miss Sophia Mazier—a quartet of popular and charming young women.

Various events within the Maccabee tent proper, and social affairs galore conducted by members of the women's committee in charge, are among features sponsored to add to popularity of the contest. The winner will be named on July 1, when official count of all votes will be made public and the fortunate young woman formally crowned.

Information of many unique and novel features of the method in which the winner is being determined may be had from Maccabee headquarters, 217½ Peachtree street, or from members of Palestine Tent.

Not more than 100 votes separated the contestants Saturday night, it was announced, groups of friends of each young woman staging special affairs and otherwise boosting the voting for the four eligibles.

DR. J. D. MELL ENGAGED BY LUCY COBB SCHOOL

Athens, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—Dr. John D. Mell, president of the Georgia Baptist association, and considered one of the best parliamentarians in the south, has been named as lecturer on parliamentary law and customs for Lucy Cobb institute next session, according to Miss Mildred Rutherford, director, who is just now completing her faculty, which she will announce at an early date.

COHAN TO BUILD $750,000 THEATER IN CHICAGO SOON

Chicago, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—George M. Cohan, theatrical impresario, has completed plans for the wrecking of Cohan's Grand Opera House on Clark street and for the construction on the same site of a new play house, to cost $750,000. The new theater will be known as The Four Cohans, which, years ago was the trademark of the producer's family—Jerry J., Helen F., Josephine and George. It was selected to keep fresh in the minds of theatergoers the attachment among the four members of the Cohan family of whom only Helen and George now are living.

Cohan's Grand stands on a site occupied for 65 year by amusement houses.

Columbia Seminary Quota at Marietta Estimated at $6,000

Marietta, Ga., June 20.—(Special). At a meeting Friday evening of the executive committee in charge of the Marietta campaign, a goal of $6,000 was set as the Marietta church's part in the state-wide campaign for Columbia seminary. This amount is believed by the committee to be very conservative and hope of exceeding it by a substantial amount was expressed.

What is known as a Workers' dinner will be given to the full organization Monday night at the church, said A. V. Cortelyou today. The organization as it now stands, consists of the following men and women who will be present at the Workers' dinner which marks the opening of the actual canvass to begin Tuesday morning:

Executive committee, E. L. Faw, chairman, A. V. Cortelyou, George H. Keeler, George F. Montgomery, Judge S. H. Sibley, M. L. McNeel, F. T. Wardlaw; organization chairman, A. V. Cortelyou. Chairman women's work, Mrs. George H. Keeler; chairman prayer meeting committee, Mrs. A. E. Davenport.

Memorial Coins Worn as Ornaments By Men and Women

Athens, Ga., June 20.—(Special.)—Wearing Stone Mountain memorial coins as lavaliers is the latest fad, according to Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, of Atlanta, who was in Athens recently to have the doctor's degree conferred upon here by the University of Georgia, and who while she was here called upon Miss Mildred Rutherford, director of Lucy Cobb institute, presenting her with a new Stone Mountain coin attractively fixed to be worn around the neck.

Mrs. Inman says that the women of Atlanta are wearing the coins on cords about their necks to show their patriotism and their loyal interest in the Stone Mountain memorial. The men, she says, are wearing the coins upon their watch fobs, attractive designs in gold, platinum and silver being obtained from the jewelers.

FORD'S STEAMSHIP ON MAIDEN VOYAGE ACROSS ATLANTIC

New York, June 20.—The first of Henry Ford's ocean-going freight vessels to make a trans-Atlantic voyage sailed from Hoboken today with a full cargo of 5,000 Ford motors, Fordson tractors and automobile parts for Bordeaux, Antwerp and Copenhagen. The steamship Oneida, sailing the house flag of the Ford Motor company, was the vessel chosen for the debut into the Atlantic freight business.

A commercial cargo will be brought back from Antwerp to Baltimore.

Ford has operated his own vessels to South American ports and to Atlantic and Pacific ports of North America, but this is the first trans-Atlantic voyage. If the Detroit manufacturer finds he can operate profitably with return cargoes, he may start a fleet of overseas carriers.

HUGE TRUST FUND FOR POOR INFANTS TO BE ESTABLISHED

New York, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—The New York American will say tomorrow that John E. Andrus, of Yonkers, known as the "millionaire straphanger," because of his habit of using the subway to go to his office, will establish a huge trust fund for the care of sickly infants of the poor.

The newspaper quotes Mr. Andrus as saying that land has been purchased and he is now looking for responsible executives for his enterprise.

Mr. Andrus' wealth has been estimated at from $5,000,000 to $70,000,000, the first dollar of which was made by selling trout to Horace Greely 75 years ago.

Senator Couzens Calls La Follette Greatest American

Detroit, June 20.—Senator Robert M. La Follette was the "greatest American of our age," it was asserted here yesterday by Senator James Couzens, addressing a triennial convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

Senator Couzens described Senator La Follette as the "victim of the lies and propaganda of the American press and the American capitalists," and added that he himself was a "millionaire scab" because he refused to be a member of the millionaires' "union."

Senator Couzens said that the reason he refused to join the group referred to was because he never heard a "red-blooded heartbeat" from the millionaires' union.

FORMER CUBAN CHIEF ON WAY TO GOTHAM

Havana, Cuba, June 20.—Ex-President Alfredo Zayas and Mrs. Zayas left here this morning on board the steamer Governor Cobb for Key West, en route for New York. They plan to go to Europe after a short stay in the United States.

Yesterday the ex-president and his wife bade farewell to President Machado and attended dedication exercises of the Mari Jean Tubercular Children's hospital, named after Mrs. Zayas.

SPANISH WAR VETS MEET IN SAVANNAH

Savannah, Ga., June 20.—Approximately 300 of more delegates will be in Savannah July 3 and 4 to attend the third annual encampment of the United Spanish War veterans, Georgia department. The Ladies Auxiliary of Georgia will hold their meeting with the Spanish War veterans.

There are eight camps of the veterans in Georgia, located at Atlanta, Savannah, Columbus, Macon, Augusta, Rome and Athens, there being two camps in the capital city, with the ladies auxiliary chapters being located at Atlanta, Savannah, Rome and Augusta.

Fletcher Will Preside.

Dr. Orlin K. Fletcher, state commander of the Spanish War veterans, of Augusta, will preside at the sessions. Dr. Fletcher has also seen service in another war aside from the Spanish-American conflict, having been in the 118th field artillery in the world war.

Other officials of the veterans are senior vice commander, Colonel W. D. Grayson, of Savannah, and W. M. Burson, junior vice commender, of Athens. The Ladies auxiliary is headed by Mrs. Aida Ramp Walden, of Augusta, president, and Mrs. Marie Carr Smith, and Mrs. Rose Rice, both of Augusta.

One of the features of the encampment of the veterans of 1896 who will go over the famous battle of 27 years ago, and renew the old comradeships, will be the joint memorial exercises which will be held with the Ladies auxiliary on the first day of the convention.

Worth Bagley Camp No. 10, of Savannah, of which Samuel K. Ward is commander, will act as host to the veterans. R. B. Arthur, of Augusta, is department adjutant and Walter P. Powers, of Savannah, is assistant department adjutant.

The Savannah camp of the Spanish War veterans is the largest in Georgia, and the two Atlanta camps are second in membership. The Atlanta veterans are planning to make the trip to the port city by automobiles.

Many entertainment features for the veterans have been arranged by Savannah which will include an automobile ride about the city to points of historical interest, as well as a trip to Tybee Island and a shore dinner at the country club, when A. R. Lawton, former commander of the First Georgia infantry, U. S. volunteers, will acts as toastmaster.

The convention will be called to order Friday morning, July 3, by Commander Fletcher, after which Department Chaplain Arthur W. Lucky, of Augusta, will deliver the invocation. Next will follow the address of welcome to Savannah by Mayor Robert M. Hull. The response will be made by Commander Fletcher and Mrs. Smith, for the Ladies auxiliary, who will render a recitation "The Boys of '98."

Memorial Address.

The memorial address at the joint exercises will be delivered by Captain James M. Rogers, of Worth Bagley camp, Savannah. The remainder of the day will be taken up with business sessions and automobile rides to points of interest, concluding at the Country club that evening.

The convention reconvenes on Saturday at 9:30 a. m. when final business matters will be disenssed, and at 2 o'clock the veterans will make the trip to Tybee, after which the encampment will come to an end.

Various local committees have been appointed to assure that the 1925 encampment of the Spanish War veterans will be one of the greatest in the history of the organization.

66 VICTIMS FALL INTO TRAFFIC NET SPREAD BY POLICE

With the crusade against violators of traffic laws and speeding in full sway, reports on file at police headquarters Saturday showed that 66 victims had fallen into the police dragnet.

Out of the number of arrests made, 33 were violators of ordinances regulating automobile traffic, six for speedin, 17 for violation of traffic ordinances, five for reckless driving, and five for drunk and operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

In addition, 32 arrests were made for drunk on the street and 40 were caught in a series of raids on houses of vice.

A. A. Walker, 41, of 690 East Hunter street, received a fine of $100 on charges of reckless driving in recorder's court Saturday afternoon and was bound over to the Fulton county grand jury on charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

MRS. JOHN BARRYMORE TO APPEAR ON STAGE

Salem, Mass., June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Mrs. John Barrymore, wife of the actor, is to make her debut on the professional stage with the American Theater company, a stock organization which will open at a local theater next week. Mrs. Barrymore known as a poet and novelist under the name of Michael Strange, will do small parts at first in the company, which plans a series of plays, catering especially to North Shore society folk.

Mrs. Barrymore was said to have conceived the idea of going on the stage after being told by George Bernard Shaw, British playwright, that she was suited to act his "Saint Joan." She was advised by Shaw to learn the mechanics of stage craft.

Shall Politics Impair Progress of Atlanta?

When the legislature convenes Wednesday there will be introduced a joint resolution, short and simple, granting to the city of Atlanta authority to construct viaducts over the state's properties at the grade crossings of Pryor street and Central avenue.

The resolution will also provide that before the consent of the state shall become operative, the plans and specifications shall be approved in writing by the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railway, the lessee of the state's Western & Atlantic railroad, the public service commission, the mayor and council of Atlanta and by the governor of Georgia and also by a committee from the general assembly, consisting of nine members, of whom six shall be members of the house appointed by the speaker and three of the senate appointed by the president.

It will be nothing more nor less than a terse, specific permit in plain language, without any irrelevant verbage or disguised "jokes."

The passage of this resolution, being what is known as "local legislation," will depend largely upon the unanimity of the home representation in its support—and upon the vigor and militancy of their advocacy.

For some reason or another opposition, secret and sinister, as it manifests itself in anonymous communications to the members of the legislature, has already developed.

The members of the legislature will, of course, pay no attention to unsigned communications, and especially those so full of glaring misstatements as the one in question, but the fact that this spirit is behind a developed opposition to the proposed construction of these viaducts accentuates the necessity for the Fulton and DeKalb representatives to unite earnestly and harmoniously in the fight for the passage of the resolution.

It is unnecessary to recount here the many reasons why these viaducts should be built as the first and foundation step in a program of expansion that Atlanta must adopt to keep pace with her growth, or stand still and—more pointedly—openly invite retrogression.

The legislature naturally will be concerned in its advantage or disadvantage to the state of Georgia as the owner of the right-of-way. There can be no argument, if based on reason, as to that. The viaducts will double the value of the right-of-way property itself, and the Central avenue property, connecting the north and south sides, will of itself most potentially enhance the state's property on which the capitol is situated. Any citizen, whether a student of realty values or not, can easily understand that situation.

The present grade crossings are dangerous to life, obstruct the free flow of traffic between the two great sections of the city, with practically equal population, cause slow movement of trains, the employment of flagmen and other retarding circumstances in a great and busy center—and are such eyesores and such drawbacks to progress and development that property values have been kept materially reduced in the zone on either side of the crossings.

The right of building bridges over dangerous railroad crossings is inherent in every city. None would question the right of a city as a general proposition to bridge a dangerous railroad crossing, but the act would always be applauded. Were it not for the fact that the state of Georgia owns the state railroad no one would question the right of the city of Atlanta to develop itself and to develop the state by bridging these crossings.

First and foremost, the proposition of building bridges is to cost the state not one penny. It is all to be financed by the city, with such aid as the railroads and the county of Fulton and the street railway will give it.

That the state's property, known as the Union depot, is going down in value every day because of these grade crossings and because of the drift away from this section, anyone who is informed knows.

If these grade crossings remain at this place much longer the state's property will be valueless save as a railroad yard, and the value of its capitol building in the immediate vicinity will also be impaired.

It should not be overlooked that the lease of the state road has 44 years yet to run, and until its expiration the state's sole interest in the property is the amount of rentals collected as per agreement. That agreement will not be affected in any way by the erection of the viaducts, and yet its property will be so greatly enhanced that it will be of greater rental value at the expiration of its present lease.

Atlanta would be scarcely more than a village today had it not spanned the tracks at Whitehall and at Broad. The most outstanding development of recent years was the building of the Spring street viaduct in 1921-'22. The city cannot move ahead, expand her waist belt and relieve her growing pains unless the two viaducts proposed are erected.

The Fulton and DeKalb delegations will, of course, stand united behind this proposition. It is up to them with its first responsibility.

Small politics must not be permitted to impair Atlanta's progress.

EQUALIZING EDUCATION.

At a banquet gathering of college men and women in Atlanta Thursday evening, General Walter A. Harris, president of the University of Georgia Alumni association, stated with emphasis and directness that Georgia is not giving equal educational opportunities to the boys and girls of the state. That fact is so outstandingly true that much of the prejudices that have been aroused between elements in society, and between sections, and especially between rural and urban communities has been traceable to it. The remedying of that condition will not only be in justice to the youth of the state, regardless of the place of birth or environment, but will serve an equally good purpose in eliminating a distressing spirit that breeds in unfair and unequal conditions.

The training of the child is the most important service for which public money is spent. Upon it depends the future of the race and the commonwealth. Where there is proper educational opportunity there is more progress and less crime, more happiness and less poverty, more enjoyment of the better things of life, and more opportunity.

Fulton, Georgia's richest county, with an assessed valuation of $203,990,265, spends $5,478,941.69 on educating her children. This amounts to $26.90 on every thousand dollars' valuation. That looks as though Fulton's 65,000 pupils were being fairly well cared for, but there is nothing excessive about it. Chicago with a property valuation of nearly two billions assesses a school tax of $26.50 a thousand; Des Moines assesses $63.96 per thousand tax.

But it is the inequalities in Georgia that we need to study.

The county with the lowest assessed valuation is Quitman, with $627,058. She spends $11,417.84 on her schools—or $18.20 per thousand. Take it from another viewpoint—that of proportion of taxes spent. One little county in the southwestern corner of the state is doing her full duty and leading them all. Seminole county spends $92,250.45 on schools from an assessed valuation of $2,235,656—$41.30 per thousand.

Towns county, in the mountains of north Georgia, has an assessed valuation of $779,744 and spends $5,998.82 on her children's education—the sum of $7.70 per thousand.

There is a long distance between that $41.30 which Seminole spends and the $7.70 of Towns, and there are 158 counties in between.

Investigation shows that 38 of the counties between the extremes spend only $15 or less per thousand on their schools.

If Georgia counties expect to develop themselves, if they expect their citizens to be prosperous, if they expect their young people to remain at home instead of seeking the large cities, they MUST do better than most of them are doing.

With conditions like these existing in her borders it is little wonder that Georgia lags behind the south and the nation in education.

There is no more important matter to come before the legislature which convenes in the next few days than that of equalizing the educational opportunities for all of the children of Georgia.

FEDERAL CONSTITUTION.

In a notable address before the Atlanta City club Thursday, Judge Shepard Bryan, chairman of the Georgia citizenship committee of the American Bar association, opposed most vigorously the proposed amendment to the federal constitution giving congress the arbitrary authority to pass upon the constitutionality of its acts.

Judge Bryan gave an interesting history of the constitution, its birth in 1787, following the construction of a republican form of government built upon the victorious ashes of the revolution, and of the ten amendments which guaranteed to the citizens of the nation the fundamental rights of individuals, and of states.

In holding its sacred integrity as the supreme law of the country, to which all other laws must be amenable, he emphasized the security it vouchsafed against political groups and intrigues, and denounced any attempt to break or impair that security. He quoted Federal Judge Morris, of Delaware, who said of the proposed amendment:

"It must be conceded that a constitutional amendment making the acts of congress and not the constitution the supreme law of the land would leave congress invested with power to conform to or disregard at its pleasure the limitations placed upon it by the constitution. Its will and not the constitution would control its acts. An amendment of the character described would be destructive of every basic principle of the constitution."

The fact is this proposed amendment lost its most ardent supporter in the death Thursday of Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin. It is one of a code of radical schisms proposed by the group of which the late senator was the leader, and while serious effort may be made by the survivors of that group, as is threatened, to submit it, when congress convenes in December, there is not the slightest chance of success.

The plan, born in the counsels of the western extremists, to make congress the final arbiter of its own acts, is the most flagrant attempt to break down the nation's organic law ever made in this or any other country. It is a direct blow at the democratic institutions of this government and was very probably intended as a foundation for the construction of a strong communistic party.

The quickened force behind this and many other similar extreme proposals melted into the ashes of the dead.

RIGHT PLAN AT LAST.

Secretary of Labor Davis has dispatched an assistant to Europe to test a plan for examination of prospective immigrants at their homes in order that passports may be granted that will obviate the necessity of examinations at Ellis Island.

The Constitution has for years consistently urged that the immigration laws be so amended that all necessary examinations as to health, fitness, comportment with American laws, etc., be made—not only in justice to the immigrants but as a strengthening security to this country—at the ports of embarkation rather than debarkation. It is pleasing that the secretary of labor, who was once an immigrant boy himself, has taken definite steps toward this end. It will enable immigrants to escape the risk of rejection and return, which has subjected much distress and hardships to thousands. Under the operations of the present law more than 18,000 arrivals have been held up, and around 10 per cent of the number returned, while the others had to undergo severe physical and mental anguish.

It must be understood that under the American quota law some of the European governments insist on selecting the immigrants for this country, very naturally seeking to rid their respective countries of the undesirables, such as criminals, weak-minded, dependent, indigent—and the radicals.

The plan to make the examinations at the ports of embarkation has been bitterly fought in Europe for this reason. But the sentiment in this country is so strong for the change that the dictates of foreign governments in the premises will probably not be longer listened to.

The United States must not be continued as a dumping ground.

When picnicking autoists are ready for a rural invasion, take down the keep-off-the-grass signs, which they use for kindling wood to cook their dinners.

LIGHT OPERA'S TRIUMPH.

The first week of the Atlanta season of light opera closed with Saturday evening's performance.

The great audience greeted the "Mikado" with the same enthusiasm with which it was greeted when the curtain went up Monday evening. Every performance has been an individual triumph.

"The Prince of Pilsen" this week will meet with the same reception. It is an opera with even a more liberal sprinkling of melody and no less amusing in its quaint comedy.

The company, with its Metropolitan orchestra, among the world's greatest artists in the leads, and with a ballet that is on a parity with that of any opera company in America, deserves the support it is getting, not only from Atlanta but from all sections of the south; and Howard Candler, who conceived the plan, and whose enterprise and generosity made it possible, deserves the hearty thanks of every citizen of Atlanta for the addition of another great cultural enterprise to materially help as well as superbly entertain, at moderate rates, the whole people.

This is but one of many enterprises of marked advantage to Atlanta—and to the state and south—that the members of the Candler family have so generously made possible. Following in the footsteps of Asa Candler, Sr., who built the great fortune that he has employed, with genuine devotion, to the development of his home city, the sons have shown, and are showing, the same love for Atlanta, the same thrift, the same spirit of using their resources for real, constructive service—more for the benefit of all the people than with the hope of personal gain.

Thus it was in the establishment of a summer opera season under the generous leadership of Howard Candler. It was an unselfish conception, with small prospects of financial gain, but it was a great cultural activity that meant the bringing of thousands of visitors to the city during a normally dull season.

Atlanta owes much to the Candlers, and no one benefaction of its kind, viewed both from a cultural and a material viewpoint, is more outstanding than that of Howard Candler in his splendid promotion of a light opera season for this city each summer.

A WORTHY JUDGE.

Recorder Calloway will be heartily commended for his attitude in a case in which a defendant had been cited for appearances on a charge of a traffic violation. He had been a supporter and "poll worker" for the recorder. He ignored the summons. Upon plea of the traffic officer he was allowed to bring him into court without a subpoena for contempt. He was fined $6 for the traffic violation. Then it was that the defendant reminded the recorder that he had supported and worked for him at the polls, but would not do so again.

Very promptly, and very correctly, the recorder fined him $51 for contempt in addition to the traffic fine, and the defendant paid both.

It is what the recorder said as well as did that commands admiration:

"Mr. Officer, make a case against this man for contempt of court and we will try him now. My friends and acquaintances will have to obey the law or pay the penalty as well as those whose acquaintance I do not enjoy. As long as I am judge of police court the court will remain free from any effort to influence or intimidate it."

The only argument against the election of judges by the people has been the apprehension that political influences might enter into the decisions and charges from the bench—the natural fear being that political allies would receive immunities.

This is not true in most cases. The man elected to the bench is usually incorruptible. It may be true in some. At any rate the position of Judge Calloway is most commendable.

A scientific paper says that life is anything but a safe bet after 40. Well, you ought to be thankful if the reckless autoist lets you live that long.

"Wealth takes wings"—and it seems to be heartily welcome to everything else it can lay its hands on.

So far, there are no signs of that "frost in June," and the "end of the world" has been postponed indefinitely.

More promises of peace in Europe. Anyway, it seems quite certain that France wants to stop fighting.

No wonder the president of these United States preaches and practices economy. He's the hardest worker of 'em all for a living.

The oldest inhabitant, who has known the weather from away back, doesn't know enough to reform it.

There's no such thing as a patched bathing suit. There's no room for a patch on it.

TO THE SINGERS

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I.

Not the thunder-drummer
Lead the sweet music wrong,
But weave the light of summer
Into a living song!
And take the wildest flower that grows
And sing of it as to a rose.

II.

In secret paths and places
Find balm for hearts that need;
In unknown sky-born spaces
Follow where lightnings lead!
And there, on an unwavering wing
Hear later stars of morning sing.

III.

On the far hills of Heaven
You shall not stand alone;
Companions shall be given
From worlds to dreams unknown.
Yet there no high communion bars
Your world's heart, beating 'neath the stars.

IV.

Reap joys from starred heights holy,
Where kindred spirits roam,
Yet wish for windows lowly
Where shine the lights of Home.
Home, where the rarest joys await
The latch clink of an opening gate.

DISCOURTEOUS DIPLOMACY

"Diplomatic language," however hypocritical it may have been, has been considered the synonym for courtesy. Secretary Kellogg, however, seems to be determined to abandon all diplomatic forms. This is true, not simply in the language which he uses, but in a manner in which he approaches the Mexican government. Usually diplomats speak to diplomats, or state departments to state departments, in communications between governments. But our new secretary of state has proceeded rather along the lines of the political party chairman, who gives out interviews for the purpose of discrediting the opposite party, or in the manner of criminal lawyers, who try their cases through the newspapers, for the purpose of popular effect.

One may well raise the question, why Mr. Kellogg should lecture the Mexican government through the medium of the public press, instead of following the usual, and well approved method of speaking through our ambassador to the accredited representative of that government. Was it for the purpose of making public opinion in this country? If that was his purpose, it seems to me that he has pursued a very vicious policy. We have been trying in our past administrations to construct a friendly and helpful attitude of public opinion in this country, toward the Mexican people. The chaotic condition of the Mexican government, ever since the deposition of Diaz, has made our relationship with that unhappy people one of great difficulty and delicacy. The frequency of governmental changes, and the many irresponsible and exasperating acts on the part of the Mexican governments, as well as the Mexican people, have all contributed to the irritation of public opinion in this country. Why should our secretary of state try to add to the popular prejudice, and to the destruction of what little confidence we had already built up in Mexican stability?

Inflaming Public Opinion.

If the secretary of state intended his public interviews for the purpose of influencing the Mexican people at large, it was still a greater blunder. The well-known dislike of the Mexicans for the people of this republic, is even greater than the contempt, not to say enmity, felt by our pepole for the Mexicans. The undiplomatic, not to call it brutal, language used by our Mr. Kellogg in his public statement, could only, and did, inflame Mexican feeling to popular hatred. Its influence, however, does not stop with Mexico. Latin America, North and south, has been affronted. They already distrust, what they believe to be the aggressive and bullying policy of this repubic. This unhappy incident comes at a time when wise patriots are striving to create a fraternal Pan-American consciousness, out of which may grow better commercial relations. At this critical hour in our international relations, when our whole foreign policy is tending to isolate us from the nations of the old world, what madness it is to needlessly affront our sister peoples of the New World.

It is charged by inference in this statement, and dearly hinted by semi-official reports from Washington, that life and property of American citizens are put in jeopardy by governmental impotence and injustice in Mexico. If that is true, such a critical situation would demand firm, but direct, communication with the Mexican government itself. It would be inexcusable to deal with such a situation in public newspaper interviews. But, unfortunately, the past record of American investors in Mexico makes one suspicious of this alarm for the safety of American interests. Once again there is the offensive odor of oil in the nostrils of the public. Can it be possible that public opinion is being prepared once again, for the old policy of giving away the navy's oil in the United States, while we use our navy to protect, not to say plunder, the oil properties of Mexico, in the interest of these governmental favorites?

Mexico is a wretchedly weak and unhappy nation. Every instinct of chivalric humanity—every appeal of the sentiments and traditions of our flag—challenges the people of this republic not to exploit, but to deal patiently and helpfully with this backward people. Let our diplomacy be intelligently firm, but kindly and courteous.

Small Discusses Past And Future of South

BY SAM W. SMALL.

Many of my good friends in Georgia and adjoining states are writing to me frequently about my articles in these columns. They generously commend much in them, from time to time, and often offer suggestions as to men and matters that they want I should write about.

It would be a pleasure to meet their desires in many cases, but I am not the arbiter of these contributions. They are simply the effusions of leisure hours and my inherited and ingrained itch to dabble with printer's ink. I am under no obligation to write them and the able and astute editor of the paper is under no obligation to print them. He is the boss of the blue pencil and the waste basket, and when I volunteer one of these effusions it is wholly up to him to say whether and when it will be printed. So that's that, and my interested correspondents must be content with his decisions, as I am.

Submerged History.

There is a large volume of submerged history in Georgia. Volumes, indeed, of valuable personal and community facts that have sunken below memory, because the actors and the actual observers have largely passed from the living. If rescued and revamped by modern literary methods they would greatly interest and illuminate the minds of the new and extant generations of Georgians.

I wish it were within my competency to undertake a work of research and recording like that, but I am too old now for such an endeavor. There is no market for such resurrections, no large enough reminiscent appetite for such spiritual food, and the exigencies of daily living inhibit any serious incursions of that "back country" of our historic progression. Some day, perhaps, a younger man, with curious mind, with classic elan, with time and money at free command, may undertake such a work. I hope so; but, unfortunately, our universities and colleges do not appear to be producing men now who exhibit the historic sense. The objective now is to "get on in the world" and the order of the day is "collar the dollar!"

A Mine of Materials.

The south is an inexhaustible mine of literary materials. Scenery, people, social systems and political incidents—all of the most important and even romantic character—are not lacking to the southern author of history, biography, poetry, science and fiction. But, with a few brilliant exceptions in each generation, the southern people have left all these to be exploited by some northern or foreign writer having but a casual appreciation of the "true inwardness" of the south and its significant representatives.

Even our newspapers consistently ignore this wealth of materials, and give up money and space to pot-boiling writers, aliens to the south, who scribble drivel out of the jazz-life of New York, or Paris, or London, and even of Babylon and the Egypt of Tut-Ank-Amen.

An Evil Omen.

All of which has an evil look to me. I was reared with reverence for the truth of southern origins, history and progress in the old regime. Thank God, I haven't outgrown it! I still believe there is life-building food in the traditions and the personal achievements of the south that grew up in the first two centuries and dominated the birth and the most glorious growth of our national career. While in all things modern that make for a "better America," I am, I believe, up to date with anybody, nevertheless I refuse to surrender the old shibboleths of the once spiritual south to the mongrel gospel of modernism that would mechanize our manhood in the south, "Yankeeize," if you please, our social sense, and commercialize our consciences.

Our Greatest Loss.

We southern people suffered fearful losses by the war between the states and have had half a century of hard struggles to recover a place in even the national sun. But the greatest loss to us, it now is revealed, was the loss of our devotion to the faiths and fireside fidelities of our fathers. We lost our simpler worship of God and our purer ideals of manhood and womanhood. Now we speak of religion in terms of social convention and so-called science and the infractable standard by which we measure a man's character is the validity of his check at his bank.

In fact, if you catch the drift of my thought, you must agree that we, especially in our beloved south, have come into the condition pictured by Emerson, the old philosopher of Concord, when he said:

"What greater calamity can fall upon a nation than the loss of worship? Then all things go to decay. Genius leaves the temple to haunt the senate or the market. Literature becomes frivolous. Science is cold. The eye of youth is not lighted by the hope of other worlds, and age is without honor. Society lives in trifles, and when men die we do not

THE NEW PACT

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS.

So much has already been said about the proposed four power pact, between Britain, France, Belgium and Germany to maintain the status quo in the west of Europe, that is, the frontiers created by the treaty of Versailles, that it would be easy to derive the impression that the most difficult of all the outstanding problems of Europe had at last in some miraculous fashion got itself solved at Geneva and in a few brief exchanges between M. Briand and Mr. Austen Chamberlain.

The truth is, however, quite different. We have already had more than one settlement of the western European situation and guarantee of the security of France arranged, at least to the extent that at present has been agreed upon. The series begins with the still famous three power pact which President Wilson signed during the peace conference; continues through the draft treaty M. Briand and Mr. Lloyd George were completing at Cannes, when the former was called home to resign; and ended temporarily with the much vaunted protocol accepted by Ramsey MacDonald in Geneva last September and slain in the same place by Chamberlain last March.

What M. Briand and Mr. Chamberlain have actually done is to agree on a preliminary draft of a treaty which will be one of the most important post-war creations, if and when it shall be adopted not alone by France and Britain, but also by Germany. And Germany in this discussion has all the rights of a sovereign power and can reject the whole affair, if it displeases her, without thus in any measure affecting her legal position.

All that has actually happened, to get the case fairly stated, is that Germany, having—on British suggestion—approached France last winter with a proposal for a security pact guaranteeing French, German and Belgian frontiers from Switzerland to Holland. M. Briand and Mr. Chamberlain have been in consultation over the French reply and have reached a basis of agreement as to the form the French reply shall take. All of which means that the Baldwin cabinet has agreed upon a formula for the defense of both French and Belgian frontiers, along with Germany, which it has promised to present to parliament, with its important indorsement, after France has sent it along to Germany, and provided Germany will accept it. Briand has similarly engaged himself on behalf of France. But both governments may be rebuffed by their parliaments, and there is the German to be considered in addition.

Triumph for British Policy.

So far as one may make coherent detail out of the terribly confused reports which have been circulated and the official denials which have pursued them, the proposed pact represents a triumph for British policy within the limits of British necessity. Great Britain does not want another war between France and Germany because she recognizes she would be involved on the French side again. Her "splendid isolation" having become a memory in consequence of the developments of modern warfare, her own security demands something more than a passive observance of European affairs.

Nevertheless, although geography has bound British security to French, the British have no desire and no intention to undertake responsibilities as to French security without having some influence in shaping European conditions. They are not ready to ally themselves with France against Germany; their concern is to find some basis for agreement between France and Germany and guarantee that.

A good deal of nonsense has been printed recently explaining how the new pact renews the old situation which existed before the war. It does nothing of the sort because this condition is one of the precise things the British wish to avoid. British statesmanship does not start with any iden of an alliance with France, it is not thinking or dealing with the question in terms of alliance. In the present temper of the British people no alliance as such could be forced upon the nation.

But there are certain facts which are patent. In the first place, the French state of mind is entirely dominated by the element of fear, fear of a later German aggression, fear of the survival of a German determination to reconquer Alsace-Lorraine. France is perfectly satisfied to live within her own frontiers, provided that within those frontiers she is safe. And, conversely, she is on the middle Rhine and will stay there until she feels safe.

Now the British have gone systematically to work to find out how the Germans feel about Alsace and the Germans have said quite frankly that they are prepared to abandon any aspirations in this direction, that they are willing to guarantee French security—and Belgium is implied—provided, in return, allied evacuation of German territories shall take place within the periods fixed by the treaty of Versailles, or, perhaps, more promptly. And, as I have said, acting on British impulsion, the Germans have proposed to the French some sort of agreement, with Britain as a party, which should embody the readiness of both nations to abide by existing frontiers and pledge their faith in that respect.

Without the British backing, such a proposal would have no hearing in France) because the French would inevitably fear that it would become another "scrap of paper." But with the British endorsement it becomes another thing, for in effect it obligates Britain to defend the French and Belgian frontiers against a German attack. Since France has no purpose to attack Germany, similar British undertaking with respect of German frontiers is not a disadvantage.

French and German Plans.

So far the line of discussion has run smoothly enough. But as was inevitable, both France and Germany, while complying with British suggestions, have had plans and interests of their own. Thus France, lacking a British guarantee all these years since the close of the war, has sought a substitute and found it in her alliances with Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. But what becomes of these allies if, after France and Germany had agreed to accept each other's frontiers as fixed and inviolable, Germany attacks Poland and Czecho-Slovakia? Accordingly France has argued that Germany should accept all her frontiers, east, west and south, and that Britain should guarantee them. Thus the French have wanted not a four power but a six power pact including Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. Also, they have demanded some form of guarantee that Austria should not be annexed by Germany, whether Austrians desire it or not.

The German, on the other hand, has felt that if he resigned all claim to Alsace-Lorraine and to Eupen and Malmedy, if he agreed to accept the western frontiers made against him at Paris, such renunciation could only be justified on his part by the removal of barriers in his pathway in the east and south. He has been ready to agree not to attack his neighbors, but at the same time he has demanded the right to open the question of eastern frontiers by diplomatic methods, by some rather vague application of a loose phrase in the covenant of the league.

The Englishman on his part is quite ready to permit Germany to reopen all questions which do not affect British security and totally unwilling to stand committed directly ordinarily to Maintain Polish or Czecho boundaries. But he has to deal with the Frenchman, who has made definite contracts with Poland and with Czecho-Slovakia and all his hope of an arrangement on the Rhine and the Meuse goes for nothing if there remains the prospect of Franco-German collision on the Vistula or the Upper Elbe.

Meantime, the Frenchman finds himself in an awkward position because both his Czecho and Polish allies are coming down on him and demanding that they shall not be abandoned—and they represent the strength of a million and a half or two million trained troops on mobilization day—whereas the British army is weaker rather than stronger than it was 11 years ago and there is no Russia to come to the scratch if Germany should choose to regard the new four-power pact as she did the old guarantee of Belgian neutrality.

The Chief Difficulty.

The chief difficulty in the guarantee pact question lies in the fact that it suggests in all its details the entrancing game which the older generation may still remember, the game which rejoiced in the name of "Pigs in the Clover," and consisted in manipulating a number of little round shot so that they all would roll into the center, the obvious difficulty being that the motion employed to entrap one usually set all the others rolling in a centrifugal fashion.

The Geneva agreement between Briand and Chamberlain would seem to suggest that agreement has been reached between France and Britain by a series of compromises designed on the one hand to satisfy French obligations to her allies and on the other give proper attention to the British determination not to be responsible either for Polish and Czecho frontiers or for Franco-German quarrels growing out of them. M. Briand and Mr. Chamberlain have found a formula, apparently, which will allow France to protect her allies, but only under conditions carefully set down and all to be put definitely under the control of the League of Nations.

France and Britain have agreed that Germany is to be admitted to the League of Nations with the promise of a permanent place on the council. Subject to her consent to come in, and her due arrival, France and Britain have agreed that there shall be a four-power pact, eternizing the existing frontiers on the west of Germany, that there shall be a neutral zone on the left bank of the Rhine, all within German territory, that Britain shall agree to guarantee these frontiers and to take up arms if they are violated. Britain thus takes for the region between Holland and Switzerland the responsibility which she formerly took for Belgium, and for the same reason. She agrees to fight to preserve a status quo, the disturbance of which would compromise her own security.

But in taking this important responsibility the British do not ally themselves with the French against the Germans. This much has been made very clear by denials coming from London. All British skill is directed toward avoiding creating the impression in Berlin that an alliance is being made against the german, all British effort is concentrated on giving to the whole matter the form and character which will make it free from any color of hostility to Germany, in reality a bi-lateral pact. And the natural effort of the French press to read a unilateral character into the proposal has aroused vehement British denunciation.

Obvious Warnings.

So much for the wholly nebulous information as yet available about this already famous pact. Now there are certain obvious warnings to be borne in mind. The real uncertainty in the matter lies in the fact that there are three divergent states of mind to be reconciled, namely the French, the German and the British. The French still want some form of alliance directly with Britain or some form of general guaranty for all existing frontiers, like the protocol of last year. The Germans want in return for evacuation of their territory and general recognition of their freedom from restraint to give a guarantee limited at best to the west, and from neutralizing the Rhineland against French invasion. The mass of the British public—and all the dominions—want no form of continental commitment whatsoever.

In estimating the present value of the proposed four power pact, the wisest thing is to regard it as one more experiment with the all important question of insuring stability and therefore peace in Europe. The protocol represented an ambitious attempt to deal with the whole question at once and guarantee all frontiers in a single document. It failed because the British were not ready to go beyond guaranteeing frontiers which interested them directly—just as we would guarantee none because none concerned us sufficiently—and only then provided these frontiers were similarly guaranteed by all parties concerned.

What we are not in for is a whole summer of debate on the proposed pact leading up to the session at Geneva in September, when, perhaps, Germany will be admitted to the league and thus qualified to make her views heard for the first time as an equal. In sum, then, the latest proposal is no more than a fresh experiment with the most difficult of conceivable questions and represents at most no more than a new beginning where they have already been innumerable false starts. It represents a gain, because Germany is at last speaking and acting for herself without duress—but if there is basis for optimism there is no excuse yet for far-ranging forecasts of approaching settlement. It substitutes one more regional pact, for the general league guarantee and although anounced from Geneva and thus given the color of a league affair, if really represents a great revision from the position allotted the league under the protocol last summer. The best proof of this is the already announced opposition of MacDonald of the British London party.

It is significant to note, therefore, that although the Anglo-French agreement is only a few days old (and the next budget published.) Not only are France, Britain and Germany at loggerhead as to what it means but in all three countries very emphatic opposition is already taking form. This is before it comes to anything, if it does, the four-power pact has still a very rough road to traverse.

LIBRARY LITERARY NOTES

"The Man Nobody Knows"

BY CLYDE PETTUS, OF THE CARNEGIE LIBRARY

Some years ago there was a little boy who failed to be impressed with his elders' idea of Jesus as the meek and passive prophet of a joyless religion. He admired the doughty Daniel and David of the trusty sling, but found only negative virtue in the pale "Lamb of God." When the boy grew up he began to be puzzled about the enthusiasm that Jesus inspired and to wonder whether there was not something amiss in a conception that left unexplained the magnetic force necessary to build up the greatest organization in the world. Why was such a man described as a weakling and a kill-joy? He decided to find out what those who knew Jesus personally had to say and piece together for himself a picture of the carpenter's son. When he had done this he was amazed—feeling that he had by searching found out a man whose muscles were sufficiently awe-inspiring to discourage opposition from the money-changers in the temple, who was so popular a dinner guest that he was reproached as a "wine bibber and a gluttonous man, and who was the kind of failure that could make of 12 men from the lowest ranks of life a power to move the world.

It was in this fashion that Bruce Barton's "The Man Nobody Knows" came to be written. In days not so long past it would have been considered sacrilegious to translate the life of Jesus into terms of every-day commercial affairs, bringing him boldly from the synagogue to the market place. Mr. Barton is a business man and he makes use of words familiar in business. To him Jesus is the executive—the leader whose success is as capable of analysis by an efficiency expert as that of David Lloyd-George or Edward Bok. With a sure instinct for discerning latent power in others, did not Jesus successfully organize his company of followers—the ostracized Matthew whom he called as he passed by, James and John wrangling over offices, and the noisy ex-fisherman, Simon, who became Peter, "The Rock" after the shame of unrebuked denial had burned away his wavering? Having chosen his raw material the leader proceeded to make of it an organization fit for his victorious purpose.

Convincing Methods.

The terms in which Mr. Barton describes Jesus' method of convincing His audience are those applicable to modern salesmanship. He finds exemplified in the conversations of the teacher a putting himself in the other man's place—going along with him in thought for a little while until he reaches the point of favorable decision. To Peter, with a net in his hands, his invitation was "Come, I will make you a fisher of men." He sensed the objections of the remiss host to the woman who brought the tribute of ointment, and told the parable of the two debtors. To many traps laid with words he replied with that most effective rebuttal, a well-directed question. "I will ask you a question," he said, but it remained unanswered and his opponents retired discomfited.

As no two men ever see quite the same picture when they look out of a window, so each one finds in his friend qualities which appeal to himself. By the majority of mankind Jesus has been seen through the eyes of the preacher, but no carpenter forgets that he worked with his hands in a little shop in Nazareth and no doctor that the sick were cured and the lame made whole by the greatest of physicians. Mr. Barton has yet another point of view—that of the advertising man. His attention is focused on the publicity which Jesus secured; he writes for a single day of his life—the day recorded in the ninth chapter of Matthew—front page newspaper headlines. What marvelous copy could be made of a day's activities that included the healing of the palsied man, the calling of Matthew, and the raising from the dead of Jairus's daughter. There were no newspapers to tell the story, but there were few silent tongues in the market place.

Every parable exemplifies the most up-to-date advertising instruction. No superfluous words, a picture that caught and held the attention immediately, wonderfully simple and direct. "A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho and fell among thieves." There is no long introduction—a definite locality, familiar to to his hearers, is cited—in a flash they see the solitary road, the rash traveler, the sudden onset of marauders. Yet the whole is as sharply drawn as an etching and—following Mr. Barton's line of thought—as concise as required by the most rigid "good advertising."

Spirit of Service.

A remark of the governor of Jerusalem who succeeded Pilate is characteristic of the viewpoint held by Mr. Barton's early preceptors. Lentulus is quoted as saying that nobody ever saw Jesus laugh, and through the ages the assertion has endured to the distressful uneasiness of the cheerful-minded among His followers. If Jesus never laughed could conscientious Christians forget the sorrow and sin of the world long enough to be mirthful? The author of "The Man Nobody Knows" refutes the quotation with the gospel story of a wedding party at Cana, where a guest prolonged the gaiety by a miraculous supply of wine, and of a message from the imprisoned John the Baptist inquiring if Jesus, who attended the feasts and loved the crowd, was indeed the Messiah whom he was expecting. Jesus was a man of many friends—the high and the low—from Nicodemus, of the supreme court, and the rich man who gave his new tomb, all the way down to publicans and sinners and the thief who died on a cross at his side.

It is upsetting to the traditional idea of Jesus to think of Him as the "founder of modern business," but it is the phrase rather than the idea, as Mr. Barton explains it, that is the stumbling block. Modern business has much to say about the spirit of service. Long ago Jesus said "Whosoever will be great among you . . . shall be the servant of all." An old idea found to be workable. The efficiency expert has discovered that the successful men are those whose enthusiasm drives them beyond the 5 o'clock stopping point, but advice similar to this was contained in "Whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain." There may be less distance than we have imagined between "work" and "religious work."

The author of "The Man Nobody Knows" calls it a portrait rather than a biography. He ignores sequence of time, gathering together bit by bit from the gospel incidents that reveal a leader that few have imagined. It is written for busy people to whom books must speak succinctly or not at all. It makes small pretense to scholarly composition, but Mr. Barton understands the thought processes of those for whom his book is intended. It is a business man's "discovery of Jesus."

Opera Directors as Seen by Robert Pitkin

This is the second pen and ink comment by Robert Pitkin on the light opera principal and ballet numbers as he sees them in "The Mikado," now winding up the first week on light opera at the city auditorium. Mr. Pitkin is so busy rehearsing, eating and sleeping he says he is finding it difficult to run down a pen long enough to draw a cartoon, but probably will be induced to contribute one from "The Prince of Pilsen," which opens Monday night.

COTTON SPINNING IN MAY SHOWS LESS ACTIVITY

Washington, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—Cotton spinning activity was curtailed somewhat during May as compared with April but was above May of last year, on the face of census bureau statistics announced today.

Active spindle hours for May totalled 7,929,605,719, or an average of 210 hours per spindle in place compared with 8,518,142,398, or an average of 225 for April this year and 5,907,670,026 or an average of 156 for May last year.

Spinning spindles in place May 31 numbered 37,835,708, of which 33,147,632 were operated at some time during the month, compared with 37,804,654 and 33,412,650 for April this year and 37,784,690 and 30,493,165 for May last year.

The average number of spindles active during May was 35,41 418, or at 93.6 per cent capacity on a single shift basis compared with 37,799,611 or at 100 per cent capacity in April this year and 25,506973 or at 67.5 per cent capacity in May last year.

Cotton Losses at Gins Mount to High Figures Says Bureau Report

Washington, June 20.—(By the Associated Press.)—More than half the avoidable cotton handling losses can be traced back to the gin, the department of agriculture said today following an investigation of ginning practices. Independent ginners were declared largely responsible for gin cut cotton, seedy cotton, mix packs, plated bales, use of bagging of inferior quality and irregular weight, false weights and much of the weather-damaged cotton.

Opposing interests of the custom ginner and the owner of the cotton cause the major part of damage, the department found, the custom ginner's advantage lying in spending the minimum amount necessary on gin improvements and cutting the cotton of the farmer as rapidly as possible.

Don't Tempt Providence; Secure Your Protection

Don't tempt Providence!

How often have you heard the old warning—but are you obeying its injunction?

You recognize the seriousness of the wave of ever-growing traffic accident tragedies. But are you protected by insurance against emergencies you cannot foresee? Accident insurance is becoming almost a necessity. Are you and your loved ones safeguarded?

Through its new and sensational $7,500 Travel Accident policy The Constitution offers its subscribers the cheapest protection on the most efficient basis. This great policy is written by the North American Life Insurance company of Chicago, the only old-line company writing accident insurance exclusively. Constitution's subscribers alone can secure them in this territory.

The policy costs you only $1 per year in addition to the regular subscription rates of your Daily and Sunday Constitution, and it provides the following sweeping protective guarantees:

Payment of $7,500 for traffic accidental death, the policy increasing 10 per cent per year to $10,000 in five years; $2,000 automobile death, the policy increasing 10 per cent per year to $3,000 in five years; $1,000 pedestrian death, the policy increasing 10 per cent per year to $1,500 in five years; large cash sums for permanent injuries, and $10 weekly indemnity for disability resulting from certain specified accidents.

Don't wait longer to take advantage of this wonderful protective opportunity. You owe it to those you love to make this dollar investment which may mean comfort and security for them.

In this same issue appears an advertisement setting forth the offer in detail. Read it; then phone, write or visit The Constitution's insurance department and get your protection.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY WM. BRADY, M. D.

THE THIRD MOVE OF A KING.

Having settled the vaccination problem and eradicated smallpox at one swell whoop, by a process of harmonious elimination of the unbelievers, as described in the first proclamation; and having provided fair compensation for subjects quarantined or isolated by the state for the benefit of the state, my next move, if I were king, would require more tack (not tact) than I have ever been able to show as a mere teacher. No doubt on ascending the throne I should learn how to use more tack. I notice that people who gain the high honors or offices in the gift of the people generally have infinite tack and use it in all their public acts.

Tacking, therefore, in the general direction I wished to go, I should establish a new order of chivalry, viz., the Order of the Red Mask, and I should dub every one a knight of the order, or knight him a dub in it, who might be found purporting to have a "cold" of any kind. Knights would be distinguished by their red masks, which would consist of not less than 10 layers of gauze having 32 threads to the inch, the masks covering nose and mouth and being held in place by tapes tied over the ears and behind the neck. The tapes might be green, blue or yellow, in the discretion, taste and character of the members of the order. In the case of a knight of ordinary intelligence, the proper color for the tapes would be yellow, for that shade fits the character of persons who deliberately go about peddling their alleged "colds." If the knights were an ignorant person, blue tapes would be provided to hold his mask on, for no doubt he'd feel that way about the encroachment upon his "personal liberty."

In various places efforts have been made by the health authorities to label certain ambulant cases of infectious disease in such a manner as to give the public the same protection which placarding the dwelling of persons ill of communicable diseases gives. For example, children or others with whooping-cough have been required to wear about the sleeve a conspicuous band (generally yellow) with the name of the disease plainly printed thereon. A person wearing such a label cannot so readily attend the movies or other public gatherings and spread his disease among his neighbors as is possible where this excellent practices does not prevail. It is not at all uncommon to see persons ill of whooping-cough attending public gatherings, with or without the consent of the public health authorities. Whooping-cough is but one of a long list of respiratory infections (there are at least a score of diseases specifically included in this class) which may and usually do pass for a time at the onset or in the earlier stages as "colds." It is in the stage of invasion that these respiratory infections are most communicable. They are all spread in the same way.

In tacking the Red Mask on my subjects, therefore, I believe I would be doing a noble thing, for the Red Mask as described serves not only as a badge of warning but also as an actual barrier against the spread of the diseases which cause most sickness. Of course the conservative or reactionary party would argue that some alleged "colds" are not catching, but believe me, there wouldn't be any such conservatives long after Old King Brady had the power to behead 'em.

Dosage of Somersaults.

What is the dosage of somersaults for a child four years of age? We have to give her physic all the time. (W. G. M.)

Answer—Say from 10 to 30 night and morning.

Science and Eats.

Once you recommended a book, I think by a Dr. Harvey, on the Food You Eat and What Becomes of It. Although my husband is a chemist and bacteriologist and has received scores of such books, I can find no trace of this one you recommended and I should like to procure it. (C. L.)

Answer—I think it was "What We Eat and What Happens to It," by Prof. Philip B. Hawk, published by Harper & Brothers, New York, at about $2. It is indeed a sound scientific book full of physiological information which laymen sorely need.

Dampness.

Is dampness injurious to health? The house I live in is very damp. Some people say it is injurious and some say it isn't. I am particularly anxious about my young children. (Mrs. B. L. P.)

Answer—Dampness may give some inconvenience or discomfort but I assure you it cannot injure your health or your children's health.

Warts.

Please tell me what is a good treatment for warts? I've tried many things, but instead of getting rid of the warts I get more.—(Lla.)

Answer—If the warts are on your hands, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for instructions. If the warts are about the face, head or neck, better submit the problem of their removal or destruction to your doctor.

Food Values.

I would like to secure a list of the various foods with their values. (D. J. A.)

Answer—Send 10 cents in coin to the superintendent of documents, Government Printing office, Washington, letin No. 28, The Chemistry of American Food Materials.

Can't Happen.

Last winter while working at a D. C., for agriculture department bulswitchboard I picked a pimple and got brass infection. What would you suggest to cure my blood of this impurity? (Mrs. S. J. S.)

Answer—Brass infection or brass poisoning can't happen in that way. Queer Paragraph in Excellent Book.

Some time ago you highly recommended the book, "Personal Hygiene Applied," by Dr. Jesse Feiring Williams. I procured the book on your recommendation. Then I was greatly confused when you ridiculed Dr. Williams' theory on colds. This makes me doubt whether I obtained the right book. (B. C. H.)

Answer—I do highly recommend the book, but the paragraphs about alleged "colds" seemed ridiculous to me.

IF BILIOUS, SICK! TAKE NO CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Straightens You Up Better Than Salivating, Dangerous Calomel and Doesn't Upset You—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee

You're bilious! Your liver is sluggish! You feel lazy, dizzy and all knocked out. Your head is dull, your tongue is coated; breath bad; stomach sour and bowels constipated. But don't take salivating calomel. It makes you sick, you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel crashes into sour bile like dynamite, breaking it up. That's when you feel that awful nausea and cramping.

If you want to enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight. Your druggist or dealer sells you a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents under my personal money-back guarantee that each spoonful will clean your sluggish liver better than a dose of nasty calomel and that it won't make you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is real liver medicine. You'll know it next morning because you will wake up feeling fine, your liver will be working, your headache and dizziness gone, your stomach will be sweet and your bowels regular. You will feel like working; you'll be cheerful; full of vigor and ambition.

Dodson's Liver Tone is entirely vegetable, therefore harmless and can not salivate. Give it to your children.—(adv.)

Butts County Plans 100th Celebration On October 29-30

Jackson, Ga., June 20.—(Special.) At a meeting of the executive committee of the Butts county Centennial tennial celebration Thursday and Friboard it was decided to hold the cenday, October 29 and 30. At that time the county will celebrate the anniversary and plans are being made for a notable celebration. Committees are now at work on the different phases of the centennial program. Features will be floats and a pageant depicting the history of the county for the past 100 years. The agricultural fair will also be held in connection with the centennial celebration.

Miss Lucile Akin is general chairman of the centennial committee; Judge S. J. Foster vice chairman, and O. A. Pound, secretary and treasurer.

The history committee has had frequent meetings and will soon be in possession of a vast amount of data which will be turned over to the pageant committee in arranging the most spectacular feature of the celebration.

"ALL KIWANIS NIGHT" HELD AT JACKSON

Jackson, Ga., June 20.—The Kiwanis club of Jackson will observe "all-Kiwanis night" June 22, which will also be "ladies' night." An interesting program is being arranged and a large attendance is expected. The proceedings of the St. Paul convention will be received by radio and this will be one of the features of entertainment.

The American Bible society announce the total issue for the year 1924 amounted to 652,299 volumes.

Butts Club Members May Hold Own Course At Indian Springs

Jackson, Ga., June 20.—(Special.) If present plans are worked out all of Butts county's club members of more than 200 boys and girls will be given training for a week at Indian Springs this summer. The advantage of a summer camp at Indian Springs, which is ideally suited for that purpose, will be to give instruction to practically every club member in the county, whereas only a few boys and girls will be able to attend camp Wilkins at the State College of Agriculture at Athens.

Experts from the State College and other well-known leaders will assist County Agent H. G. Wiley in conducting the summer training course. Department heads at the State College have given the plan their hearty indorsement.

The week's camp will probably be held the last of July.

JACKSON KIWANIANS GO TO CONVENTION

Jackson, Ga., June 20.—(Special.) With four delegates to the convention of Kiwanis International, Jackson will probably have the largest representation of any club in the entire state for a town of its size. The delegates are A. O. Pound, president of the Jackson club this year; W. A. Dozier, lieutenant governor of the Central Georgia district and past president of the Jackson club; J. W. O'Neal and E. R. Edwards.

Mr. Pound, chairman of the transportation committee, announces that 80 delegates from Georgia will attend the convention at St. Paul, as compared with 23 at the convention in Denver in 1924.

QUITMAN TO OBSERVE INDEPENDENCE DAY

Quitman, Ga., June 20.—(Special.) Quitman will be the mecca for all of the oldtime fiddlers of this section on July 4, when seven counties will join in a monster celebration of Independence day and national defense day and incidentally dedicate the Brooks county tobacco warehouse, which will be completed by that time.

Under the auspices of the American Legion Quitman will be decorated 100 per cent with American flags 4x6 feet, which will fly from a 12-foot standard in front of every business house and residence in town.

Quitman and Brooks counties will be joint hosts to the population of Thomas, Colquitt, Cook and Lowndes counties in Georgia, and Madison and Jefferson counties in Florida, all these counties adjoining Brooks county.

Brass band concerts, street parades, a program of notable speakers, athletic sports and a grand ball in the warehouse at night complete the arrangements for the day's celebration. The South Georgia railroad will run excursion trains and thousands of visitors are expected in automobiles.

The entire program is under the auspices of the Brooks farm bureau and the farmers of the county declare the barbecue served here on July 4 will surpass all other menus of the past.

MRS. RUSSELL SNOW HONORED BY BRENAU

Quitman, Ga., June 20.—(Special.) Mrs. Russell Snow, of this city, who prior to her marriage to Russell E. Snow, of this city, was teacher of oratory at Brenau college at Gainesville, has been elected a trustee of the college because of her distinguished services to the institution and also as a tribute to her brilliant achievement in civic improvement in Quitman.

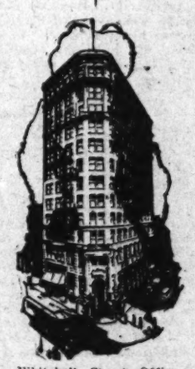

Mrs. Snow is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. W. M. Harrell, of Bainbridge. Her husband is a member of the law firm of Branch and Snow, a former state senator from this district. The friends of Mrs. Snow throughout south Georgia are very much pleased at the honor bestowed by Brenau college.

MOTOR CLUB CHIEF VISITS MISSOURI

A. P. Phillips, Jr., general manager of the Motor club left Friday for St. Louis, to be the guest of the Automobile Club of Missouri for a few days. Mr. Phillips is traveling in the middle west in the interest of encouraging tourists to visit Georgia and Atlanta. Mr. Phillips will go from there to Tulsa, Okla., to attend the Junior Chamber of Commerce convention.

The remains of Fritz Liszt, the famous Hungarian pianist, and composer have been conveyed from Bayreuth to Budapest for reinterment in a magnificent tomb.

'ABIE'S IRISH ROSE' AGAIN AT ATLANTA

Anne Nichols' Great Comedy Starts Fourth Week.

In line with a policy extensively practiced by Anne Nichols, author and producer of "Abie's Irish Rose," two new faces will be seen in the Atlanta cast when the famous comedy opens its fourth week at the Atlanta theater on Monday night. Dorothy Coghlan has come direct from the New York cast to play the part of Rosemary Murphy, while William Frederic comes from the western company to play Patrick Murphy, the irascible old Irishman.

Miss Coghlan, only 21 years old, is the youngest leading lady on the stage today and is the possessor of a distinguished ancestry on both sides of her family. Her mother was the famous English dramatic star, Gertrude Coghlan and she is also a niece of Charles and Rose Coghlan. The Coghlans are one of the most famous stage families in the annals of English and American theatricals for the past three or four generations.

Miss Coghlan's father was Augustus Pitou, Jr., son of the elder Augustus producers, who brought many of the Pitou one of the most famous old-time most famous stars to public notice, including such outstanding figures as Scanlan, Chauncey Olcott, etc.

Mr. Frederic has made a splendid reputation for himself with the western 'Abie' company, while the ability of Miss Coghlan has been demonstrated by her work in New York, where the play is now on the fourth year of its consecutive run.

Monday marks the beginning of the fourth week of the Atlanta engagement. There is still a steady demand for seat reservations and it is evident that, if the management sees fit, the play can stay in Atlanta profitably for several more weeks. This constitutes a record unique in the annals of the local stage and one which will probably stand unchallenged for many years to come. Despite strong counter attractions, the attendance at each of the eight performances last week was extremely satisfactory and there has already been a considerable advance sale for this, the fourth week.

Opinions differ as to just what factor in the play is the potent lure which draws all classes of people to see "Abie's Irish Rose." Certain it is that both regular theatergoes and those who, usually, never enter a theater for years, have flocked to see the play here. Nearly every one who sees it has a different view on its drawing power, by whatever the reason, the people do come and that is the emphatic answer which cannot be gainsayed.

In any event, regardless of how long the local run eventually becomes, it is here all of the coming week, with two new members of the cast in important roles, and, if you have already seen it, it will be extremely interesting to go again and compare the work of the newcomers with that of the excellent performers who left the company after Saturday night's performance.

This week there will be the usual night performances, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday at special bargain rates.

Joseph E. Howard, Song Composer, Tops Keith's Program

Joseph E. Howard, one of the best known of popular song composers with his company of talented performers, will appear at Keith's Forsyth theater as the headlining attraction all this week in his latest skit entitled, "The Broadcasting Studio," which revives the memory of many of his musical successes.

The program at the Forsyth this week will be for the entire six days instead of the usual double program. This, however, is not the beginning of the summer policy which ushers in big time vaudeville at the popular theater. Manager Marty Semon said that rather than keep the theater dark for the last three days of this week which ends the regular season, he succeeded in arranging for the program to stay all week.

The big-time programs will commence on next Monday, June 29, to continue through the summer months.

Mr. Howard is one of the big names in the American theater. He has been a star in musical comedy, and was a pioneer in the vaudeville revues. In his present vehicle, he with Aneta Case are offering memories from Mr. Howard's musical successes, introducing characterizations of different stars who appeared in them. These show Mr. Howard's musical numbers the theater has known.

He is assisted by Pauline Haggard at the piano.

As an added attraction on the program, Will Burns and Jimmy Burchill offer a riotous comedy offering entitled, "Tunes, Tickles and Taps." These excellent pedal prancers and laugh launchers have in the past year portrayed the principal comedy roles in the musical success, "Flo Flo." Now they are back in vaudeville, scoring hit after hit.

Howard Anderson and Rean Graves offer an unusual comedy called, "Living On Air." The title explains the plot and the story is further proof that misfortune is the best kind of fun and here is another play to perfection.

They have taken a new situation and filled it with sparkling dialogue and provided themselves with an opportunity to liberally do the things which have given them a reputation as players.

Nate Leipsig, the international card expert, not only proves that the hand is quicker than the eye but also does many tricks that are in fact not tricks at all, but mathematical problems.

The Dancing Kennedys present something unusual in "Their Own Creations."

A Pathe newsreel and a Pathe revue complete the program.

Don't forget that next Monday, June 29, big-time vaudeville commences for full week run at the Forsyth.

EDWIN MAYNARD WITH "ABIE'S IRISH ROSE"

Edwin Maynard, who plays the role of "Father Whalen," the Irish priest in "Abie's Irish Rose," at the Atlanta theater, is a man of long and varied experience in the theater. "I have played everything from Shakespearean tragedy to low Irish comedy," Mr. Maynard said yesterday.

The part of "Father Whalen," as written by Anne Nichols in her record-breaking "Abie," however, is one of the most human and sympathetic characters Mr. Maynard was ever called upon to play, he says. "The man is so kindly reasonable in his every thought and speech," he said, "that no one could help loving him."

"Abie's Irish Rose" begins the fourth week of its local engagement at the Atlanta theater Monday night with several new faces in the cast and with the prospect of continuing at least two or three weeks longer to perform before satisfactory audiences. It has already established a record for length of run for any play ever to appear in Atlanta.

BALALAIKA ORCHESTRA HEADS LOEW'S BILL

Harry Ellsworth and the famous Balalaika orchestra, one of the biggest musical sensations in vaudeville ranks, will appear in Atlanta this week as the headline attraction at Loew's Grand theater. This notable announcement means that one of the most versatile and most entertaining musical organizations in the world will remain a week in Atlanta.

The orchestra is composed of ten men and one woman and they play on quaint Russian stringed instruments of every strange design and shape which produce what has been termed "the perfection in harmony."

The program will contain not only the lullabies and soft song numbers of all nations but also modern down to the minute song hits. Sensational dancing, harmony singing by a chorus of ten men and several solos will be featured. Arthur Rogalsy and Sophie Maximova are featured performers in the turn. The orchestra will be directed by Alex Ivanoff.

Two of the funniest men on the stage, Dave Bender and Harry Armstrong, will bring their new laugh factory to Loew's this week as one of the outstanding features on the new bill. Here are two genuine fun producers who admit themselves they are "Just a Couple of Good Men Gone Wrong" and they are both versatile entertainers. Not only are they top-notchers in singing topical song hits and comic ditties but they introduce some acrobatic fun which is of a surprising nature. They intersperse their program with dancing and comedy and have won the universal approval of the critics all around the circuit.

Earl S. Dewey and Mabel "Billie" Rogers, two recruits from the musical comedy field will present a sweet little sketch entitled "Honey." The skit was written specially for them by W. M. Hough, who wrote the famous old musical comedies out of Chicago which scored such big successes. Music, songs and dances are introduced in the action of the playlet.

That perennial favorite "Mammie Jinny," noted comedienne, is an important personage on the new Loew bill. With her bubbling personality, happy laughter and ludicrous burlesque dancing "The Pride of Dixie" always scores a knockout hit. She comes this year in an entirely new act and with an unlimited supply of good fund.

Amazing physical exploits are featured by Marie Racko and partner in their novelty number. Some beautiful posing and lighting effects are produced and marvelous exhibitions of strength and dexterity are shown. This turn is of an unusual nature and is totally different from the ordinary run of acts of this type.

This strong list of entertainers will be offered in combination with "On Thin Ice," one of the greatest pictures of the year.

FULL WEEK POLICY STARTS ON JUNE 29 AT KEITH'S FORSYTH

A long awaited announcement—features on the program of vaudeville for the first week which will open the summer policy of full week big time program at Keith's Forsyth theater on June 29—was forthcoming from Manager Marty Semon Saturday.

mences next Monday will be Jim and Betty Morgan with their collegiate orchestra, including 12 persons.

Among the features to be included in the first program, which com-

Here music lovers will be offered music somewhat different. It isn't the mad jazz music of the cabaret nor the soft tinted strains of the ball room but a pleasant and happy medium. This act is one of the best in vaudeville and will provide a splendid opener for the big time programs.

Then, too, the program will include Maude Earle and company, vaudeville highest voiced prima donna.

Assisted by Frank Vares at the piano, Miss Earle will present songs classical and popular in a delightful melange.

Joe Weston and Grace Eline, another big number on the bill of musical comedy stars of much repute. They have appeared in some of the leading musical productions of past seasons, and their appearance here will add much to the enjoyability of the program. They will present some character interpretations.

Howard Langford and Ina Frederick will offer a comedy number, filled with laughs entitled "Shopping" but the real thrill of the bill will come in the act of "Togo" who stages a sensational slide on a rope from the second balcony.

'PETER PAN' BIG PLAY AT NEW CAMEO THEATER

"Peter Pan" at the Cameo Wednesday and Thursday assumes first importance for the week's program for this new house. Sir James M. Barrie's immortal classic of the "Boy Who Wouldn't Grow Up," has been made into a screen masterpiece. The author cooperated in the production even to the extent of selecting pretty Betty Bronson for the "Peter Pan" role. Few pictures have ever been produced that have such a wide range of appeal as "Peter Pan." Young and old alike will enjoy it.

Pola Negri in "East of Suez" is the Monday and Tuesday offering. For the first time in her career as an actress, Pola Negri appears in a role which takes her "East of Suez." Although the star has played characters of practically every country in the Occident, from the Argentine to Russia, this production is the first to carry her beyond the rising sun into the mysterious regions of the east.

Douglas MacLean is coming back to the Cameo on Friday and Saturday in the greatest comedy achievement of his career. "Never Say Die" is an adaption of one of Willie Collier's greatest stage successes. Douglas MacLean is cast in the role of a wealthy young fellow who, if he doesn't marry, will have his fortune go to charity. So it is arranged for him to wed a beautiful girl who will become his sole heir. It ends in a burst of hilarious comedy which leaves the audience fairly gasping for breath.

Bernice Barlow.

The stage attractions at the Howard this week will be especially entertaining.

Miss Bernice Barlow, of vaudeville fame will appear singing a number of popular love songs of the day. Miss Barlow is gifted with one of the most pleasing voices that has been heard on an Atlanta stage for some time.

As an extra added attraction the management has secured the services of Miss Lucy Mower, one of Atlanta's most popular debutantes to do an original interpretation of the dance of "The Crazy Cats." Miss Mower is well known throughout Atlanta for her pleasing personality and wonderful ability as a dancer.

Colleen Moore had one "actress" in her supporting cast in the First National screen version of Don Mullally's "The Desert Flower." It was Millie, an unlovely nanny goat, who, in the film, as the property of Maggie Fortune, the heroine, supplies sustenance to little Gwen, Maggie's baby sister. Millie lives in a corral atop a box-car which is the desert home of the heroine. Millie didn't like her movie environment one bit.

Richard Barthelmess.

Alpha theater, 116 Whitehall street, have an array of high class pictures that are exceptional. They have been shown in Atlanta theaters before but are all fine pictures. Richard Barthelmess in "The Bright Shawl" Monday is a first National release and is a very entertaining picture. The Constance Talmadge picture Thursday is "East Is West"; Jack Pickford in "Garrison's Finish" Friday is a race track picture that will give you a thrill every minute. The program of the Alpha changes daily with a feature picture and comedies.

Free Pictures Today.

(At Lakewood.)

Two free moving pictures tonight and a band concert this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock will head the long list of entertainment for Lakewood park during the coming week.

The first of the free pictures tonight will start at 7 o'clock and a second feature picture will be shown immediately after the first one is over.

Dancing every night at Lakewood will be another one of the features and a special masquerade dance will be held next Thursday night. Cash prizes will be given Thursday night. On Friday night the regular weekly square dance will be held and a special orchestra has been secured to play for the dancers. Special music will be played for the square dance Friday night.

The people who make St. George, Staten Island, N. Y., their habitat will probably wonder what it's all about when they see a huge lecturd prowling around the vicinity for the next few days. The animal in question, however, need not worry them—he is one of the supporting cast of "The Half-Way Girl," a story of the Orient, which an Earl Hudson unit is producing for First National, with Doris Kenyon, Lloyd Hughes and Hobart Bosworth in the featured roles.

Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National Pictures, Inc., last week gave a highly successful tea dance at Sherry's, in New York, in honor of Corinne Griffith, who is in the east taking some exteriors for her next starring vehicle, "Classified," by Edna Ferber. Many distinguished writers, critics, artists and publishers were present, and the affair was pronounced one of the most successful social events of recent months in cinema circles.

"Fine Clothes" is in the cutting room. No, this isn't a figure of speech nor a trade announcement of the garment industry. It simply means that the rechristened Louis B. Mayer-John M. Stahl screen version of Franz Molnar's "Fashions For Men" is in the editing stage. The film, in which Lewis Stone, Percy Marmont and Alma Rubens have leading roles, is slated by First National for late summer release

What They Were Putting On.

Scenes reproducing Ziegfeld's New York Follies are a feature of Monta Bell's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Pretty Ladies," by Adela Rogers St. Johns. Tom Moore and Conrad Nagel, who both appear in this picture, were recently overheard carrying on the following conversation while these scenes were being photographed:

"I stumbled into the dressing-room of the theater by mistake last night," remarked one.

"What was going on?" inquired Moore.

"Oh, nothing to speak of."

One Thrill More.

Sally O'Neill, who plays the leading role in Rupert Hughes' "Don't," directed for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Alf Goulding, has a scene where, having been locked in her room by her parents, she escapes by letting herself down from her bedroom window by sheets tied end to end. She was pardonably nervous over making the descent, and exclaimed:

"But what if one of the sheets should come untied?"

"By George," cried Director Goulding. "That's a good idea!"

Caustic.

Lew Cody, who plays opposite Mae Busch in Robert Z. Leonard's production of Kate Jordan's "Time, the Comedian," adapted to the screen by Frederick and Fanny Hatton, is telling the following story at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayor studios:

A young wife was insisting hotly that, economy or no economy, a new frock she must have, and her husband, wit equal warmth, declined to produce the cash.

"I'll never speak to you again!" she shouted angrily.

"How like a woman!" he sighed. "When everything else fails you try bribery!"

Betty Bronson, whose hair was bobbed for "Peter Pan" and "Are curls in Sidney Olcott's Paramount Parents People?" is wearing long curls in Sidney Olcott's Paramount production, "Not So Long Ago," a story of New York 50 years ago.

Noah Beery has added another to his collection of animalus. During filming of Zane Grey's "Wild Horse Mesa" at Red Lake, Ariz., the Paramount character actor bought a beautiful Navajo sheep dog from one of the tribal chiefs. Noah will have quite a managerie soon.

THREE BIG FEATURES ON PALACE PROGRAM.

A wild dash with a sheriff, a mad dash in an automobile, a thrilling pursuit in an elevator—these are among the thrills that turn to laughs in "The Fast Worker," featuring Laura La Plante and Reginald Denny, which is scheduled as the feature attraction at the Palace theater, Monday and Tuesday. An adaptation of George Barr McCutheon's widely read novel, "The Husbands of Edith," the picture shows Denny in the role of a man who suddenly finds a strange "wife and family" thrust on him. The cast includes such favorites as Margaret Campbell, John Steppling, Clarissa Selwynne and Lee Morgan.

"Peacock Alley," based on a story by Ouida Bergere and starring beautiful Mae Murray, will be shown for one day only, Wednesday. It is the story of a Parisian dancer who falls in love with a small town American youth and finds her husband's people scandalized when she goes back to his home, resulting in the couples seeking their fortune in New York city, and is said to give Miss Murray unusual opportunity to appear in many georgeous and artistic costumes among elaborate settings.

Rudolp Valentino will be seen Thursday and Friday in "A Sainted Devil," from the story "Ropes End," by Rex Beach. Nita Naldi, Helen D'Algy, Dagmar Godowsky, Louise Lagrange and George Seigman are a few of the big names which appear in the powerful supporting cast of this production—a story laid in the Argentine which tells of the country-wide search of a young Spaniard of wealthy parents for his convent-bred bride, who is stolen from him on their wedding night by bandits.

Douglas Fairbanks closes the week's program on Saturday in "His Majesty the American."

Edwin Carewe has completed the picturization of "The Lady Who Lied," a coming First National picture adapted from Robert Hichens' "Snake-Bite." Leading roles are played by Lewis Stone, Virginia Valli and Nita Naldi. The film is slated for July release.

ELEANOR BOARDMAN AT THE HOWARD THEATER

First Picture by Metro-Goldwyn Here in Several Months.

The feature picture at the Howard this week will be King Vidor's latest contribution to the screen, "Proud Flesh," a Metropolitan-Goldwyn picture, featuring Eleanor Boardman, Pat O'Malley and Harrison Ford. It is said that this picture maintains the high caliber of work established by this director, one of the youngest in the motion picture industry.

In this picture old world culture is pitted against new world democracy; hereditary instincts struggling with the promptings of environment; arrogance and snobbery battling with the desire of the heart. The story raises the question of whether environment or heredity are stronger in prompting a girl's choice for a mate. Will a pair of overalls and crude mannerisms kill a girl's love when these are in the things in life that she has been taught to disdain?

Eleanor Boardman, as Fernanda plays a role that is the antithesis of those in which she has recently appeared. Feranda is proud and arrogant; reared in an atmosphere of aristocratic continental culture. Miss Boardman has heretofore been identified with the roles of sweet, lovable American girls.

Pat O'Malley depicts the role of a fighting young American-Irish plumber; the democratic American in a pair of overalls. The name of the character curiously enough, is Patrick O'Malley.

In an opposite role, depicting culture, nobility and refinement, is Harrison Ford, who plays Don Jaime. The character is a carefree, likable, youn chap, with a very keen sense of humor.

Much of the story was filmed with the natural beauty that abounds near San Francisco as a background. In the midst of the carnage and aches of the earthquake and fire Feranda is born.

She is reared in Spain with nobility at her feet, and on her return to her native land is imbued with disdain for her fellow countrymen. Don Jaime, who is one of her persistent admirers, follows her to America and continues his ardent courtship.

Upon her arrival in America she meets Pat O'Malley who carries her off in caveman fashion, and culture and environment are forgotten when the primeval instincts predominate.

The picture is clothed in comedy satire, but a serious thread is maintained in some stirring dramatic moments.

"Opera Bouffe," a travesty on the themes of several operatic airs, opens the musical program this week. A distinct novelty is offered by Alex Keene and his orchestra in the form of "Mamie," a revue of the musical girls that you have known. Favorite airs from "Baron Trenck" from the background of the score for "Proud Flesh."

The comedy, "Midnight Blues," is one of the funniest that has been seen in Atlanta for a long time.

Colleen Moore was never more delightful than she is revealed this week at the Metropolitan theater in her latest First National attraction "The Desert Flower."

The picture, an adaptation of the stage offering of the same name, recently presented in New York by A. Woods, teems with the action and color of western life. It presents Miss Moore in the pathetically poignant guise of little Maggie Fortune, stepdaughter of a brute of a step-father, section boss of a railroad construction gang on the desert, and who, inherent instincts for the better things of life seek to find expression through a baby sister, whom she sends away to enjoy the refinements of a real home and education while she goes into a mining camp dance hall to provide the wherewithal of it all.

How in this rough environment she yet wins and retains the respect of all and through her budding love for the errant scion of a fine eastern family, redeems the recalcitrant rolling stone and extracts her own reward from a world that yields happiness all too reluctantly, is compellingly set forth by the gifted little star.

Lloyd Hughes and a cast apparently chosen with special care for their peculiar qualifications for the roles entrusted to them gives Miss Moore excellent support.

Enrico Leide will present "Orpheus in the Underworld" as the overture, and the theme selected for the feature is "I Love You." The scoring of the feature is based on some original western ballads and the comedy contains bits of Broadway productions of the current season.

Of especial interest to the children will be the presentation of one of the new Our Gang comedies, "Ask Grandma." The Metropolitan News and Views complete the program.

Going Cody One Better.

The case of "A Slave of Fashion," the Samuel Shipman story which Hobart Henley is directing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was recently discussing various kinds of work and their relation to health, when Miss Shearer, who plays opposite Lew Cody in this picture, observed:

"According to health authorities, sedentary work tends to lessen the endurance."

"In other words," remarked Cody, "the more one sits, the less one can stand."

"Exactly," retorted Miss Shearer. "And if one lies a great deal one's standing is lost completely."

'ON THIN ICE' AT LOEW'S FEATURES TOM MOORE

Thrills galore centering around a many-sided love story of the sordid but startling underworld life of San Francisco will be found in the Warner Brothers screen classic "On Thin Ice," which will be the feature picture attraction at Loew's Grand theater this week.

Here is a picture which grips the attention of the crowds as soon as the first reel begins and holds the interest until the final denouement. It is sensational in the extreme but it paints an accurate and vivid picture of the world in which the story action is laid.

Tom Moore and Edith Roberts are the screen favorites that will interpret the leading parts in the new Warner photoplay, "On Thin Ice."

Knowing Tom Moore's inimitable Irish appeal and Edith Roberts' winsome loveliness, it is easy to guess that "On Thin Ice" will be charmingly enacted, particularly as the story deals with the fascinating problems of crime, love and mystery. William Russell, Theodore Von Eltz, Wilfred North, Gertrude Robinson, Jimmie Quinn and The Texas Kid complete the Warner cast.

Darryl Francis Zanuck, who has won quite a remarkable reputation for zippy scenarios, is the author of the story of "On Thin Ice," which he also adapted for the screen. Mal St. Clair, with the assistance of Irving Ascher, directed this dramatic photoplay, which was photographed by Byron Haskins.

Inasmuch as "On Thin Ice" tells the story of a bank robbery and the daring, ruthless game played by a band of gangsters, movie-goers may anticipate something interesting.

Rose Lore, which is the role Miss Roberts interprets, is a shy friendless girl who is suddenly thrust into the limelight when a mysterious black bag falls at her feet. She returns it to the San Francisco bank, but when the contents prove worthless, she is arrested and charged with the theft. Meanwhile the gangsters who are responsible for the crime, make every endeavor to discover what Rose has done with the money, and in the development of the plot, Rose finds herself seriously entangled in a web of deceit and treachery.

Tom Moore, one of the gangsters, assumes the part of Rose's long-lost brother, but when she is threatened with danger, he reveals his true self and his love for her.

In addition to Edith Roberts and Tom Moore, the cast includes such names as William Russell, Theodore Von Eltz, Wilfred North, Gertrude Robinson, Jimmie Quinn and The Texas Kid.

"On Thin Ice" was written and adapted for the screen by Darryl Francis Zanuck, while Mal St. Clair directed this Warner picture.

Gerald Beaumont's short story, "The Lady Who Played Fidele," will become "The Scarlet Saint" when it is transferred to the screen by First National with Mary Astor in the leading feminine role.

John M. Stahl is to film "The Waning Sex," by Frederic and Fanny Hatton. It will be a First National release, renamed "Married Strangers."

RICHARD DIX, RIALTO, 'THE SHOCK PUNCH'

Richard Dix comes to the Rialto theater this week in the Paramount picture, "The Shock Punch," directed by Paul Sloan, who made "Too Many Kisses," from an adaptation by Luther Reed of the Liberty Magazine story of the same name by John Monk Saunders, who also wrote "A Maker of Gestures," from which "Too Many Kisses" was taken.

"The Shock Punch" will top a fine program which also includes the first episode of the new H. C. Witwer short funny films, "The Pacemakers," which has Alberta Vaughan and her same group of favorites from the two previous Witwer series.

In addition there will be a musical program including several new ditties which will be introduced in Atlanta by William Whitney Hubner and his Rialto orchestra, and the showing on the screen of Pathe News, which "covers" the world news in pictures.

Action, punch, red-blooded thrills and comedy, that's the order of the day in "The Shock Punch."

Frances Howard, who played opposite Dix in "Too Many Kisses," is featured at the head of the cast in this one, too.

In "The Shock Punch," Dix has the role of Randall Lee Savage, scion of a wealthy family, who, in a course of boxing to keep physically fit, develops a "shock punch." He is forced to use this knockout punch on several occasions, especially when in an attempt to prove his daring, he takes a position among structural iron workers. These workers take delight in teasing the embryo and force him to perform hazardous feats on iron beams as they are being hoisted to lofty heights.

Miss Howard plays Dorothy Clark, whose love Dix seeks to win by his courage and daring.

Walter Long, "Gunboat" Smith, Paul Panzer, Charles Beyer and other prominent screen players, appear in the strong supporting cast.

"The Shock Punch" is typical Dix entertainment.

A dual event of importance to entertainment fans takes place at the Rialto theater this week, where Richard Dix's new picture, "The Shock Punch," and the first episode of the new H. C. Witwer series, called "The Pacemakers," will be shown on the same program.

Never has Richard Dix had such a role as in "The Shock Punch." Action, thrills, love-interest, laughs and what-not are included in the picture.

RICHARD DIX TO MAKE 'VANISHING AMERICAN'

Richard Dix, Paramount star, left New York last week for Hollywood, where he will shortly begin work in his greatest role, that of the modern young Indian in the Paramount picturization of Zane Grey's "The Vanishing American." This will be an epic Indian production. Lois Wilson has the principal feminine role.

Dix breathed a sigh of relief upon completing his new speed comedy, "The Lucky Devil," from an original story by Byron Morgan. During the three weeks of shooting the automobile road race scenes in which eight prominent dirt track race drivers participated, many thrills not originally planned, were experienced. There were several real smash-ups in which drivers and mechanics were injured and in one scene a speeding car hit a bale of hay and turned over twice, but fortunately no one was hurt.

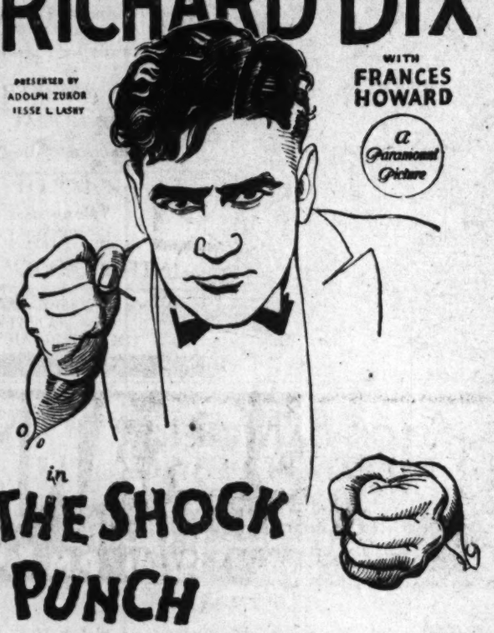

"The Lucky Devil" was directed by Frank Tuttle. Esther Ralston played the leading feminine role.

Raymond Griffith, Paramount's new comedy star, is versatile. He is a scholar, an acrobat, a dramatic actor, a director and a writer of hilarious screen comedies as well as being a laugh provoker, himself. Griffith's next release is "Paths to Paradise," in which Betty Compson is co-featured.

All the scenes are the real thing. There's nothing faked about the fights in the twenty-sixth floor of the new skyscraper. The scenes were taken on a new skyscraper in the course of construction in New York. Frances Howard is her natural self in this picture.

Alberta Vaughan and her favorite funmakers of previous short series from H. C. Witwer's pen are all in the new series, the "Pacemakers." Pathe news is shown at the Rialto and Whitney Hubner has a musical program introducing several new hits from Melody Lane, off Broadway, New York.

Universal To Film Western Spectacle With Norman Kerry

Universal will film a tremendous spectacle of the west, with the Pendleton Round-Up as the background.

That is the announcement from Carl Laemmle, who has just signed contracts giving Universal exclusive film rights to the big annual event of the west. Headed by Norman Kerry, who will star in the big production, and Edward Sedgwick, who will direct it, a unit including several score of actors, cameramen, assistant and technical experts will attend the Round-Up when it takes place in September.

According to the plans of Mr. Laemmle and Raymond L. Schroc, studio general manager, the production will be one of the largest of its kind ever made. A large cast, including many of Universal's feature players, will support the star.

The studio scenario department is collaborating on a story which will tell the romantic history of the west from an entirely new angle.

"It is time for the screen to tell Ameria's own romantic history instead of delving into the past of Europe and its spectacles," Mr. Laemmle declared. "The development of the United States in the last two centuries has in it as much color, adventure and romance as any nation in the world. We are planning to make this production on a scale never attempted before in a picture of this kind.

Contracts giving Universal exclusive rights to the Pendleton classic of the west were signed recently after a conference between Mr. Laemmle and Mr. Schrock, and H. W. Collins and R. C. Bishop, of Pendleton.

Alamo No. 2.
(Missing Daughters.)

"Missing Daughters," the thrilling screen drama recently released is to have its first showing in Atlanta at Alamo 2 on Monday where the picture will be shown for two days.

Eva Novak, Eileen Percy, Pauline Starke, and Claire Adams have the leading feminine roles. The male characterizations are portrayed by Rockliffe Fellows, Roberts Edeson, Sheldon Lewis, Walter Long, Walt Whitman and Chester Bishop.

The plot revolves around the efforts of the U. S. secret service to break up a gang of vicious lounge lizards, who are taking advantage of imprudent flappers. It is said to be a story of tense moments and to contain a lesson for the easy-going modern mother as well as for her headstrong daughter.

Mrs. Harvard A. Kehlbeck, chairman of the board of review of the General Federation of Women's clubs, after viewing the picture in her official capacity states: "From a purely entertainment standpoint of view I regard "Missing Daughters" as an excellent offering. But it is very much more than entertaining. I consider it the duty of every serious-minded and forward looking woman, who has the welfare of society at heart, to see that the picture is placed before as large a number of women and girls as it is possible." Other high officials of various women's clubs have likewise endorsed this picture, and the management of Alamo anticipates capacity audiences for the showing here.

DENNY AND PLANE BEAT FAST TRAIN

In a chase as thrilling as any ever presented on the screen, Reginald Denny, with Hoot Gibson as a passenger, rushed his airplane over the mountains of northern California to put Gibson on a train he had missed en route to Calgary, Canada, where the western star is to make a picture for Universal.

Gibson and Denny were among the party of Hollywood stars who attended the opening of "The Phantom of the Opera" in San Francisco. The two flew up in Denny's plane, Gibson planning to meet his company on the train en route from Los Angeles to Calgary.

He was to meet the train at Davis, Cal., but missed it. The production office at Universal City was flooded with telegrams asking for advice.

Meanwhile Denny offered to catch the train for Gibson and they overtook it at Harrington after a thrilling chase. Denny, after enacting in real life the role of hero, turned calmly around and flew back to Los Angeles, ready to start on his next picture, "Where Was I," which William Seiter will direct.

The latest fad among the smart women in Paris is that of stenciling the shoulder sto match their gowns.

Lloyd Hughes Begs for Fight; Earl Hudson Sees He Gets It

Lloyd Hughes asked Earl Hudson for a fight.

Said he wanted to get away from playing the handsome man stuff; wanted to get mussed up and all that.

He got what he wanted the other day up at First National's New York studios where he is being co-featured with Doris Kenyon in "The Half-Way Girl."

John Francis Dillon, director, pitted him against the massive Hobart Bosworth. The fight started at 9 o'clock in the morning. It ended at 5 in the afternoon with an hour for lunch. And Hughes admits it was some fight!

Bosworth refused to pull his punches, saying that Hughes is a young fellow and should be able to take all that comes his way. Incidentally, Lloyd claims that Bosworth forgot to pull his kicks, a few of which landed in the pit of the young man's stomach.

No, "The Half-Way Girl" is not a prize fight story—it's an Oriental love drama.

Helen Ferguson has finished the greatest thrills in "South Sea Gold," a Richard Talmadge production which took her every day this last week to San Pedro. The schooner on which they were working nearly collided with the Yale, Miss Ferguson narrowly escaped drowning in the scene in which she was thrown overboard, lashed to a spar, but despite these things she was able to laugh at the rest of the cast, all of whom suffered mal de mer except herself.

BEN LYON TO SWAP PHOTOS WITH FANS

Ben Lyon, youthful First National leading man, is turning the tables on his admirers.

Ever since he entered the motion picture world he has been besieged by requests for photographs. At present Ben's fan mail averages about two thousand letters a week, a volume which few even among the oldest screen idols have reached. Not a request for a picture is refused.

Now Ben is starting his own picture gallery. Many of his young fans have been sending in their own photographs. Ben is having them framed and hung on the walls of is dressing rooms at First National's New York studios and he declares that picture for picture is going to be his bargain with his personal followers.

Ben's future fan photos will probably show him at the wheel of a racing automobile, for the young star has gone "speed mad" ever since Earl Hudson decided to cast him in "The Pace That Thrills," a Byron Morgan racing story, as his next First National vehicle. Mary Astor will be co-featured in this with him.

A new type of Eotvos torsion balance, in which reading can be obtained either photographically or visually, is now being constructed in England.

Theater Managers' School.

Announcement has been made by Harold B. Franklin, director of theaters for the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, of the opening of Paramount's first managers' training school. This school will open its first term August 5, and upon the graduation of the first class on February 1, 1926, the second term will begin. The sessions will be continuous thereafter and the courses will embody every phase of motion picture theater management. The sessions of the school will be held at the Rivoli theater in New York city.

The purpose of the school is primarily practical. There will be complete and thorough instruction in all details of theater management, in the course of which the students will learn in the lectures, which will be planned to the smallest detail, daily routine of the modern up-to-date theater. Besides lectures the students will be taken into intimate contact with every phase of theater operation and will be assigned to tasks in which they will assist the different department heads in the actual preparation and execution of the daily routine.

Requirements for entrance to the school include good health, pleasing personality and definite educational training. No applications will be accepted from men under 18 or over 28 years of age. While it is preferred that applicants be college graduates, exceptions will be made for high school graduates if their qualifications are otherwise above the average. Applications for admission to the first session of the school will be accepted between July 1 and July 15. The opening of the first session is scheduled for August 15.

Successful applicants will be called to New York for an interview some time before the school opens. Applications should be mailed at once to the theater department, Famous Players-Lasky corporation, 16 East Forty-Second street, New York, N. Y.

Clara Bow Busy.

Clara Bow avers that she is the busiest actress in the Hollywood film colony.

She had scarcely finished work in "My Lady's Lips," B. P. Schulberg's latest production, just completed under the direction of James P. Hogan, when she was loaned by Schulberg to whom she is under contract, for leading roles in two pictures for Embassy, now being made by the Biard-Beck company for Associated Exhibitors. When she finishes with this company she will again be loaned for a featured role in "The Keeper of the Bees," an F. B. O. production.

Makes a Difference.

Norma Shearer, who is playing opposite Lew Cody in Hobart Henley's production of "A Slave of Fashion," by Samuel Shipman, recently returned to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios to report the following conversation, which she overheard in a restaurant:

"How much do you suppose it would cost me to make a gallon of good whisky?"

"Well, that all depends on who catches you making it."

Wesley Barry To Retire.

Wesley Barry, popular young motion picture actor, is to have an important role in Ramon Novarro's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, provisionally known as "Midshipman Sterling," and will retire from the screen on completing work in this film. Christy Cabanne is directing this production from an original script by Carey Wilson at the United States Naval academy at Annapolis.

Young Barry has decided definitely on the career of a naval officer and immediately on completing work in this picture will prepare for entrance to Annapolis. Wesley's decision was sealed upon the receipt of a message from his mother, who resides in Los Angeles, Cal. She indorsed the boy's plan unequivocally and urged him to return home for a parting visit before beginning his studies.

Wesley's ambition bore fruit after a meeting with Commander Jones and Captain Cook, of the Naval academy, both of whom have been assigned by the bureau of navigation to assist Director William Christy Cabanne with this production.

William J. Kelly has learned the secret of how to keep busy in pictures, for his able character actor is now delivering a hard-boiled detective in "Trouble With Wives" which Mal St. Clair is directing for Paramount. This is his fourth appearance on the Paramount program. The new role is said to be an important one.

Brilliant Affair Will Mark Opening of Druid Hills Club

The opening of the new Druid Hills Golf club Wednesday evening, July 1, will assemble society at a dinner-dance which will precede the annual business meeting. The tables will be placed on the picturesque terrace which overlooks the greenswards and famous golf links, with a fountain playing in the foreground while an attractive swimming pool is at the right. This club, which was burned more than a year ago, has always played an important part in the social life of Atlanta, for many brilliant entertainments have been given there and prominent people have crossed its hospitable portal. Ever since grand opera became a cultural institution in Atlanta, the barbecue given annually at the Druid Hills Golf club became an outstanding and enjoybale social feature of the week and attracts hundreds of Atlantans and the visitors attending the opera.

Dancing will take place in the beautiful ballroom, the walls decorated in seafoam green and the windows hung in canary-colored draperies, with a splendid orchestra playing inspiring fox-trot airs from "Lady, Be Good," "Rose Marie," "Sky High," "Louie Fourteenth," "Love Sing" and other famous New York musical comedies.

The new clubhouse has been built according to the same plans of the one which was burned, with every department elaborated upon, with handsome and appropriate furnishings reflecting artistic taste in every detail.

The officers include Dr. Thomas P. Hinman, president; Lowry Arnold, vice president; Henry W. Davis, treasurer; Forress B. Fisher, secretary. The directors are W. A. Fuller, G. F. Willis, J. Russell Porter, Jackson P. Dick, Alfred C. Newell, Lester L. Shivers, Sam P. Maddox, C. J. Holditch and Walter C. Colquitt, who with their wives, will assist Dr. and Mrs. Hinman, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold and Mr. and Mrs. Davis in receiving.

Many dinner parties are being arranged, with visitors and brides-elect as honor guests, and this occasion will be the initial social event of July, to be followed by a series of elaborate affairs given at the Druid Hills Golf club, which is reached by a motor trip through one of the prettiest sections of Atlanta.

Mrs. Paxon Honors Florida Visitor.

Mrs. Frederic J. Paxon was hostess at a luncheon at the Piedmont Driving club Saturday, in honor of her guest, Mrs. Lewis A. Morningstern, of St. Petersburg, Fla.

Garden flowers in the pastel shades decorated the elegantly appointed table. Twelve close friends were invited to meet the honor guest.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Brogdon will entertain Sunday afternoon in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Morningstern, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paxon. Tea will be served in the lovely gardens surrounding the home of the host and hostess on Huntington road.

Miss Floyd Gives Bridge Luncheon.

Miss Frances Floyd entertained at a bridge-luncheon Saturday at her home in Ansley Park.

Bowls and baskets of garden flowers were used in the reception rooms. The elegantly appointed table in the dining room held a silver basket of pink and blue larkspur and snapdragons.

Miss Floyd received her guests in a model of blue chiffon embroidered in pink roses.

She was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. James S. Floyd and Miss Nan Allen, of Buford. Mrs. Floyd wore a summer frock of green batiste and Miss Allen was lovely in a costume of orange chiffon.

Miss Scott Entertains Bridge Club.

Miss Clara Louise Scott entertained the members of her bridge club on Saturday afternoon, at her home on West Peachtree street. Special guests of honor on this occasion were Misses Sara and Elizabeth Bryan, the guests of Miss Elizabeth, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Richardson at their home on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Bright colored garden flowers lent an attractive decoration for the rooms where the game was played.

Those invited were Miss Martha Tomlinson, Miss Venice Mayson, Miss Ruth Crussell, Mrs. John Carter, of Birmingham, Ala., Miss Estell Lindsay, Miss Josephine Davis of St. Simons Island, Ga., Mrs. Joe Owens of Montgomery, Ala., Mrs. George Lester, Miss Marion Hull, Mrs. Frank Beall, Mrs. Jack Rutland, Mrs. Boykin Pennington, Mrs. Clem Evans and Mrs. Franklin Davis.

Mrs. Royer Is Hostess.

Mrs. William C. Royer entertained at an informal luncheon Saturday at the Biltmore hotel in compliment to Mrs. Henry Clay, of Americus, Ga., Miss Julia Anderson and Miss Eleanor Browder, of Montgomery, Ala.

Summer flowers in a large bowl adorned the beautifully appointed table, and covers were placed for ten guests.

Social Notes From Fort McPherson.

Decatur Fine Arts Opens Summer School.

The Decatur Fine Arts club opened its summer school with a delightful reception to the public, held Tuesday, June 16, from 5 to 7 o'clock at Glenwood auditorium.

The punch bowls were presided over by Mrs. E. H. Wilson, Mrs. R. B. Ridley, Mrs. Wiley Ansley and Mrs. Stephen Christie.

The members of the club and the executive board acted as hostesses, and the entire faculty of the school were present except Miss Van Hook.

The exhibition of paintings and sculpture was unusually worthwhile. There were beautiful oil portraits and sketches well executed by Thomas M. Delbridge, exquisite water colors by Wilbur Kurtz, many of which were of picturesque spots of Decatur and Atlanta, and fine sculpture by Miss Van Hook. Mrs. Hosmer's work was shown in beautiful batek silken hangings and Mrs. Proctor's in fruit and flower pieces.

A charming addition to the faculty is Miss Evelyn Lovett who teaches aesthetic dancing and dramatic expression. At 6 o'clock Miss Lovett delighted the guests with an exquisite program to exhibit her work, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Stephen Christie. The July program will include a one-act play to be presented by Miss Lovett, her pupils and other artists.

Though Wednesday was only registration day, the entire faculty were on hand and a large number of pupils busily at work by 9.30 a. m. Each instructor gives three critiesms a week in each subject and the terms of tuition are placed so low that the art school is available for all.

Summer Time Is Silver Pitcher Time

IN the summer time, when it is really hot, nothing is more inviting than a Silver Pitcher filled with water and ice. The frost on the outside makes the whole room seem cooler.

Silver pitchers cost something more than other pitchers, of course. But the first cost is the last. They never break; the older they are, the more attractive.

We are showing Sterling Silver Pitchers at a wide range of prices and in a complete variety of patterns.

Miss Martha Cook Weds Mr. Young at Church Ceremony

An event marked by beauty and simplicity was the marriage of Miss Martha Cook and Leonard Young, which took place Wednesday, June 17, at 6 o'clock at Grace Methodist church. Dr. S. R. Belk performed the ceremony. The church was beautifully decorated with palms and cut flowers. Placed on either side of the chancel rail were two large cathedral candelabra burning white tapers.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Ruth Ramsey sang "O Promise Me" and "Because." The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was used as the processional, and Mendelssohn's for the recessional.

The first to enter were the ushers, Gerald Jarrald and William A. Strange. The next to enter were Miss Angie Harding, bridesmaid, and Horace Ball, groomsman. They were followed by Mrs. R. W. Ray, bridesmaid, and Edwin Fincher, groomsman. Miss Florence Cook, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, and preceded the bride. Miss Angie Harding wore a lavender flowered chiffon over pink satin. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and lavender sweet peas tied with lavender ribbon. Her hat was a picture hat of lavender neapolitan straw. Mrs. R. W. Ray wore blue and yellow flowered chiffon over yellow satin. Her hat was of yellow neapolitan straw. She carried Ophelia roses and snapdragons tied with yellow tulle. Miss Florence Cook wore pink flowered chiffon over old rose satin. She wore a large picture hat of pink neapolitan straw trimmed in green velvet. Her bouquet was of pink roses showered with swainsona and tied with pink tulle.

The beautiful bride entered with her father, W. E. Cook, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his brother, Herbert Young, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., who acted as best man. She was gowned in a wedding gown of white georgette trimmed in silver over white satin. The wedding veil was confined to the soft hair of the bride by a half-circlet of orange blossoms, forming a high ruche effect of the tulle at the back of the head. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses, valley lilies and swainsona.

An informal reception followed the ceremony and the living room was artistically decorated in bridal wreaths and gladioli. Miss Sarah Young, sister of the groom; Miss Marie Chambliss and Miss Sarah Chambliss served punch.

Assisting in entertaining were Miss Thelma Ewing, Miss Lois Silas and Miss Nell Guest. Mrs. W. P. Dillin kept the bride's book.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Young left for a short trip to North Carolina. After June 22 they will be at home to their friends at 240 East Fifth street.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Young and Miss Sarah ? of Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Miss Kimbrough Weds Joseph Edmondson.

A marriage of much interest to a large circle of friends was that of Miss Evelyn Kimbrough, of Chipley, Georgia, and Joe Edmondson, Jr., of LaGrange, Ga., which was solemnized Wednesday afternoon, June 10, at 6:30 o'clock at the Methodist church in Chipley. The bride's pastor, Rev. W. W. Benson officiated.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The organ loft was banked with palms, in the center of which was a cathedral candelabra holding 17 shell pink candles. Graduating from this, as a center, there were stands of ferns and floor baskets of hydrangeas, gladioli and snapdragons. Floor baskets also filled with these same beautiful flowers and tied with tulle were used as an approach to the altar from each aisle.

Nuptial music was played by Mrs. P. L. Hopkins at the piano and Miss Sybil Strickland on the violin. Mrs. Grady Traylor sang "All For You" and "Because."

The first to enter were the ushers, Charles Pitman, O'Neal Kimbrough, J. D. Bolton and Tom Hutchinson. Then came the bridesmaids, Miss Margaret Edmondson, Miss Lillian Kimbrough, Miss Sarah Kimbrough and Miss Louise Williams, who wore different shades of georgette dresses, made with long tight waists and bouffant skirts, trimmed with French flowers and velvet ribbon in pastel shades. They carried bouquets of Killarney roses tied with pink tulle.

Following the maids came the groomsmen, who were Toombs Kimbrough, Kenneth Hayes, John Dodd and James Young.

Then came the matron of honor, Mrs. H. B. Kimbrough, the bride's mother, in orchid crepe de chine and lace, and the maid of honor, Miss Kathryne Kimbrough, sister of the bride, in blue georgette over satin, trimmed with French flowers and lace. Mrs. Kimbrough carried Ophelia roses showered with sweet peas, and Miss Kathryne Kimbrough carried Killarney roses.

Next came the flower girls, little Jane Miller and Frances Layfield, who wore pink silk net over pink satin and carried baskets of sweet peas tied with pink tulle.

Little Edwin Benson was ringbearer and wore a suit of white satin. The bride entered with her father, H. B. Kimbrough, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Cyrus Shearer.

The bride was radiantly lovely in her bridal gown of white satin, trimmed in pearls. Her veil of misty tulle was caught at the forehead with a bandeau of orange blossoms and at each side with a cluster of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of bride's roses and orchids, showered with valley lilies.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Edmondson left for a motor trip to points of interest in Florida. After their return they will be at home to their many friends in LaGrange.

Mrs. Edmondson is a young lady of charming personality and a popular member of the younger set.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Edmondson, of LaGrange, and is a popular young business man. He is now connected with Swift & Company.

Miss Bishop Honors Miss Garwood at Party.

Miss Sara Frances Bishop was hostess at a miscellaneous shower for Miss Pat Garwood, a charming bride-elect, on Saturday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock at her home in Inman Park.

Mrs. T. P. Atkinson gave several readings appropriate to the occasion, and the little Misses Hightower delighted the guests with powder-puff and French doll dances.

The spacious rooms where the guests were received were decorated with beautiful garden flowers. Throughout the afternoon the guests were delightfully entertained with music and a contest suggestive to the occasion was enjoyed by all, the prize being won by Mrs. Ramon Ruetraske.

The bride-elect and guests were invited on the back porch, improvised as a lawn with shrubery, blue grass and lawn chairs, where the bride-elect was shown many beautiful and useful gifts, and a delightful course was served.

Misses Catherine Garwood and Sara Frances Bishop presided at the punch bowl.

Miss Bishop was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. Thomas L. Bishop.

Those invited were Miss Eunice Johnson, Misses Mary and Tres Bird, Miss Catherine Garwood, Miss Gladys Awtry, Miss Ruth Cary, Miss Cornelia Cagle, Miss Margaret Garwood, Miss Grace Lanford, Misses Mildred and Sara Garwood, Misses Mary and Martha Hightower, Mrs. J. S. Darlington, Mrs. Ramon Ruthoske, Mrs. Bill Williams, Mrs. L. L. McMullan, Jonesboro, Ga.; Mrs. Joseph Mills, Mrs. D. W. Jones, Thomasville, Ga.; Mrs. F. W. DuPree, Mrs. H. H. Nall, Mrs. Ralph Sprayberry, Mrs. S. A. Garwood, and Mrs. T. P. Atkinson.

Miss Sneade Alston Weds Mr. Kelley.

Griffin, June 20.—Characterized by great beauty and dignity the wedding of Miss Sneade Alston and Marion Foy Kelley was solemnized at the First Baptist church Tuesday at high noon, in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of relatives and friends, the Rev. Leon M. Latimer officiating.

The altar was banked with ferns with candles in cathedral candlesticks glimmering through the greenery. In the center of the beautiful bank of ferns were two tall pedestal baskets of pink gladioli and ferns. On either side were two other large baskets filled with the same beautiful flowers, the long handles tied with punk tulle. Forming a background for the exquisite decorations were handsome growing palms.

Miss Thelma Brisendine presided at the organ. Mrs. J. P. Mason sang "At Dawning," after which Miss Brisendine played Guilmant's "Sonata." Mrs. Mason "Bless You" immediately before the bridal party entered, and Miss Brisendine played the wedding march from Lohengrin to herald their entrance, and played "To a Wild Rose" softly during the ceremony. Mendelssohn's wedding march was the recessional.

The ushers, C. W. Slaton, Paul Slaton, W. C. Jackson and Steve Wallace, entered first, followed by the bridesmaid, Miss Marion Hewlett Kelley, niece of the groom, and the groomsman, Burton Slade, Jr.

The maid of honor, Miss Rubye Alston, sister of the bride, entered alone. Her lovely pink and orchid flowered chiffon dress was worn over an orchid slip and was trimmed in lace and small flowers. Her hat was fashioned of white leghorn, lace and flowers.

Miss Dunham was wearing pink flowered georgette over a pink slip trimmed in lace. Her large picture hat of Neapolitan straw was trimmed in pastel flowers. They both carried arm bouquets of pink gladioli tied with pink tulle.

The little ring bearers, Will Best Plowden and Doris Pickering, entered immediately preceding the bride. Little Miss Pickering wore white georgette trimmed in rows of ribbon, and carried the ring in the heart of a calla lily. Master Plowden wore a white satin suit.

The two little flower girls, Evelyn Allen and Frances Richardson, both of Macon, were dressed alike in pink georgette trimmed in lace and carried French baskets filled with small ping flowers.

The bride entered with her brother, W. L. Richardson, of Macon, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Jack Fry, of Atlanta.

The bride was beautiful in her ensemble suit of French blue charmeen trmimed in white fur and worn over Georgette trimmed in long tucks with a jabot of white georgette. Her hat was of French blue felt and her flowers were bride's roses and valley lilies.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Kelley left for their wedding trip to Washington, D. C., New York and other points in the east, and on their return will make their home in Griffin.

Miss Fisk Weds William E. Popejoy.

Huntsville, Ala., June 20.—(Special.)—Miss Mae Lorena Fisk and William E. Popejoy were married Sunday at the home of Rev. and Mrs. H. E. Rice, near New Market, in the presence of a small company of relatives and intimate friends. Rev. H. E. Rice performed the ceremony. The couple left immediately on a honeymoon trip to Chattanooga and other cities.

Miss Richards Weds Mr. Bishop at Church Ceremony

A very impressive wedding was that of Weston Mallalieu Bishop and Miss Eddie Lee Richards, which was solemnized on Tuesday, June 2, at 6:30 o'clock. The marriage taking place at the Mount Zion Methodist church, Rev. W. G. Clinton, from Ponce de Leon Methodist church, Atlanta, officiating. Preceding the ceremony Miss Myrl Smith, of Carrollton, gave two piano selections and Mrs. M. L. Johnson, of Bowdon, sang Cadman's "At Dawning" and "For You," accompanied by Miss Smith.

To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, the ushers, Horry Buckelew, of Chattanooga, and Selma Parrish, of Mount Zion, took their places to one side above the chancel rail. The matron of honor, Mrs. Ray M. Earnest, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaid, Miss Charlsie Cole, of Carrollton, entered together and stood opposite the ushers. Next came little Miss Beverly Brown, of Carrollton, who carried the ring in a white lily, and little Miss Laura Jean McCain, of Atlanta, who was the flower girl. The bride entered on the arm of her brother, Cole Richards, by whom she was given in marriage. She was lovely in a gown of white satin-back crepe trimmed with Venise lace and rhinestone ornament, a tulle veil held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms, and carried a huge bouquet of cream bride's roses. They were met at the altar by the groom and best man, Rev. John A. King, of Rossville.

The church was artistically decorated in ferns, smilax and shasta daisies.

Mrs. Ray M. Earnest, matron of honor, wore a stylish model of rust-colored crepe de chine, trimmed in rhinestones, and carried a shower bouquet of vari-colored sweet peas. Miss Charlsie Cole, the bridesmaid, was beautifully gowned in a lace-trimmed gown of powder-blue georgette and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bride's mother, Mrs. J. G. Buckalew, was stylishly groomed in a gown of black charmeuse trimmed with tan brocaded satin.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents which included about fifty guests. A dainty course of pink and white cake and cream was served. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Bishop left for Atlanta and later for a short tour in the mountains of Tennessee. The young couple will reside in Atlanta, where Mr. Bishop is employed in the Atlanta & Lowry National bank.

The bride and groom are both graduates of Mount Zion seminary. Mr. Bishop is also a graduate of Bowdon college and is president of the Atlanta district Epworth leagues. The good wishes of a host of friends go with the young couple.

Among the out-of-town guests present at the ceremony were: Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Hansard, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Cole and son, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Earnest, Mrs. W. P. Cole, Miss Belva Cole, Paul Brown and little daughter, Beverly, Mrs. W. L. Smith, Misses Ruth and Myrl Smith, all of Carrollton; Cole Richards, of Atlanta; Rev. John A. King, of Rossville; Horry Buckelew, of Chattanooga; Mrs. George N. McCain and little daughter, Laura Jean, Miss Charlsie Cole, of Atlanta, and Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Johnson, of Bowdon.

Lovely Ceremony Marks Wedding Of Miss Stahl and Mr. Alexander

A wedding of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends marked by beauty and simplicity was that of Miss Berea Louise Stahl and William Dewitt Alexander, which were solemnized Saturday afternoon, at three o'clock at the home of the bride's mother on Juniper street.

Dr. Sprole Lyons, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a group of close friends and relatives.

The apartments were artistically decorated with pink gladioli and sweet peas in the Dresden shades.

The ceremony was performed before an improvised altar of palms and ferns.

Miss Theodosia Beckham was the bride's only attendant. She wore a gown of peach georgette with a large graceful neapolitan straw hat of the same shade and wore a corsage of yellow rosebuds.

Cortland S. Winn, Jr., acted as Mr. Alexander's best man.

Lovely Bride.

The bride entered with her mother, Mrs. Robert Philip Stahl, who gave her in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man.

She was exquisitely lovely in her wedding gown, a French model of powder blue georgette over pink satin trimmed in self-colored lace and she wore a beautiful lace trimmed picture hat of powder blue, with a silver ribbon and rhinestone ornament. Her corsage was of pink rose buds and valley lilies in shower effect.

Mrs. Stahl, mother of the bride, wore a charming Parisian model of white georgette with a corsage of pink rosebuds.

The groom's mother, Mrs. Alexander, wore orchid georgette with hat to match.

Prominent Family.

The bride, who is a young girl of rare beauty, is the daughter of Mrs. Robert Philip Stahl and the late Robert Philip Stahl who was vice president of the Davis Freeman Jewelry firm, and was prominent in business, club, and fraternal circles of Atlanta for many years.

She is the granddaughter of Rev. Philip Stahl of New York city, and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Desem of Cleveland, Ohio. Mrs. Stahl has been prominent in D. A. R. activities and is descended from a long line of distinguished Revolutionary ancestors.

She received her education at Washington Seminary and as a young girl spent a year abroad attending school at Neuilly, France.

Mr. Alexander is the eldest son of Mrs. W. D. Alexander and the late W. D. Alexander, who held an official position with the White Motor Corporation. He attended the Georgia Military Academy, later finishing at North Western Military and Naval Academy in Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander left immediately after the ceremony for a southern resort and after July first will be at home in the Langdon Court apartments.

Miss Holloman Weds Mr. Alford.

Athens, Ga., June 20.—Interesting to a wide circle of friends was the wedding of Miss Olive Holloman and Guy Alford, of Swainsboro, solemnized on Thursday afternoon, June 11, at 3:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. N. G. Clements, on Hancock avenue.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. J. C. Wilkinson, pastor of the First Baptist church, and the wedding music rendered by Miss Penelope Griffin. "I Love You Truly" was sung by Marion Stokes just preceding the entrance of the bridal party.

Miss Annie Holloman, wearing rosewood beaded crepe and carrying pink roses and sweet peas, was maid-of-honor; Mrs. N. G. Clements, matron-of-honor, wore powder-blue crepe embellished with small tucks and lace. She carried roses and sweetpeas in shades of pink.

The bride's gown was a beautiful combination of blond satin and georgette crepe fashioned in an ensemble, with accessories to match. She carried bride's roses and sweet peas.

Dolan Brown was the groom's best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Alford left for a wedding trip before going to Swainsboro, where Mr. Alford is engaged in the practice of law with Judge Bradley.

Stone-Rippey Wedding Plans Of Prominent Social Interest

Cordial and widespread interest centers in the approaching marriage of Miss Donna Cappi Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fenn Orietson Stone, and Thrusher Ames Rippey, Jr., formerly of Los Angeles, Calif., now of Atlanta. The wedding will be a brilliant event, taking place on the evening of June 30. The ceremony will be performed by the Reverend Ashby Jones, pastor of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, in the sunken garden on the beautiful grounds at "Paradiso," the home of the bride's parents in Druid Hills.

Miss Stone will be given in marriage by her father, and her attendants will be maid of honor, Miss Zetta Rippey, of Los Angeles, Calif, sister of the groom; matrons of honor, Mrs. Frederick Starke, of Hillsdale, Mich., cousin of the bride, and Mrs. George Denton, of Boston, Mass., cousin of the groom.

The bridesmaids will be Miss Beatrice Kirby and Miss Marjorie Kirby, of Somerville, N. J.; Miss Sarah Thompson, of Dallas, Texas; Miss Joyce Godfrey, of Jonesville, Mich., cousin of the bride; Miss Josephine McKercher, of Cleveland, Ohio, cousin of the bride, and Miss Eugenia Litchfield, of Brookline, Mass., cousin of the groom.

The little flower girls will be Miss Virginia Snow, of Atlanta, and Miss Lucia Bellinger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Bellinger, of Lakemont, Ga.; the train-bearer will be the little cousin of the bride, Master Jack Lewis, of Birmingham, Ala.

Mr. Rippey's best man will be his brother, Stanton Rippey, of Los Angeles, Calif. The groomsmen will be O. E. Fifield, formerly of Boston; Esmonde Brady, William Parker, Emory Cooke, John Slaton, Jr., all of Atlanta, and John T. Cochran, Jr., of Sulton, Miss.

The ushers will be Robert C. Alston, Brooks Morgan, Frederick J. Paxon, Henry Quillian, F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, all of Atlanta, and Irving C. Woodward, of Syracuse, N. Y., and George Denton, of Boston, Mass.

After the wedding ceremony an elaborate al fresco reception and bridal supper will be given. A musical program will be rendered throughout the evening.

A large number of out-of-town guests, including relatives and friends will be present; among them Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Rippey, Sr., of Los Angeles, Calif, father and mother of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick O. Litchfield and Everett Litchfield, of Brookline, Mass., relatives of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Morris, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Lockwood, Cincinnati, Mr. and Mrs. Albert P. Strietmann, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Sterns, of Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. B. A. Ligon, of Cleveland, Ohio, the bride's aunt; Mrs. William Thompson, of Dallas, Texas, and Mrs. William J. Kirby, of Somerville, N. J.

The young people will leave on a trip in their Lincoln-Judkins car, the gift of the bride's parents. They will be gone about two months, and some of the time will be spent at the summer home of the groom's uncle on New Found lake in New Hampshire.

Many pre-nuptial parties will be given in honor of Miss Stone: On Saturday afternoon, June 20, Mrs. F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson gave a tea at the Biltmore in honor of Miss Stone.

On Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, June 22, Mrs. Frank Chalmers will entertain Miss Stone at a bridge-tea given at her home in Peachtree Hills.

Mrs. James W. Speas will entertain on Thursday afternoon, June 25, at a swimming party and luncheon at the Brookhaven Country club.

Mrs. Rhodes Maverty will honor Miss Stone with a luncheon at her home 595 West Peachtree street.

Mrs. W. W. Banks will give an elaborate afternoon tea in her honor on Friday afternoon, June 26, at the Piedmont Driving club.

Saturday afternoon the 27, Mrs. W. C. Jarnigan and Miss Erskine Jarnigan will entertain at a bridge-tea at the Piedmont Driving club for Miss Stone.

Saturday evening, June 27, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Paxon will entertain for Miss Stone and Mr. Rippey at a dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club.

Monday afternoon, June 29, a wedding rehearsal will be held, followed by an al fresco supper and dance for the entire bridal party and out-of-town guests, given by Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Stone at their home, "Paradiso."

Leftwich-Tomlinson Wedding Plans Announced Today

Widespread interest throughout Georgia and Tennessee centers in the marriage of Miss Anna Belle Leftwich, of Decatur, and Frank Tomlinson, of Cleveland, Ohio, formerly of Chattanooga, Tenn.

The wedding will be solemnized June 30 at 7 o'clock at the First Methodist church in Decatur, Ga.

Miss Lois Brand, of Royston, Ga., and Miss Frances Minor, of Atlanta will be bridesmaids. The bride's only sister, Miss Irene Leftwich, will act as maid of honor and Frank Terrell, of Atlanta will act as best man. The groomsmen will be Raiford Watkins and Warren Jackson, both of Decatur. The flower girls will be little Misses Lottie Tucker, of Hamlet, N. C., and Elise Bonebrake, of Atlanta. Those acting as ushers will be Frank Philips, of Decatur, and Jack Hartmann, of Cleveland, Ohio.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Leftwich, of Decatur. She finished her education at Wesleyan college, Macon Ga., and for the past two years has been teaching in the primary department of Emory university elementary school.

Mr. Tomlinson is the younger son of Rev. and Mrs. A. M. Tomlinson, of Chattanooga, Tenn. He is now connected with the Nickel Plate road in Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Calhoun Weds L. J. Cox.

An event of interest to a large circle of friends was the marriage at noon Sunday, June 14, at the Central Presbyterian church, of Miss Louise Calhoun and Leon J. Cox.

The maid of honor was Miss Alpha Calhoun, twin sister of the bride, and "Ac" Wright was the best man. The ring ceremony was impressively performed by Dr. B. R. Lacy, Jr.

The blonde beauty of the bride was enhanced by the lovely dress of turquoise blue satin, artistically draped with gold lace and the charming Navarette hat had a band of gold entwined with lace and coral roses. Her corsage bouquet was of coral roses and valley lilies, and she wore a strand of pearls, a gift of the groom.

After the ceremony the bridal party was entertained at a luncheon at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. M. B. Calhoun, 158 Peachtree circle.

During the afternoon the bride and groom left for a motor trip to the seashore. On their return they will have an apartment at 37 Crescent avenue, the home of the groom's mother, Mrs. Lena H. Cox.

The bride is a lineal descendant of John C. Calhoun, one of the greatest American statesmen. Her only brother bears the name of this illustrious ancestor.

The groom is the youngest son of the lamented Rev. Thomas J. Cox, formerly a prominent Batist minister of middle Georgia. He is a graduate of Georgia Military academy, was later a student at the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., and now holds a responsible position with the Southern Bell Telephone company.

Miss Ruth Norris Weds Mr. Blackwell.

A marriage of widespread interest and unusual beauty was that of Miss Ruth Norris and William Harold Blackwell, which was solemnized Thursday evening at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Eugenia Jordan Norris, on Westwood avenue.

The impressive ring ceremony was performed by Rev. S. R. Belk, of Grace Methodist church, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

The home was beautifully decorated with palms, bamboo and pink gladioli and snapdragon. The altar was improvised in the living room before the fireplace, palms and pedestal baskets of gladioli being used most effectively. Cathedral candelabra holding burning tapers shed a soft glow over the assemblage.

A charming feature was the solos rendered by Mrs. Hugh Sawyer, who sang "That's Why" and "At Dawning." She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Marion Holt, who played the Lohengrin wedding march, and during the ceremony "To a Wild Rose" in an undertone.

Entering first came Miss Genie Claire Norris, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, wearing a gown of apple green and silver chiffon. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. Following her came the flower girls, little Misses Mildred Davidson and Dorothy Norris, nieces of the bride, wearing dainty frocks of pink georgette and cream lace and carrying old-fashioned bouquets in arm baskets.

The bride entered on the arm of her brother, H. C. Norris, who gave her in marriage. She was radiant in her wedding gown of white satin made basque effect, the full skirt gracefully draped with Chantilly lace and finished with pearls and crystals in distinctive design. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, a gift of the groom. Completing the costume was the bouquet of bride roses showered with swansonia.

The groom was attended by his brother, Leslie Blackwell.

After the ceremony an informal reception was held, Miss Ruth Norris, of Thomson, Ga., cousin of the bride, and Miss Kathleen Harrell presiding at the punch bowls which were placed in bowers of palms upon the wide veranda.

The bride's going-away costume was a charming ensemble of black satin and lacquer red flat crepe, completed by a smart felt hat with a touch of red.

Mrs. Norris, mother of the bride, wore a handsome gown of navy blue georgette over flesh-colored satin, wearing a corsage of sweetheart roses.

Mrs. C. E. Blackwell, mother of the groom, wore a smart costume of poudre blue georgette with hat to match, and a corsage of pink roses.

Mrs. F. K. Ferguson, sister of the bride, wore a distinctive model of gray chiffon with corsage of pink sweetpeas.

Mrs. T. G. Coleman, of Columbus, wore rose flat crepe trimmed with heavy cream lace with corsage of Ophelia roses.

Mrs. N. C. Putnam, of Central City, Ky., aunt of the groom, was lovely in a French blue costume with like accessories.

The bride is a young lady of most charming personality and has endeared herself to a large circle of friends by her sweet and gracious disposition.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Blackwell, of Atlanta, formerly of Kentucky, and is well known in business and social circles. He is a graduate of Bowling Green, Ky., institute and the Atlanta College of Pharmacy.

After the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Blackwell will be at home at 975 North Boulevard.

Among the out-of-town guests were E. J. Norris and Miss Ellen Norris, of Savannah; Miss Ruth Norris, of Thomson, Ga.; Mrs. N. C. Putnam, of Central City, Ky.; Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Coleman and H. L. Miller, of Columbus, Ga.

Mrs. Carmichael Weds Dr. Fletcher T. Mixon At East Point

A marriage of cordial interest to many friends was that of Mrs. Ethel Carmichael and Dr. Fletcher T. Mixon, which was solemnized Tuesday afternoon, June 14, at 5 o'clock, at the home of the bride, 400 North Church street.

Only relatives and a few close friends witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. E. W. Jones, pastor of the East Point Southern Methodist church.

The bride wore a becoming dress of dark-blue crepe Romaine with a corsage bouquet of sweetpeas.

Dr. and Mrs. Mixon are at home at 400 North Church street, East Point.

Miss Coker Weds James E. Hays.

A pretty wedding of Saturday evening was that of Miss Parnelle Coker and James Elmore Hays, of New York city, which took place at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. N. J. Coker. The impressive ring ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Moody, pastor of the First Baptist church, in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

Palms, ferns, and bright-hued flowers were attractively used as decorations throughout the reception rooms of the home. The chandeliers and doorways were festooned with southern smilax. The altar, arranged in the music room, was banked with massive palms and ferns. Placed in relief were tall pedestal baskets of white gladioli alternating with seven-branched cathedral candelabra holding long, white burning tapers.

First to enter were the matrons of honor, Mrs. H. G. Phillips of Atlanta, sister of the bride and Mrs. E. E. Alexander of Decatur, sister of the groom. They wore gowns of georgette fashioned along straight lines, Mrs. Phillips wearing yellow and Mrs. Alexander peach-colored georgette. They carried old-fashioned, showered bouquets of pastel shades.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Robert P. Crowther of Anderson, S. C., and Miss Mary Trammell of Atlanta. Their flowers were duplicates of those carried by the matrons. Mrs. Crowther wore orchid georgette and Miss Trammell nile green georgette.

Miss Betty Coker acted as her sister's maid of honor. She wore a becoming gown of blue georgette. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of pink roses, showered.

Little Miss Katherine Thomason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Thomason of Canton, was flower girl. She wore a pretty dress of pink georgette and carried a Dutch bouquet of pastel shaded flowers.

The ring-bearer was little Mary Coker, niece of the bride. She wore a dainty frock of chiffon ruffles over crepe. She carried the ring in a hand-painted satin rose.

The ribbon-bearers were Master Tom Schwalm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Schwalm of Decatur, and Master Jeff Brooke, son of Dr. and Mrs. G. C. Brooke of Canton, who wore white satin suits.

The bride entered with her father, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, William Thomas of Atlanta. The bride was lovely in her wedding gown of duchess satin, which was embroidered in pearls and rhinestones. Her soft bridal veil of tulle was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of brides-roses, showered with swansonia and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony, Dr. and Mrs. Coker entertained at a reception. They were assisted in entertaining by Dr. and Mrs. G. N. Coker.

Mrs Coker, mother of the bride, was a lovely figure wearing a gown of silver-blue crepe trimmed with cream lace. Completing her costume was a corsage of pastel shades.

Mrs. Hays, mother of the groom, wore a handsome dress of black satin crepe, hand embroidered. Her corsage was of sweet peas.

Miss Mary Beeler of Louisville, Ky., kept the bride's book and was lovely in a frock of pink crepe.

Serving punch were Misses Marjorie and Elizabeth Johnston, Misses Virginia and Maria Doss, Miss Mary Lee Johnston and Miss Susie Jones.

During the evening Mr. Hays and his bride left for a wedding trip, after which they will go to make their home in New York city.

Mrs. Hays wore an ensemble traveling costume of nut-brown charmeen, combined with crepe. Her hat was a small model to match.

Miss Jones Weds Mr. Schmalaach.

Athens, Ga., June 20.—The wedding of Miss Birdie Mae Jones and Charles Louis Schmalaach, of Atlanta and St. Louis, was an event of cordial interest, taking place at high noon on Saturday, June 6, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Jones, on Cobb street.

Miss Bertha Kate Davison played the wedding march from Lohengrin and the bride and groom entered the living room together where the ceremony was performed by Dr. J. J. Bennett, pastor of the Prince Avenue Baptist church, officiated and the guests included only the families and a few close friends.

An altar of palms, foliage plants and trailing smilax was formed at one end of the room, flanked by floor baskets filled with stately white lilies, and pedestals on which stood silver candelabra, holding white cathedral candles.

The bride wore an ensemble costume of blonde crepe and georgette combined. She wore a corsage of pink rosebuds.

Mrs. Schmalaach is an only daughter. She was educated at Lucy Cobb institute and is a young woman of rare personal charm. She has been the center of an admiring group of friends since early childhood.

Mr. Schmalaach is a graduate of the University of Illinois and is well-entrenched in the business world. Following a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Schmalaach will make their home at College Park.

Mrs. Charles Simon Honors Bridal Party.

Mrs. Charles H. Simon entertained at a buffet supper Saturday evening, following the wedding rehearsal of Miss Dorothy Simon and Herbert Nachman, whose marriage will take place this afternoon.

The guests included the members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests.

Miss Statham Weds Mr. Lester.

Rockmart, Ga., June 20.—The marriage of Miss Mary Lou Statham and Loy Meek Lester was solemnized May 31. Rev. J. S. Garner performed the ceremony.

Mrs. Lester is a lovely daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Statham and possesses a pleasing personality. She is also very talented.

Miss Wood To Wed William P. Davis.

The marriage of Miss Jewell Wood, of Menlo, Ga., and William P. Davis, Wilmington, N. C., will be solemnized at the home of the bride-elect at 5 o'clock June 23.

On account of a recent bereavement in the groom's family, only the families of the bride and groom and intimate friends will be invited.

Lovely Bride-Elect

Miss Elsie Kuhlman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Kuhlman, whose engagement to Carl John Bliem was recently announced.

Miss Martyn Weds Clifford C. Gibbs.

A pretty affair was the marriage of Miss Rubye Martyn to Clifford C. Gibbs, which was solemnized by Rev. J. F. Eden at the home of Mrs. Florence D'Hollosy, 255 Barnett street, Druid Hills, Tuesday, June 16, at 6 o'clock in the evening in the presence of relatives and a few close friends.

Mrs. Gibbs is the sister of Mr. and Mrs. Robret Hawkins, of Cochran, Ga. She attended A. & M. college at Barnesville, where she graduated. By her winning personality she has endeared herself to numerous friends. She wore a dress of white crepe, lace trimmed, wtih hat to match. Her corsage of sweetpeas enhanced the beauty of her lovely costume.

Mr. Gibbs is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gibbs, of Lovejoy, and a prosperous young man. He holds a responsible position with M. Rich & Bros. company.

They left immediately after the ceremony for a wedding trip to Savannah, Tybee island and other points of interest. They will be at home to their friends at 253 Barnett street after July 1.

Miss Hilda Meadow Weds Mr. Tilton.

Athens, Ga., June 19.—Mrs. David W. Meadow, of Athens, announces the marriage of her daughter, Hilda, to Albert Chase Tilton, on Wednesday, June 3, in Miami, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Tilton are making their home in the Granada apartments on West Peachtree street, Atlanta.

Many Atlantans Are Featured In Asheville's Social Life

Asheville, N. C., June 20.—The championship tournament of the Southern Golf association in Asheville during the past week formally launched the summer social season as well as the resort city's fall program of sporting events. During the coming week the chamber of commerce will sponsor special water sports with Aileen Riggin and several other Olympic swimmers taking part.

Prominent visitors from many southern cities have arrived for their vacations. Among those from Atlanta are Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Gately, Mr. and Mrs. Rankin Manley and Mr. and Mrs. George Brine, who are at Grove Park Inn.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard P. Conway motored from Charlotte during the week and spent several days at the inn. Other prominent guests at the same hotel from Charlotte are Mr. and Mrs. John Scott, Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Galloway, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Alexander, as are also Mr. and Mrs. Claud Smith, of New York, formerly of Greenville, S. C., who are building a home in Biltmore Forest.

Memphis visitors at the inn, who have many friends in Atlanta, are Mrs. Martins J. Condon and her daughter, Mrs. G. H. Spiegner.

Dr. Edwin Mims, of Vanderbilt university, is a distinguished guest at the inn from Nashville.

Mrs. L. W. Grove, Mrs. Rhodes Haverty and Miss Katherine Haverty arrived Friday for a week at Grove Park Inn

John K. Ottley is spending the week-end at Grove Park Inn.

Miss Withers Honors Lovely Bride-Elect.

A lovely affair of Saturday was the bridge-tea at which Miss Evelyn Withers entertained at her home on Avon avenue in honor of Miss Mary Jane McGinnis, a bride-elect.

The rooms were attractive with garden flowers in shades of green, yellow and lavender. The score cards were hand painted in the same lovely shades and a tiny shoulder bouquet of cut flowers was at the place of each guest.

The cakes and ices were molded in attractive shapes, and tea was served at the individual tables. The punch table was decorated with southern smilax and garden flowers. The prizes were dainty French novelties and the guest of honor was presented with a hand embroidered handkerchief case.

Miss Withers was assisted in entertaining by her mother, Mrs. J. B. Withers, and her sisters, Mrs. Barnes Johnson and Mrs. Lloyd Bellamy.

Miss McGinnis was gowned in a lovely model of Delph blue georgette, and Miss Withers' frock was of white crepe de chine. Sixteen guests were invited for this enjoyable occasion.

Miss Rosasco Weds John H. Chalenor.

The wedding of Miss Nina Rosasco and John Hanger Chalenor took place in San Francisco Saturday, June 20, at noon.

They left at once on an automobile tour of the state and will arrive in Los Angeles, their future home, on July 5, where they have taken an apartment on North Kenmore avenue.

Miss Cathcart Is Honored.

Miss Jeannette Cathcart, whose marriage to James B. Bailey will be an interesting event of June 30, is being honored at a series of lovely parties.

Mrs. J. H. Mayes was hostess at a matinee party Thursday. The guests included Miss Jeannette Cathcart, Miss Mildred Ligon, Miss Byron Brook, Mrs. Oakley H. Cannon, Mrs. Hubert Shroeder and Mrs. J. H. Mayes.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Shroeder honored Miss Catheart and Mr. Bailey at a theater party and dinner on Saturday, June 20. The guests included Miss Catheart and Mr. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Mayes, Mr. and Mrs. George Bush, Mr. and Mrs. Oakley H. Cannon, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Herndon, Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Shroeder.

Miss Mildred Ligon will honor Miss Catheart Wednesday, June 24, at a seated luncheon. Mrs. Nellie Brown Jones, of St. Louis, will share honors with Miss Catheart. The guests will include several intimate friends of the honored guests.

Miss Ila Stanton Weds Edgar Rawls.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stanton, of North Augusta, announce the marriage of their daughter, Ila, to W. Edgar Rawls, of Aiken, S. C., which took place June 12 at the Grace Methodist church, North Augusta, Rev. T. C. O'Dell officiating.

Atlanta Sub-Debs Are Entertained At House Party

An attractive group of Atlanta sub-debs including Misses Julia Meador, Cornelia Orme, Laura Hoke, Sarah Adair, Marion Bryan and Jacquelin Moore are spending the week in Moultrie as the house party guests of Miss Mary Vereen, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Vereen. Thes young girls are being very extensively entertained while in Moultrie.

Miss Vereen's prom party on Tuesday evening was given at her home Southern Terrace, and throughout the house bright garden flowers were used and the beautiful lawn was attractively lighted, the glow from the Japanese shades used on the lights in the summer house completing a lovely setting for the hundreds of boys and girls from the high school set who assembled for the occasion.

Misses Freddie and Stella McDowell entertained Wednesday morning with a bridge-luncheon in honor of the house party guests and Wednesday afternoon they were complimented with a picture show party, at which Miss Louise Farley was hostess, and Wednesday evening Mrs. W. J. Vereen entertained them at a swimming party at the Country club, which was followed by a buffet supper, at which Mrs. R. A. Stratford entertained at her home on Southern Terrace. Thursday morning Mrs. J. E. Holmes was hostess at bridge for the house party members, and Thursday Miss Aldine Heard was hostess at a party in their honor at the Country club.

Dr. W. F. Melton Elected President of Writers' Club

The Atlanta Writers' club had its last meeting of the summer at the Ansley hotel on Friday evening. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Dr. W. F. Melton, president; Arthur H. Codington, first vice president; T. G. Hosmer, second vice president; Mrs. Ben Hill, third vice president; Miss Jessie Hopkins, secretary; Mrs. Dudley Cowles, treasurer.

The club members gave a rising vote of thanks to James B. Nevin, retiring president, for the splendid service which he has rendered the club during his term of office. Doctor Melton, on accepting the presidency, said: "All of you have heard the old saying, 'I had rather be right than president,' but I would like to say that I had rather write than be president." It was the general opinion among members of the club that the personnel of the officers elected presage another splendid year of achievement of the Writers' club.

Mr. Nevin announced the very gracious offer of Tim Thornton to print a booklet of from 12 to 15 of the manuscripts showing a marked degree of merit, which have been read before the club during the past year. The prize-winning manuscripts, which will be passed upon at the October meeting of the club, will be included in this collection. Mr. Thornton has generously requested that he be allowed to assume the financial responsibility of this work, a courtesy which was greatly appreciated by the members of the Writers' club.

The program of the evening was devoted to the reading of original manuscripts by members of the club. Miss Helen Thompson, guest of honor, read some of her poems, which showed a rare degree of merit. "The Alien," a serious sketch by Mrs. Warthan Evans, and "Contentment," a poem by Miss Anna Thurman, were read by Mrs. Ben Lee Crew.

"Waiting," a poem by Mrs. Ben Hill; "The Spanish Shawl," a poem by Daniel Whitehead Hicky, and "Ella Bet," a short story by Dr. Wightman F. Melton, were read by Mrs. Wesley Peacock.

"Chain the Dog," a skit by Mrs. Robert Blackburn, was read by Mrs. J. A. Watson, Jr. "Heroines of Fiction," by Mrs. C. Gainer Turner; "Charge of the Light-Headed Jade," by Arthur Codington, were read by Mrs. Turner.

Mrs. Lillyan Huntley Harris read excerpts from her play, "For Love of Illyrhia," which was produced at the Atlanta Woman's club recently.

Arthur Codington read a brief part of the opening chapter of "On the Throw of a Die," from a historical novel. "For the Honor of the Waynes," by Mrs. Margaret S. Underwood, a member of the Writers' club. The members of the club were very much impressed with the picturesque and dramatic manner in which this opening chapter was written.

One of the most delightful features of the entertainment was the Scotch songs sung by John McCrindle, popular singer of the Burns club, who was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. W. C. Carsley.

After the program was rendered a vote was taken to decide upon the manuscripts eligible for the prize contest award of next October. The following were given highest votes: Serious poem, "Waiting," by Mrs. Ben Hill, received the highest number of votes among the serious poems. "Contentment," a serious poem by Miss Anna Thurman, received the second highest number of votes. "Heroines of Fiction," light verse, by Mrs. C. Gainer Turner, received the highest number of votes. "The Charge of the Light Headed Jade," by Arthur Codington, received the second highest number.

There being only one serious sketch, one light sketch, and one short story, a vote could not be taken on these; however, they will receive consideration by the judges when the final vote is taken.

This is the second time that Mrs. Ben Hill's poems have won the highest number of votes. At a previous meeting her poem entitled, "Last Night I Dreamed of You," received the highest number of votes.

Realizing that every club, to build permanently, must build for the future, the Atlanta Writers' club had as their guests at the Friday evening dinner, Miss Helen Thompson, a graduate of Girls' High, and class poet of 1925, and Eaton Hill, a graduate of Boys' High, and class poet of the class of 1925.

Miss Thompson read a selection from her poems before the Writers' club. They possess merit to a remarkable degree for one so young, and occasional rare lusters gleam through her work.

Miss Thompson has been a writer practically all her life, beginning at the age of six when she first entered the Fraser Street school, now the James L. Key. During her years at grammar school she continued to write poetry and the merit of her work was recognized by her teachers.

During her freshman year at Girls' High she was admitted to the School Writers' club on the merit of a collection of poems which she had written and compiled. Later, when the "Mallonian," the Girls' High school magazine, was published the Writers' club gave place to the Mallonian as the school literary institution. Miss Thompson contributed regularly to this publication, and in her senior year was elected literary editor. She wrote the senior class poem for 1925, was also toastmistress, writing her speech, the introductions, etc., in poetry. She will attend Agnes Scott college this fall, but in the meantime is preparing a volume of poems for publication. We predict for her a brilliant future.

Ruth goes Shopping

Ruth Goes Shopping For the Summer Hostess.

JUNE days, filled with parties, teas, showers; long June evenings with their dinners and dances—How they tax the resources of the most experienced hostess! Lucky the woman who plans the trousseau tea for the bride, the after-the-theater party for the summer visitor, the little informal welcome-home feast for the school girl, if she has acquired the Rogers habit, and knows where to turn when she wants an intriguing new salad, or something different in iced beverages.

Having acquired that habit she knows where to find crisp heart-of-lettuce leaves, as a foundation for her salads; firm, ripe fruits and the choicest of vegetables, to be topped off with tempting mayonnaise, grated cheese, chopped nuts or Maraschino cherries. Even the most charming and experienced hostess may not know, however, that she can find in any of the popular Rogers stores, a can of Del Monte Fruits for Salad, which combines a selection of five favorite fruits, already prepared for her convenience, eliminating waste and harried and lengthy search for just the right variety. The popular size costs only forty-five cents! It may sound like a fairy story, or a page from Arabian Nights, but try it for yourself, and you'll find it is instead a very modern and distinct service this well-established chain of stores has to offer you. You'll have time to enjoy that early swim or tennis match, with utter abandon, having escaped all need of worry or anxiety in preparation for your own guests.

Turning from ads, and searching the realm of things available in refreshing beverages, she finds it unnecessary to look further, for at the Rogers stores she will find a cunning little jug of Za-Rex, which can be secured in orange, lemon or grape flavors, and forms the major ingredients for a delicious fruit punch of her own concoction. Better still, a supply of this new and delightful drink, Za-Rex Punch, kept ready in the refrigerator, proves a friend indeed, when unexpected guests call informally during these warm June evenings, and affords a wonderful opportunity for serving a sparkling and refreshing punch on a moment's notice. If "Music hath charms," then hard it will be to resist the tinkling of the ice, on a warm summer evening, when the contents of the glass is Za-Rex. The "little pint jug" from Rogers will cost thirty-five cents, and serves sixteen people—ready mixed, sweetened and flavored for you. Could the Genii, with his Magic Lamp, offer you more modern service and convenience?

A Breath of Ocean.

FOR the hostess who entertains at home nothing is more important than the proper "stage setting," and the fastidious woman chooses with care her summer furniture, selecting the kind that expresses the personality of her home, and at the same time is cool, restful and inviting, to get away from the heavier furniture of wintertime.

This joy, with the advent of the new cane and fibre furniture, in so many pleasing styles and colors, is no longer a luxury too dear for the family budget. A trip through the new home of Sterchi's, on Mitchell street, proves a veritable "open-sesame" to the eyes of the woman who takes delight in adding charm to her home, as well as for the bride who anticipates the pleasure of receiving her friends in that "ducky little apartment" upon which she and Jack spent weeks deciding.

To delight the heart of a woman Sterchi is showing a wonderfully wide variety of cane and fibre three-piece suites—just the thing for the sun parlor, porches, cozy nooks, and living room. In colors that suggest the lure of the sea, is one particularly charming little suite of sea green, upholstered in a new and pleasing fibre cloth of artistic color and design, from the depths of whose cozy cushions one may dream of open expanses of white-crested ocean, and hear the soft murmur of the surf, wafted in on the breath of a sea breeze. Such is the spell of romance and dreaming these masterpieces of a craftsman's art cast over one, woven into their delicate coloring and air of cool, inviting comfort.

Of particular interest to the woman who entertains is a dainty little pearl grey tea table with four chairs and an exquisitely fashioned buffet, which captures the heart at first glance, and then delights one with an astoundingly low price tag, for it costs very little more than the new afternoon frock. But, oh, how it will fit in for the many summer-time affairs!

On With the Dance!

IN the home that proves the natural rendezvous for the "crowd" to gather, one always finds the newest and most popular dance music, ready without warning for those little impromptu dances and happy summer evenings, and the hostess who finds especial delight in being ready for any occasion will hear with a thrill of pleasure that a trip to Bame's, 107 Peachtree, will insure the newest releases in Victor records, played for her selection with the charming courtesy always extended one in this popular store. The very latest and most popular fox-trot is played by Charles Dorberger and his orchestra—"You're Just a Flower From an Old Bouquet"—and it's just as delightful as its name. Another is "Honey, I'm in Love With You," played by Paul Whiteman's orchestra—the title and Paul Whiteman's name speak for themselves, and prove two good reasons for buying this record.

For The Stork Shower

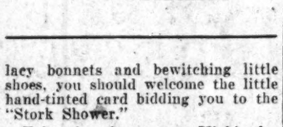

IF you have never known the thrill of buying baby clothes—sheer little slips and dresses, beribboned, lacy bonnets and bewitching little shoes, you should welcome the little hand-tinted card bidding you to the "Stork Shower."

Take the elevator at High's for the third floor and call on Mrs. Lark, who reigns in Babyland. She is a real mother and has a charm of manner and a world of wisdom, which will make your selection of gifts practical, and at the same time delightful.

One might revel for hours among the charming articles in this fairyland. There is a variety of exquisite hand-made dresses, ranging in price from $2.50 to $3.98—cunning little white kid moccasins at $1.00 and $1.25 a pair—charming little lace-ruffled organdie bonnets, dainty carriage coverlets, and an assortment of infants' tops, any of which make appropriate and pleasing gifts for the shower.

The hostess will find her problem solved in the Baby Book. The mother who needs a supply of cool little garments for the summer months will find some beautiful little hand-made dresses now selling at half price, as well as the regular Kleinert's Baby Panties, in flesh, natural and white, at 22c each.

And last, but by no means least, you will find the famous "By-Lo" doll, originated by a trained nurse, modeled after a three-day-old baby—as natural as a real live bundle of pink and white daintiness, with a startlingly natural baby cry. It wins its way to your heart, irresistibly, you may carry it home for $5.98!

"Meet Me At The Forsyth"

JUNE, with its brides and brides-to-be, brings home also the school girl for her parties. The summer visitor must be honored, and a "bon-voyage" given the girl who is going away. In the midst of these activities, it is the clever girl who gets away from the worry of planning a home party. She takes her party to the theater!

Marty Semon, popular manager of the Forsyth, is always ready to help, and reservations may be telephoned to him, with the assurance that your party will be well taken care of, and you may run along with the others for a carefree afternoon.

Catering to public demand, the Forsyth is now putting on Big Time Keith, offering you the best vaudeville acts in the Keith and Orpheum circuits. Programs now will run an entire week, eliminating the mid-week change. A permanent reservation saves a lot of bother, and you can't go wrong when you "meet at the Forsyth."—(adv.)

Camp Parry-dise Will Open In North Carolina Skyland

Highlands, N. C., June 20.—(Special.)—On the third of July the gates of Camp Parry-dise, which is being established this year by Mrs. H. L. Parry, will be thrown open for the arrival of girls who are to enjoy six weeks there in camp.

Spending the hot months of July and August on top of Wildcat mountain at a girls' camp sounds like lots of fun, doesn't it?

Can you picture in your mind a group of laughing girls, their skins brown, their eyes eager, riding over mountain trails and through steep, winding roads on horseback, or frolicking in the crystal waters of a rock-bound pool, or hiking through pine-fragrant woods to distant spots of interest?

These are only part of the pleasures of camp; if you want your daughter to know the whole happiness of outdoor life, let her spend the summer at Camp Parry-dise.

One of the main sources of pleasure to the camp girl is horseback riding. A number of gentle horses are kept for the exclusive use of the campers. Beginners are given a chance to learn to "handle" the bridle before they are allowed to go on the road, then the delights of the road are open to them. The length of rides increases on each succeeding trip, until finally the girls who have become experienced horsewomen are ready for the overnight trips, which take them over hill and dale, bringing roses of health to their cheeks and giving a thrill of joy and attainment which is to be locked away in their hearts with other happy memories of girlhood.

The campers, on these riding excursions, stop by the roadside in cool, shady spots for lunch and for a rest before they reach their objective location. At overnight camping grounds the girls unsaddle, make camp and cook their supper. After an evening spent in singing songs or telling stories around a dancing campfire, the girls retire for the night.

Horseback and hiking parties are accompanied by two or more counsellors and a man is always along to act as guide. The campers, however, depend upon themselves to "pitch camp" and the detail work is divided so that the day's duties on these trips are shared, and each girl does her part, thus learning the art of camping. During the night each girl takes a one-hour watch by the embers of the camp fire. Being sentinel over the sleeping campers appeals highly to their sense of responsibility.

Long overnight hikes lead the girls to places of interest and of beauty. There are falls that trickle fantastically down mountain sides, caves whose depths invite adventure, paths that lead invitingly to places yet to be "discovered." There are all sorts of interests in exploring and in nature study, for these girls who are on these hiking trips getting acquainted with the alluring mysteries of the woods.

Swimming and diving, tennis, croquet, outdoor dramatics are other activities which engage the attention of the girls at camp Parry-dise.

A summer at camp gives each girl harder muscles and brimming energy and a mind full of happy, happy memories! She can take home something tangible, too, for in the arts and crafts shop she learns to carve wood, to hammer brass and copper, to weave baskets, paint and sew.

Is not a summer of these wholesome camp activities more desirable for your daughter than the diversions of town; speeding somewhere with somebody, spending hours within the walls of a picture palace, or sitting at home "receiving callers?"

A summer outdoors is certain to bring better health and a stronger development mentally, physically and morally to the fortunate girl who can spend her vacation at Camp Parry-dise, under the direction of so competent and charming a lady as Mrs. Parry, whose list is about to close, and who can be reached this week by mail at camp at Highland, N. C., address.

Camp Highland, Y.W.C.A. Camp Has Busy and Interesting Days

Clog dancing is very much in vogue at Camp Highland, the Y. W. C. A. camp for girls which opened about two weeks ago. With a large crowd of early vacationists in camp, Miss Isabel Dew, one of the senior counsellors, and Miss Lucy Marvin Adams director of the camp, are finding their hands full—since every girl in camp must learn to clog.

It is an interesting fact that this pleasant—if vigorous—pastime is being very generally accepted throughout the country as one of the very best forms of exercise.

Miss Adams and Miss Dew are already accomplished clog dancers, and the camp is enjoying its lessons in this new-old form of exercise very much.

By day they are building trails to points of interest near the camp site. By night programs in the recreation hall. Readings and dances occupy the hours between supper and taps. The building of the trails is a complicated affair. One trail leads to the falls, up Nickerjack. One leads far down the creek in the opposite direction, nearly to Swinging bridge.

Camp life is never dull. From the time reveille sounds at 7:10 on the day is full.

At 9:30 on some mornings, 10 on others, is swimming hour with Miss Pauline Martin on duty at the pool, ready to give any instruction required by beginners. Between swimming and dinner there is time for a hike, or letter writing, or any other form of diversion. Then, there is the afternoon swim, camp activities, and finally supper. Dancing in the recreation hall and stunts begin after supper and last till taps sounds at 9:30. Sunday's purogram is, of course, a little different, with vesper services in the late afternoon, and no frolicking in the recreation hall—only quiet groups gathered for music.

The prospects for the summer's program are very bright. Camp has opened with a bang, and is continuing with increasingly large crowds every week, and enthusiastic plans on the part of the camp staff for every week of vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. White Honor Daughters.

A delightful social event of the past week was the dance given on Tuesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. White at their home, 44 Clemont drive, in honor of their daughter, Margaret.

The guests included Miss Pauline Gault, Miss Rose Bindewald, Miss Lilly May Wiggins, Miss Edna Lee, Miss Mildred Raines, Miss Eva Way, Miss Lulye Blanton, Miss Elizabeth Mell, Miss Ruth Mell, Miss Helen Todd, Herbert Lee, Andy Bindewald, Ed Lidelle, Clifford Longino, Leon Green, Lawrence Phillpot, George Fredelle, Autry Randall, John Thigpen, Arthur McDonald, Charles Cross, P. G. Willis, Mr. Adams, Bob Lupoe, C. E. Van Orden and Preston Copenhaver.

Miss Elizabeth Thomas To Be Honored.

Miss Elizabeth Thomas, whose marriage to Leslie Blackwell will be an event of July 4, will be honored at a miscellaneous shower Wednesday afternoon, June 24, given by Miss Marion Speer at her home on Highland avenue. Miss Speer will be assisted in entertaining by Mrs. W. C. Rainey and Mrs. W. S. Smith.

Eastern Star Chapter To Hold Meeting.

Atlanta Chapter No. 57, O. E. S. will hold its regular meeting Friday, June 26, at 8 o'clock at W. D. Luckie Temple, Gordon and Lee streets. There will be work in the degrees. Visitors are cordially welcome.

Atlanta Girls Will Attend Camp Merrie-Woode

The Atlanta girls who will leave Tuesday, June 30, for Camp Merrie-Woode, at Sapphire, N. C., are: Misses Palmer Dallis, Myra Boynton, Catherine Ginn, Mary Goddard, Katherine Howell, Mary Adair Howell, Louisa Shivers, Vaughn Nixon, Mary Goldsmith, Josephine Crawford and Marian Tolle, who has recently moved to East Orange, N. J., and the riding instructor, Miss Mildred Davis.

Camp Merrie-Woode will open its sixth season on July 1 and close August 27. At an altitude of 3,200 feet, the camp nestles at the foot of Old Bald mountain, on the shore of beautiful Lake Fairfield, where it commands five miles of lake front.

Mrs. Jonathan C. Day, the camp director, and Miss Mary H. Turk, the athletics director, who make their homes during the winter in New York city, have had wide experience and vital interest in girls. They are in complete charge of the camp program, being in this way, in personal touch with each girl. The campers live in wooden kiosks, each of which is occupied by a counsellor and three girls. The counsellors are chosen for their leadership, character, culture and training in the activities of camp life — athletics, swimming, riding, dancing, music, arts and crafts and hiking.

The hundred girls who comprise the junior and senior camps of Merrie-Woode will assemble at Cleveland, New York, Atlanta and Charleston and arrange to leave those centers under the chaperonage of a counsellor, so as to arrive at Hendersonville, N. C., on the morning of July 1. From there they will be conveyed by special train to Toxaway and by machine to Lake Fairfield.

Mrs. Karl Yancey, who before her marriage on Saturday evening, was Miss Carrie Adelie Ware, daughter of the Rev. J. T. Ware, of Ellijay, Ga. After a wedding trip to Canada and other points of interest in the east, Mr. and Mrs. Yancey will be at home at 4 Dill avenue.

Reconditioning "Old Ironsides" Project of U. S. Daughters, 1812

The greatest piece of constructive patriotism undertaken by the National Society U. S. Daughters of 1812 is the project for reconditioning the U. S. S. frigate, Constitution, known as "Old Ironsides." After 128 years of service in the United States Navy, the "Constitution" lies rotting in the Boston navy yard and unless something is done quickly, this priceless relic of the 1812 period will be reduced to scrap heap. The Daughters of 1812 are heading a campaign for raising $475,000 by popular subscription, particularly among the school children as an educational and patriotic movement. Congress authorized her restoration, but made no appropriation. Honorable Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy, has been authorized to collect funds for her restoration and has appointed the National Society U. S. Daughters of 1812 to lead the movement to collect funds. The governors of all the states are supporting the movement. The Georgia society will endeavor to do its share in that work.

Mrs. Zenas Wise Oglesby was hostess to the John Floyd chapter, United States Daughters of 1812 at her home Friday afternoon.

The rooms where the members assembled were attractively decorated in vases of sweet peas and gladioli.

The enrollment of the society shows a membership of 47, including 21 nonresidents.

Mrs. Charles Rice, state president, presided. The program opened with the singing of "America, the Beautiful," followed by repeating the salute to the flag.

The reports of officers proved most interesting.

Mrs. F. E. Brownell's report of the thirty-third associate council of the U. S. Daughters of 1812 which was held in Washington, April 27, 28, 29, 30 was replete with interest. She gave the welcome news that the registrar national, Mrs. Matteson, reported 600 new members and 89 supplemental lines have been accepted; also 27 real Daughters have been added to the membership during the fiscal year.

Legislation to have all school teachers take the oath of allegiance to the American flag was introduced in a resolution passed by unanimous vote.

Another resolution passed was to create a $1,000 perpetual scholarship to be placed in the Berry school at Maryville, Tenn. Georgia, of course, has subscribed her quota.

The national society reaffirmed its stand on maintaining an adequate national defense.

Mrs. J. W. Oglesby told of the brilliant reception at the white house and of the banquet.

Miss Huson told of the visit to the "Mayflower," the president's yacht, and to the grace of Francis Sott Key, at Frederick, Md.

Mrs. Rice gave echoes of the council and expressed highest praise of the ability of the officers.

The Georgia Society U. S. D. of 1812 have entertained two presidents national, Mrs. William Gerry Slade, of New York, and Mrs. Samuel Preston Davis, of Arkansas.

Mrs. George Hope read a beautiful poem, entitled "Our Flag," and also the "Fifteen Don'ts in Use of the Flag."

Miss Stephen McNaugney gave a group of violin solos which was very much enjoyed.

Colonel Boifeuillet addressed the society on the "Magna Charta," imparting most valuable information. He is a fluent speaker and deeply versed in the subject he presented. The Magna Charta commenorations are being made conspicuous all over the country. It is the great traditions of Magna Charta that have made its heritage and service to humanity immortal. It is because of its traditions that it is sacred to us as it was to our forefathers.

We can no more write the political history of America without its English foundations than we can write it leaving out the names of George Washington, James Monroe, Thomas Jefferson and Woodrow Wilson.

Mrs. Martin L. Sigman, of Monticello, Ark., corresponding secretary national, was an honored guest and brought greetings to the society.

The following friends of the hostess were welcomed visitors: Mrs. Christian Clarke, Mrs. Howard McCall, Mrs. W. S. Coleman, Mrs. John A. Perdue.

After the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" the meeting adjourned.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Oglesby, who belongs to many patriotic societies. Mrs. Willis Timmons and Mrs. Bosworth served punch. United States flags were presented as souvenirs.

Swimming Pool Offers Attraction.

The new swimming pool at the Atlanta Women's club is the center of delightful recreational activities. Crowds of children, the members of the club and their husbands enjoy the delightful advantages the pool offers.

During the past week new members have been taken into the club just for the advantages the swimming pool offers for themselves, husbands and children. The life-saver is kept busy the entire hours upon which he is on duty, teaching swimming and caring for the young folks who are not yet expert in the art. Cold drinks, sandwiches and afternoon teas add to the enjoyment of the bathers, and those in charge state that at present the Women's club plant is one of the busiest establishments in the city.

Improvements are constantly being added to the recreational advantages in connection with this fourth unit of the club plant, such as diving boards, paved walks around the pool, blooming flowers and many things to make the place one of joy and pleasure to the members of the club and their families.

Eastern Star Chapter To Hold Meeting.

Oglethorpe Chapter No. 122, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold its regular meeting on Friday evening, June 26, at 8 o'clock in the Masonic temple on Peachtree road at Buckhead. Members will observe the change in meetings. Henceforth they will be held on the second and fourth Fridays of each month.

Woman's Club Will Petition Legislature on Prison Reform

Dr. Georrge K. Pratt, assistant to the medical director for the national committee for mental hygiene, writes encouragingly to Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, commissioner of health in Georgia, and to Mrs. Norman Sharp, regrading the proposed intention of the Atlanta Woman's club to secure legislation that will place a psychiatrist under the supervision of the state prison commission to classify the prisoners of this state.

Will Secure Psychiatrist.

Dr. Pratt says in part: "The national committee for hygiene is keenly interested in what you have to say concerning your intention to secure a psychiatrist for the state of Georgia, under the supervision of the prison commission. This is indeed a forward-looking step, and if it can be competently carried out I am sure that Georgia will profit thereby.

"Whatever may be done by correspondence, you may be sure we will be glad to assist you. Dr. F. E. Williams, medical director, is this week in Minneapolis and upon his return he sails for abroad, to be gone the entire summer. During the week of July 13 it is likely, but not entirely certain, that I shall be in Florida, giving some lectures at a public health institute there, if at this time, I could assist you. I could no doubt arrange to stop off on my return to New York in Atlanta for a few days and perhaps assist in a personal capacity for that length of time."

Dr. Pratt replies to letters from Dr. Abercrombie and Mrs. Sharp which were written at the request of the committee following a conference held between Dr. Abercrombie, Judge T. E. Patterson, of the state prison commission and the committee from the Atlanta Woman's club, at which time it was decided that all information and assistance available should be secured from the national committee for mental hygiene. Dr. Abercrombie, in his letter to the national committee, set forth the program of legislation planned by the Atlanta Woman's club, the Georgia State Medical Auxiliary and other organizations, having first had the stamp of approval from Governor Clifford Walker, chief executive of Georgia and the state prison commission, then he placed his own approval in these words: "I, personally, have the hope that this psychiatrist, that the Atlanta Woman's club is working for, will eventually chrystalize sentiment to the point where the state will have a real mental hygiene commission that will have under its supervision all phases of mental hygiene work."

Mrs. Turner Is Chairman.

Mrs. George L. Turner, newly appointed chairman of the legislative department of the Atlanta Woman's club, has during the past week sent out approximately 150 letters to club women over the state, soliciting their aid in securing this much-needed legislation for prison reform in Georgia. Mrs. Turner will follow this program by writing to the representatives from the various sections of the state, placing before them the great importance of the establishment of a psychiatric department for the state. Those assisting Mrs. Turner in this work are, Mrs. Norman Sharp, president of the Atlanta Woman's club and ex-officio member of the committee; Mrs. John R. Hornady, Mrs. C. K. Ayer, Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, Mrs. W. P. Dunn.

Service League To Give Benefit Bridge Friday

Miss Nancy Linthicum, president of the Young People's Service league of All Saints' church, announces an elaborate benefit bridge party to be given Friday evening, June 26, at 8 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. N. B. Dumas, 1207 Peachtree road, this being the first of the summer activities planned by the All Saints' Y. P. S. L.

Miss Helen Burdette, 488 North Boulevard, is chairman of the committee on arrangements, and anyone desiring to reserve a table for this affair should call her at Walnut 3396. Each table will be expected to furnish its own prize, but dainty refreshments will be served during the evening.

Dance at Woman's Club Tuesday.

An interesting event of the week will be the regular weekly dance Tuesday evening at the Atlanta Woman's club, sponsored by Ralph Richards. The Peerless Entertainers will furnish th music. All members with cards are invited to attend. Admission will be by card only.

Mrs. J. C. Malone, chairman of all pre-school circles in the city of Atlanta, has invited the chairmen of the pre-school circles to hold their June meeting at her home, 17 Fairview road, Tuesday, June 23, at 3 o'clock.

The invitation has been extended to the group chairmen of the circles having the Mothers' Study clubs. All chairmen are requested to bring their yearly reports to this meeting.

Mrs. Malone is very anxious that all schools be represented.

SOCIAL ITEMS

Mrs. Ernest Gibson, of Shreveport, La., is the guest of her mother, Mrs. C. W. Mangum, and other relatives for two weeks.

Mrs. C. W. Moremen and children, John Upton and Elizabeth, of Ocala, Fla., are visiting their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Sower, at 307 Juniper street. Mrs. Moremen is the daughter of the late J. W. Sower and was born and reared and educated in Atlanta, and has returned for a visit of some length. She is the president of the American Legion Auxiliary post, of Ocala, and fills other places of social and civic interest. Mrs. Moremen is well known as a musician of note and graduated from the Hanna school of music, which turned a successful point in teaching piano art in Atlanta some years ago.

Miss Lolita Savini arrived in Atlanta Saturday to visit her mother, Mrs. C. W. Salvini, at her home, 779 North Boulevard. She has spent the past winter in Boston, where she has visited her sister, Mrs. R. N. Campbell. Miss Salvini has been studying voice with Arthur L. Hubbard, who is prominently identified with musical matters in that city, and will return in September to resume her studies under this noted teacher. She appeared with the Boston Symphony orchestra during the past winter in New York city, Providence, R. I., and other important cities. Miss Savini is unusually giftcd and talented and possesses an exquisite soprano voice.

Many Lovely Affairs Are of Interest in Griffin Society

Griffin, Ga., June 20.—Mr. and Mrs. James M. Sims, of Griffin, announce the marriage of their daughter, Dede, to Dr. Selma Leroy Richmond, the wedding having taken place Wednesday, June 3, at the Old Stone Presbyterian church, Lewisburg, West Virginia. The Rev. McF. Courtney, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the president and faculty of Greenbriar college, and a few intimate friends.

The bride was lovely in her ensemble suit of French blue and tan kasha cloth. The dress was tan crepe de chine with trimmings of French blue. With this becoming costume she wore a small hat to match, trimmed with tan velvet ribbons.

Immediately after the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. Richmond left for Atlanta, Griffin and other points in Georgia.

Mrs. Richmond is a graduate of the State Normal school and has specialized in science and dietetics in leading schools since, and is a recognized predominating figure in this field of work. She has many friends in the eastern states, where she has taught for several years. Last year she was a member of the faculty of Greenbriar college for women in Lewisburg, W. Va.

She is the fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Sims, of Griffin. Her father is a prominent planter and is well identified with the development and betterment of this section. He is a near relative of the eminent Dr. James Marion Sims, who was house physician of the royalty during the reign of Queen Victoria, and a descendant of the Sims family of Virginia and the Carolinas.

Her mother is the daughter of the late John R. Brown, a distinguished Civil war veteran, whose people have long been connected with the reconstruction of the south.

Dr. Richmond is the son of John R. Richmond, of Houston, W. Va. He was graduated from the University of Maryland and began his practice in Lewisburg, W. Va., where he is prominently connected in business activities, being one of the most popular young men in that city.

Bride-Elect Honored.

A lovely compliment to Miss Catherine Sibley, charming bride-elect of June, was the bridge-tea at which Mrs. Gordon Wilson entertained Thursday afternoon at her home on South Sixth street. Mrs. Wilson was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. James R. Nutt, Miss Amelia Walker and Miss Clara Edwards.

Miss Emily Boyd made high score, winning a deck of deluxe cards. Miss Sibley was presented an attractive French novelty.

Mrs. W. M. Welden and Miss Margaret Ogletree entertained Friday morning at a lovely domino party at the home of Mrs. Welden on West Taylor street in compliment to Miss Catherine Sibley, whose marriage to Robert Stuart Ogletree will be a beautiful event of June 23.

Friday afternoon Mrs. Welden and Miss Ogletree entertained twelve tables of bridge at the home of the former with Miss Catherine Sibley as the guest of honor. Assisting the two hostesses were Mrs. Augustus Frye, Mrs. Robert Childs, of Fort Benning; Mrs. Aldine Combs, Mrs. R. D. Ogletree, Miss Chrystine Woodburn, Mrs. Theodore Manley, Miss Lena Yarbrough, Miss Anna Margaret Bond.

Atlanta Artists Give Recital.

An appreciative audience assembled Tuesday evening at the studio of Miss Lula Clark King to her presented Cadman's song cycle, "Morning of the Year." Those participating were Mrs. William Modena, soprano; Miss Bertha Simms, contralto; George Dowman, Jr., tenor; Coleman D. Kimbro, baritone, and Mrs. Stephen W. Banta, accompanist.

Mrs. William Modena, soprano, possesses a magnetic personality and has a very flexible voice under fine control. Miss Bertha Simms, contralto, has a voice full of emotion and has fine powers of dramatic expression at her command. Mr. Kimbro, baritone, understands the value of tone color and there was a variety in his singing. Mr. Dowman, tenor, sang his solos with abandon and bids fair to become a good singer.

Mrs. Stephen Banta, a new acquisition to Atlanta's musical circles, played with appreciated sympathy and much praise was given her for her excellent and delightful accompaniments. Mrs. Banta enjoys a splendid reputation as a concert organist as well as pianist.

The great value of Miss Lula Clark King's work musically in Atlanta cannot be over-estimated. A large number of the best singers have enjoyed years of training under her capable guidance. Artistic refinement was the distinguishing feature of the recital and each singer interpreted with splendid appreciation and merit.

Hapeville Woman's Club Meets.

A very interesting meeting of the Hapeville Woman's club was held at the city auditorium on June 18, Mrs. Jere A. Wells, presiden of the club, presiding.

A very short business session was held, after which Mrs. W. A. Dietrick, chairman of public welfare, took charge of the program. A vocal solo, "I Passed by Your Window," by May Brake, was beautifully rendered by Miss Ethel Palmer, of Atlanta, Mrs. John Nesbit, accompanying her.

The club was honored with the presence of Dr. Theodore Toepel, of Atlanta, as main speaker for the afternoon. Dr. Toepel delivered a most instructive lecture on "Child Welfare," which was very much enjoyed by all present.

Matrons' Class Is Entertained.

Mrs. H. E. Davies and Mrs. F. G. Hensler were hostesses to the Young Matrons' class of Martha Brown Memorial church last Friday evening at their home on Cleveland avenue.

Bowls of pink and white sweetpeas and baskets of gladioli were used in decoration, carrying out a color scheme of pink and white. The punch bowl was presided over by Mrs. Ralph Ellis and Mrs. Fred Hooks.

The various committee reports were heard and a special welfare work was proposed by the teacher, Mrs. Leo Sudderth, and heartily approved by the class. Arrangements were made to give a musical program at the Hapeville reformatory as a beginning. A contest to finish out Biblical proper names from the first syllable was won by Mrs. G. L. Myers. The prize was a Bible. The class then presented Mrs. Sudderth with a beautiful set of china as a birthday gift.

Park Sunday School Has Special Service.

An event of much interest in Sunday school affairs of last week was a recognition service held at Park Street Methodist Sunday school last Sunday morning, June 14.

Members of the Sunday school who had received a reward of merit in any way during the year were assembled together and their names and the merit for which they had been rewarded made known.

Those who had the honor of participating in this unique and inspiring service were Miss Anne Russell Banks, Miss Katherine Baker, Miss Elizabeth Gaston, Russell West, Miss Williezelle Borum, Miss Elsie Wade, David Therrell, George Smith, Mark Johnson and Robert Blair, Miss Evelyn Lambert, Herbert West, Miss Lester Wilson, Bill Jennings, Lester Avery, Miss Eva Chambers, Miss Josephine Davis, Miss Mildred Eaves, Fletcher Magbee, Thomas Grogan, Miss Eugenia Hooper, Gene Roberts and Miss Betty Hadley.

Miss Mary Pullman On Visit Here.

Miss Mary Turner Pullman, of Charlottesville, Va., will arrive in Atlanta Monday to visit her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Marion M. Clarke, of 1025 Peachtree street. Miss Pullman is a recent graduate of Randolph-Macon college at Lynchburg, Va., and is prominent among the younger society set of that state.

Camp Victor Opening Event of Interest.

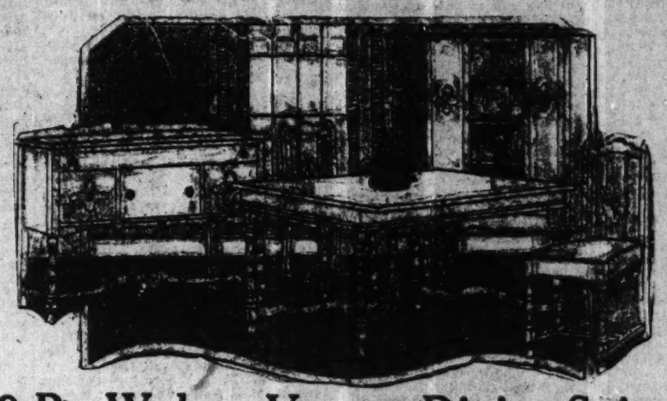

With the opening of Camp Victor on July 3, most of the activities of the Young Women's Hebrew association will be transferred from the club house to the camp. Reservations are being made by "Y" members and their friends for the spending of vacations and week ends on the lovely grounds of the camp site and relax from the tension of city life. This year a tennis court in perfect condition, where the guests can practice and improve their strokes, will be one of the chief attractions of the camp. Reading hours in shady nooks, rambles in the woods for nature study, an informal game of bridge or mah jongg, plenty of good food and jolly companionship—these are some of the inducements that Camp Victor offers to vacationists. The nearness of the camp to town (bus will take guests from end of Piedmont avenue car line to the camp). The very moderate rates, the rustic atmosphere which obviates the necessity of an expensive wardrobe (knickers for all-round wear are recommended), all these features endear Camp Victor to the tired mother or girl in the business world.

July 5 will be gala day at Camp Victor. There will be a watermelon cutting at 2:30 o'clock, side shows and continuous feature performances in the main hall. Clowns, fortune tellers, wild men, rubes, village policemen, Oriental maidens, Spanish dancers, gypsies, hoboes and Honolulu maids, disport themselves for the amusement of picnickers.

Tennis and swimming will be taught throughout June at Grant Park. Tennis class meets Sunday morning at 7 o'clock; swimming, Monday and Tuesday at 8 o'clock, Wednesday and Thursday at 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

Annual Foot Relief Week!

What's Wrong?

Run-over heels and leaning ankles give you the first warning that your feet need help. Not only are they unsightly but they give visible proof that the intricate 26-bone structures of your feet have broken down under the weight of your body. To restore and gently hold the lowered bones in natural alignment is the only method of permanent correction. This is the exclusive principle of featherlight

Wizard Arch Builders

Provided with adjustable features at the heel, arch and ball, Wizard Arch Builders can be adjusted to give support to your feet right where it is needed. The bone structures will be perfectly aligned. Thus, the cause of run-over heels and bulging counters eliminated. Foot pains at the heel, the ball and the arch will cease. Your feet will function with freedom and grace.

This Week—Special Demonstration

That you may know how wonderful your feet can be made to feel, just visit our Foot Relief Department. Highly competent foot experts will gladly advise you and give you the benefit of a trial fitting. There is no obligation. Come in this week.

GEORGIA BAY

Special attention is called to the article in today's column, by Mrs. J. Thomas Wood, relative to subscribing, and paying up subscriptions already made, to the "Georgia Bay" fund, which still lags behind, and which Mrs. Wood, state treasurer, and also state chairman of Georgia Bay, is anxious to clear up by at least the first of July. It is stated in this article, that pledges made at state conference, will be credited on the 25 cents per capita amount which was voted on at conference. Chapter regents are earnestly requested to send in their quota at the earliest possible moment, so that Georgia will not continue longer at the bottom of the list of original colonies, who have paid his debt of honor.

Plea for Georgia Bay by Mrs. J. Thomas Wood, state chairman, D. A. R.

From their earliest recollection, every American man and woman connects Valley Forge with Washington during the Revolutionary war, for it was here on the west bank of the Schuylkill that the commander in chief brought together the remnants of his army. It is estimated that three thousand men perished on the hills of Valley Forge during the six months of the encampment of Washington's army. Every foot of these hills is sacred ground in the eyes of true Americans and every foot is fraught with historic association.

At Valley Forge a Memorial chapel has been built to honor Washington and those faithful men who suffered with him during the winter of 1777-78. A very beautiful and important feature of this memorial is the cloister of the colonies. The cloister is a memorial to the thirteen original colonies, to each of which is devoted a bay, and in the present state only North Carolina and Georgia Bays remain unfinished. Each bay was built by patriotic societies from their respective states. Georgia D. A. R. have worked long and hard to raise the amount needed to finish Georgia Bay and now that the contract has been given, the money must be in hand very soon.

The Georgia D. A. R. have done much to perpetuate the memory of her patriots and in this undertaking, as in all others, we shall succeed. As chairman for Georgia D. A. R., let me beg all chapters to send in their 25c per capita as soon as possible. Those who made pledges at Columbus will have their pledge credited on their per capita tax.

June the fourteenth is harvest day. Our quota for Georgia Bay to pay, so get busy; don't waste a minute, for Georgia Bay lets go the limit.

Chapter Reports

Under the combined efforts of the three local chapters of the D. A. R., Oglethorpe, Button Gwinnett and George Walton, Flag day and Magna Charta day were most uniquely celebratde in Columbus, June 15.

To instill into the hearts of the children greater patriotism, and an increased love, honor and reverence for the flag, these celebrations were held upon four of the principal playgrounds of the city, and also two of the colored playgrounds, directed by the several playground leaders, assisted by the recreational official and participated in by the children.

The Oglethorpe chapter sponsored the exercises carried out by the Wynnton playground, where floated so magnificently the flag recently erected by the Parent-Teacher association of that school.

The May meeting of the Colonel William Few chapter, D. A. R., of Eastman, was held at the home of Mrs. W. H. Clark, in Chauncey, Ga.

The meeting was ...ided over by the regent, Mrs. W. B. Daniel. The Star-Spangled Banner was sung, followed by the salute to the flag and the American creed recited in concert by the members. Annual reports were given by all officers and committee chairmen, and these reports showed splendid work done during the year. Among the contributions to the various causes were: $25 to the Georgia bay fund, $25 to the scholarship fund, $10 to the Fannie Trammell memorial.

All old officers were reelected.

CHAPTERS URGED TO OBSERVE INDEPENDENCE DAY.

Dear Madam Regent: The Fourth of July is the anniversary that commemorates that day in 1776 on which came into being the Declaration of Independence. It has won for itself the distinction of being known as "the day we celebrate," and fittingly, for the Fourth of July is not only a most joyous but also a most sacred anniversary.

I wish that each chapter might give a patriotic program, but if this is not practicable, will you not request through the press, or in some other suitable way, that all business houses, public buildings and homes display our national colors on July the Fourth?

Please write me in what way your chapter had a part in the observance of this patriotic anniversary.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. ALMON A. WILLIAMS,
State Chairman Independence Day Committee, Fort Valley, Ga.

Mrs. T. P. Vincent was hostess at the May meeting of the Elijah Clarke chapter, D. A. R., Athens, Ga.

Annual reports were given, including that of the retired regent, Mrs. E. L. Griggs, who has served the chapter for three years. The state regent was present and gave a most interesting report of the Continental Congress. The chapter voted to send $100 for the new auditorium at Washington.

New officers for the year were unanimously elected as follows: Regent, Mrs. Hugh Rowe; first vice regent, Mrs. T. P. Vincent; second vice regent, Miss Annie Crawford; recording secretary, Mrs. J. H. Rucker; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. M. Pound; treasurer, Miss Rachel Griggs; registrar, Mrs. J. T. Dudley; historian, Mrs. W. H. Ashford; chaplain, Mrs. James White, Sr.

Mrs. M. J. Carswell was hostess at the regular May meeting of the Lyman Hall chapter, D. A. R.

The officers elected are as follows: Mrs. H. J. Carswell, regent. Mrs. Carswell has served the chapetr in various capacities during the past few years and she will make a very capable regent. Mrs. J. E. Wadley, vice regent; Mrs. Q. L. Garrett, recording secretary; Mrs. K. F. Rymer, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. A. Stallings, treasurer; Mrs. Jerome Crawley, registrar; Mrs. E. D. Dimmock, historian; Mrs. W. C. Parker, parliamentarian. The three appointive officers are: Mrs. M. J. Carswell, chaplain; Mrs. H. H. Burnet, custodian of flag; Miss Mamie McKnight, custodian of the chapter library.

An interesting talk on federation activities was made by Mrs. E. D. Dimmock.

At the regular May meeting of the John Houston chapter, D. A. R., the annual election of officers was as follows: Regent, Mrs. G. A. Weaver, Jr.; vice regent, Miss Florence McKenzie; recording secretary, Mrs. H. H. Birdson; corresponding secretary, Miss Allie Childs; treasurer, Miss Julia Bethel; assistant treasurer, Mrs. J. F. Johnson; registrar, Mrs. E. T. Black; historian, Mrs. E. T. Nottingham; auditor, Mrs. R. E. Hightower, Sr.; genealogist, Mrs. Eugene F. Matthews.

Real Daughters

Mrs. Walker Jordan, state chairman, Real Daughters, has a very interesting article in today's paper on Real Daughters, which it is hoped will be read by all chapter regents and other D. A. R., in the state. She especially desires information as to the burial places of the Real Daughters, whose names appear in the write-up, and will be glad to hear from any one who can throw any light on the situation.

Only a daughter of a Revolutionary soldier, who has been admitted to the National Society of D. A. R., may be designated a Real Daughter.

Seven hundred and fifty-two have been enrolled, 19 are still living, 15 are receiving pensions. The congress of the national society in 1922 raised the pensions for Real Daughters from $8 to $20 a month.

Georgia chapters have enrolled 38 Real Daughters. The Joseph Habersham chapter outranks all other chapters of D. A. R., having enrolled 33.

This was due to the enthusiasm and untiring efforts of Mrs. W. L. Peel, who was the first national chairman of committee on Real Daughters. A Georgia Real Daughter, Mrs. Mary Hammond Washington, was one of the charter members of the N. S. & A. R., her national number, 81.

Georgia has been given as place of residence, on application papers, by 16 Real Daughters. The graves of seven of these have been located, and six have been marked with the official D. A. R. marker. The seventh was recently marked.

Any information as to where the following Real Daughters are buried will be appreciated by the state chairman, Mrs. Walker Jordan, Hawkinsville, and of great value to the Georgia Society of D. A. R.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bass Smith, Jefferson, Clay county, Georgia, daughter of Henry Smith and his wife, Melissa Norris; Mrs. Eliza Majors Carlton, Newnan, Ga., daughter of Samuel Majors and his second wife, Salome Bennett; Mrs. Evelina A. Terrell Erwin, Rockmart, Ga., daughter of Joel Terrell and his wife, Martha; Mrs. Clarissa Hefner, 17 Crew street, Atlanta, Ga., daughter of William Jones and his wife, Elizabeth Mastin; Mrs. Mary McNeely, Sugar Valley, Ga., daughter of Richard Scruggs and his wife, Sarah Jones; Mrs. Sarah D. West Mathews, Columbus, Ga., daughter of Benjamin West and his wife, Sarah Dinkins; Mrs. Ruth Dobbs Maddox, Flowery Branch, Ga., daughter of Nathan Dobbs and his wife, Fanny Young; Mrs. Mary Thompson Storr, Newnan, Ga., daughter of Andrew Thompson and his wife, Mary McBride.

MRS. WALKER JORDAN,
St. Ch. Real Daughters.

N. Peachtree Road Woman's Club Meets.

The North Peachtree Road Woman's club held its last meeting for the season on Tuesday afternoon, June 16. The new president, Mrs. F. E. Brownell, presided. The reports showed active work being done by the club.

The librarian, Miss Williams, asked for new books for the library and money was voted for this purpose.

The sewing metings will be continued through the summer.

In honor of flag day a detachment of Girl Scouts: Lieutenant Kate Bowen, Scouts Sarah Bowman, Betsy Smith and Gail Nelson gave the salute to the flag in a very impressive manner. Scout Sarah Bowman then recited the history of the U. S. flag.

Mrs. M. W. Cauble gave an interesting account of her recent visit to Tallulah Falls Industrial school.

Mrs. J. N. Steadwell read a synopsis of the children's code laws which it is hoped will be passed by the legislature at the coming session. Several new members were welcomed.

"Agitate, Educate, Organize" Watchwords of W. C. T. U.

BY FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

Statements made by Miss Anna Adams Gordon, president of the World Woman's Christian Temperance union, in an address before the 12th convention of that organization at its greatest meeting in Edinburgh, Scotland, yesterday on world prohibition, traffic in narcotics and world peace, deserves the consideration of thinking people.

"It will require at least a generation to stabilize in any country a national prohibition law," said Miss Gordon. "This stability can be assured by giving to boys and girls in the public and private schools systematic scientific temperance instruction. This foundation work is just as necessary today as it was when the W. C. T. U. was first organized.

"At this convention we must formulate for the leaders of tomorrow a program that will equip youth with a knowledge of the moral, economic and patriotic reasons for total abstinence and prohibition.

"Nearly all the peoples of the globe are making progress along a dry highway. We can be optimistic about securing world prohibition since the entire world today is as near our coveted goal as was the United States 75 years ago.

"There are now 51 countries banded together with the white ribbon. These are all represented at this convention. Already in 10 nations of our federation there are temperance laws that in some measure safeguard the children. In every country there should be protective labor legislation for boys and girls."

Stating the position of the W. C. T. U. on the problem of the traffic in drugs, Miss Gordon said: "We believe that the production of opium should be limited to scientific and medicinal use. In this decision human values, not trade values, are in the ascendancy.

"World peace will come about through giving to the young, histories that shall acclaim the heroes of peace; by changing the modern belief from 'conflict to conference' we shall become intelligent internationalists and help safeguard posterity. We all agree that if we are to escape from the hideousness of war, the vital need is the development in all the world a will to peace.

"The united womanhood of the world, asking for peace, will be a power such as the nations never have known."

Message From Mrs. Gannon.

Nearly 200 United States delegates and their friends are attending the world's W. C. T. U. convention in Edinburg, among them Mrs. Nell Upshaw Gannon, of Athens, who is Georgia's general secretary of the young people's branch and state college secretary.

Mrs. Gannon wrote on board the Zeeland on the fourth: "Just a farewell note before we sail. I never saw so many white-ribbon people in all my life. We have enough enthusiasm to bridge the deep. I'm sure before the trip is over the captain will feel compeleld to apologize for the ocean—so wet and therefore (?) so blue!

All good wishes for the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance Union."

Both Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Eastman, and Mrs. Leila A. Dillard, of Emory university, have received requests this week from the secretary of the new Honolulu W. C. T. U. for help in operating the evangelistic and Sabbath observance and the peace departments. Mrs. Armor is the national W. C. T. U. director of the evangelistic and Sabbath observance department, and Mrs. Dillard the national director of the peace department.

Mrs. Ada Whitney Weinrich, the Honolulu secretary, stated that the W. C. T. U. of Honolulu had recently been reorganized by Mrs. Anna de Yo, of California, sent by the national W. C. T. U. "We start out with a membership of 75," she said. They are planning to lay great stress on departmental activities.

It is thrilling to think how the beautiful work of the W. C. T. U. reaches out even to the islands of the seas.

Two recent measures presented to the legislature in Alaska and aimed to effect a modification of the dry law were both defeated mainly through the activity of the W. C. T. U. there, according to Mrs. Margaret K. Harris, president of the Alaska White Ribbon organization.

Credit for the wet defeat is attributed directly to the W. C. T. U. because it actively stirred up sentiment against any modification, sending letters to every legislator as well as all other government officials.

L. D. Henderson, commissioner of education for Alaska, has approved the educational literature of the W. C. T. U. and has given permission for its distribution throughout the school system. Mrs. Harris reports that Mr. Henderson believes that prohibition is a matter of education, and that the rising generation should be instructed as to the truth about alcohol.

Mrs. Armor Organizes at Rhine.

Mrs. Armor, state W. C. T. U. president, organized a W. C. T. U. of twenty-five active and five honorary members at Rhine, in Dodge county, last Sunday, with the following officers: President, Mrs. G. W. Ryals; secretary, Mrs. Sam Brown, and treasurer, Mrs. C. C. Dinkins.

Two yards of total abstainers' names were signed to the mile long petition and four others almost filled, that day, will be completed.

The report of the meeting stated "We had a great day. No sign of hard times at Rhine. Everybody well dressed. A magnificent dinner was served under beautiful oaks. The house was packed to hear Mrs. Armor, and she not only held undivided attention from start to finish, but thrilled with enthusiasm for law observance. This union will live and grow."

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, national W. C. T. U. lecturer, returned recently from Maryland, where she spent a week lecturing. She was the principal speaker at the annual all-day meeting of all the organizations of the W. C. T. U. of Baltimore.

Rev. Bicknell Has Fiftieth Anniversary of Ordination

The parish house of the Church of the Incarnation was the scene of a most unusual and beautiful celebration on Tuesday evening, June 16.

The lovely affair was the reception given in honor of the Rev. Jesse R. Bicknell on the 50th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood of the Episcopal church, and assembled all the members of the parish, Bishop Mikell and other clergy of the diocese to do him honor.

Bishop Mikell, in beautiful and well-chosen words, spoke of the wonderful record of Father Bicknell's 50 years of active service and presented him with a purse of $50 in gold, the gift of the members of the Church of the Incarnation, which Father Bicknell graciously accepted.

Dr. Bicknell was born in New Albany, Ind., in 1849, matriculated at the Theological seminary at Nasbotsh, Wis., and was ordained in St. Paul's cathedral in Indianapolis in 1875.

Coming to Atlanta about two years ago and assisting the Rev. C. G. Richardson, rector of the Church of the Incarnation, he has greatly endeared himself to all who know him.

The parish had a two-fold cause for celebration, as it was also the 10th anniversary of the ordination of their much beloved rector, Mr. Richardson.

After the bishop had again offered his congratulation and good wishes the little Misses Emily Plummer and Emily Dana walked up, one bearing a tiny chest, the other the key concealed in a flower, which were presented to Mr. Richardson. The chest held notes of congratulation from every organization in the church and a gift of silver.

Another feature of the evening was the reading of an original poem in honor of Father Bicknell by Mrs. William Carder, who also wrote the verses accompanying Mr. Richardson's gifts.

The long receiving line included the senior and junior wardens and their wives, the rector, the guest of honor and his sister, and the presidents of the various organizations of the church as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Spratt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rogers, the Rev. C. G. Richardson, the Rev. Jesse R. Bicknell, Mrs. Emma Love, O. N. Dana, Mrs. Robert Underwood, Mr. Haynes, Mrs. John Eastman, George Jones, Mrs. Arthur Dyer, Miss Mary Sparks, Miss Eberhardt, Sam Weems and Miss Grace New.

The punch table was presided over by Mrs. Maginnis and Mrs. E. L. Lippett, while a bevy of charming young ladies served the delicious refreshments under the direction of Mrs. C. G. Walker and Mrs. A. H. Weems.

About two hundred guests called during the evening.

Women Voters Will Hold Ward Meetings This Week

The ninth ward League of Women Voters will hold its monthly meeting on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. A. G. Maxwell at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. All ninth ward members are urged to attend as a most instructive talk explaining in detail the children's code will be given by Miss Josephine Wilkins of Athens, who is in Atlanta working on the bill.

Bills On Program.

The League of Women Voters has only two bills on its active program for this year and the children's code is one and an amendment to the constitution enabling the legislature to enact modern tax laws is the other.

The league was largely responsible for the appointment of the children's code commission by the legislature several years ago. The commission has spent a vast amount of time and thought on the bill and it should have the careful attention of all women as it provides the minimum safeguards for children. Women should communicate with their representatives on the matter if they approve of the bill.

The second ward held a meeting recently at which time Mrs. J. J. Brown, the chairman, tendered her resignation which was accepted with deep regret and Mrs. Virginia Henderson was elected to take her place.

The eighth ward will hold its bridge club meeting at the residence of Mrs. W. H. McAloney off Friday from 10 until 1 o'clock. Mrs. B. M. Smith, the chairman of the eighth ward, urges all members who care to attend to let her know well in advance as only a limited number can be accommodated. Bridge instruction is provided.

Citizens' Charter.

The citizens' charter committee has reported on the charter drawn by Marvin Underwood and all league members are urged to give prompt attention to the mail which they receive Tuesday which will explain the part the league will take in helping that committee secure a mammoth petition to present to our legislators from Fulton county asking for an election on the charter in May, 1926.

For many years the league has stood for a council manager charter and the first step toward the charter is for the legislature to allow a referendum to the Atlanta voters on the question.

The organization committee which would regularly meet on next Thursday has been postponed on account of the work the league members will be doing in securing the petition to the legislators.

MRS. CARLISLE WILL SPONSOR BENEFIT BRIDGE

Mrs. J. S. Short, secretary of the home demonstration office, chairman, and Miss Lucy Wood, Fulton county home demonstration agent, co-chairman, will sponsor a benefit bridge-party for the Fulton County Club girls at the Ansley roof garden June 24.

There are about 125 girls in the rural districts over the county organized into clubs. In these clubs they are given instructions in canning, cookery, sewing, health and hygiene. Each girl is also required to cultivate a garden and keep a daily record of it. She markets her products either fresh or canned and starts a go-to-college fund and at the end of her four-year program she should at least have $200 in the bank for her education.

It is the desire to send a group of these girls to the state short course camp at Athens where they will come in contact with hundreds of girls from all over the state. They will also meet the college people in their class work and see educational institution there lending them inspiration for further training.

While at this camp the girls are given lectures daily on different subjects, such as foods, health, hygiene and clothing. They also have quite a lot of wholesome recreation, such as swimming, hiking, games, etc.

On Wednesday, June 24, from 3 to 5 o'clock at the Ansley roof garden a large number of Atlanta women will be present. They may be assured of a pleasant afternoon and be helping a good cause at the same time.

Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, chairman of home economics department for the Atlanta Woman's club, is sponsoring this project. She will appreciate the members of her department as well as the other members of the Atlanta Woman's club attending this party and bringing their friends.

Tickets will be on sale at the Atlanta Woman's club and for further reservations call Hemlock 2727-J.

The committee has some splendid prizes, such as home-made cakes, live chickens, cut flowers, ties, cake pans, flour, mayonnaise, Wesson oil, canned fruit, powder, baskets of fresh vegetables, blackberries, dry cleaning tickets, moving picture tickets, corn flakes, novelties of every description.

West End Woman's Club To Concentrate on Public Welfare

Public welfare will be an outstanding feature of the year's work of the West End Woman's club, so through the three divisions the entire membership will have a chance to serve in some way.

Child welfare, of which Mrs. J. B. Withers is chairman, will concentrate its efforts largely upon the Atlanta Childs' home. The committee meets one day each week to sew for the children, last week 31 garments were finished and turned over to the home. Club members who prefer doing the work at home will be furnished material upon request.

Public welfare, of which Mrs. J. I. Oxford is chairman, will endeavor to better conditions of jails, prisons and convict camps, and hopes to establish an employment bureau whereby ex-convicts may obtain work. A request has been made for good books and magazines, those desiring to contribute will please call Mrs. Oxford at Walnut 1330-J.

Hospital, of which Mrs. Julius Spier is chairman, in addition to the Albert Steiner clinic, will sponsor a part of ward A of the Grady hospital. Mrs. Spier has one of the largest and most enthusiastic committees of the club.

Citizenship, of which Mrs. D. F. Deen, is chairman, will try to create more interest in registering and voting and will present matters to the club that women should know and be interested in.

Wednesday, June 24, will be the second business meeting of the month. The election of trustees will take place at this meeting and a full attendance is urged.

Mrs. Chester Johnson, chairman of the building committee, has announced that the lot given to the club by the Cascade Heights sub-division, for the building fund, will be disposed of on the afternoon of July 4, at the club, 305 Gordon street. The holder of the lucky ticket may have choice of a beautiful lot on Venetian drive or any other lot in the sub-division. Those who have books containing tickets are asked to return them to Mrs. Johnson at the first club meeting in July.

Woman's Bible Club To Meet Thursday.

The Woman's Union Bible club meets each Thursday morning with Mrs. T. R. Kendall, Jr., teacher in Wesley Memorial church. The lesson for Thursday morning, June 25, will be the last seven chapters of the Book of Revelations.

All women and girls are cordially invited to attend.

Japanese girls have formed a society in Tokio to which only women are admitted who have discarded the traditional hair arrangements of Japan for the modern bob.

The Cat Comes Back---

Ever try to get rid of a cat? Every time you think it's gone for good you find it on the doorstep next morning. Isn't that pretty much like your weekly washing? Every time you think it's finished it comes back next week to be done all over again.

You can't get rid of the weekly bundle—but you can rid yourself of the bother and worry by sending it to the laundry.

When your clothes go to the laundry, they are sorted for fabric and color. They are washed ever so gently in a revolving cylinder, with only the mildest of white soap in rain-soft water. They are rinsed in water clear as crystal, hundreds of gallons of it, and then they are ironed by expert ironers who give your things that "professional" laundry touch.

There's a laundry service to suit your needs. Tell your laundry what they are and they will tell you the best service for you to use.

Be fair to your clothes. Don't insult them by making them visit the washtub, washboard, and wringer.

Going Out of Town?

Vacation time is right around the corner. If you're going to the mountains or the seashore or no matter where—you'll find your laundry service on parcel post packages is prompt and reliable. Just parcel post your things in to the laundry. That's all that you have to do.

Georgia Federation President Gives Biennial Council Message

The first biennial council to which we have looked forward for so long has come and gone, leaving in our minds the recollection of splendid achievements. Harmony of thought and action characterized everything that was done and a spirit of unselfish devotion to all the work of the Federation pervaded the meeting. The completion of the Greater Tallulah has made possible greater opportunities and in the future we must continue to build on the foundation already ours and continue to extend our fields of usefulness. Every department of our organization is strong and worth while and it is my hope that great effort may be put forth during the year to come, so that we may have a record of greater and more active service than ever before. State chairmen should keep in close touch with district presidents, in order that their plans and messages may be sent out to the individual clubs, properly and promptly. This point cannot be too strongly stressed for without prompt and continued cooperation little can be done.

With the coming of summer, there is ever a tendency to lay aside our responsibilities and take a vacation from club work, but in order to get the results we need, the work should go on, and our schedule is so arranged now that interest in the work is held at all times if we will avail ourselves of our opportunities. Our club institute, to be held at the University of Georgia July 7 to 11, inclusive, offers advantages of the highest order and those who have attended these institutes in previous years realize their practical and lasting value to club workers. I hope to see a large attendance at the club institute in Athens.

With district meetings beginning in October there will be something to hold the interest of club members actively for a great part of the year and this contact with other people and other channels of thought should be of great value to the work.

My sincere thanks are given the women of the Federation for all they have done and my earnest thoughts shall be with them in what they may do in the coming year. You have been an inspiration and a help to me and the best I can give you in return is yours at all times.

Sincerely yours,
ELLA F. BRANTLEY,
(MRS. A. P. BRANTLEY)

Crawford Club Comes Second in Gavel Contest

The June meeting of the Crawford Woman's club was a most interesting and inspiring one. The usual opening exercises were carried out and the business of the club was taken up. In the absence of Mrs. Gray Hanna, chairman of the club house grounds, the president gave her outline of work planned for the year. The committee appointed to assist the junior organization in beautifying the grounds of the club house, consisted of Mrs. Little, Mrs. Coile and Mrs. King.

A letter of appreciation from the senior class of the Crawford High school was read by the president, for the beautiful reception tendered them at the club house recently. A letter was received from the library commission offering a loan of plan books and other volumes of which the club cheerfully voted to take advantage.

The meeting at Tallulah Falls was brought before the club by Mrs. Howard and she urged some of the members to attend if possible.

Mrs. Blanchard and Mrs. Coile reported the district meeting held recently in Hartwell and the club was aroused to great enthusiasm over the praise given the club by district and state leaders. It came second in winning the gavel, Hartwell having beat by only one point. Mrs. Brantley, the state president, stated that the club was 100 per cent excellent and the distinction was too hard for her to make, so she appointed a committe to figure the points in their minutest detail, and by the most careful consideration, finally gave the gavel to Hartwell. Our state president stated that she had never seen more accurate and more beautifully gotten up reports which compliment our club appreciated for its president. The honor of winning the gavel last year at Lavonia was ours and of course we shall never be satisfied with less than doing our best.

The club voted to send all old ties and sacks to Tallulah school to be made into rugs. After the business meeting a beautiful program on "Education" was presented as follows: Reading, "Education of a Child," Mrs. Blanchard; "The Land of Beginning Anew," Miss Lena Smith; "The Origin of Life," Mrs. George Little; "The Value of Right Foundations," Mrs. W. J. England; song, by Mrs. Ed Coile.

Mrs. Kell and Mrs. Charlie Adams served a delicious salad course and the meeting adjourned.

Mrs. Lamar Accepts Gifts In Behalf of Tallulah Trustees

Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, of Macon, a member of the board of trustees of the Tallulah Falls Industrial school, which the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs recently dedicated. She accepted the memorials, name gifts and scholarships which were presented by Mrs. Bolling Jones, state chairman.

In her usual charming and eloquent manner Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, of Macon, a trustee in the Tallulah Falls school, assumed the trust of the memorials, name gifts and scholarships, presented by Mrs. Bolling Jones, the state chairman, at the first biennial council held at Tallulah Falls by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, from June 8 to 12, inclusive. Mrs. Lamar accepted these gifts on behalf of the state school in the following well-chosen and beautiful words:

"In that wonderful canvas of Raphael's known as the Sistine Madonna, stands out commandingly the figure of the Mother and Child. At Mary's feet kneel visible worshippers, but out from the heavens above look lovely spirits, seen faintly as through a mist, but beaming love, joy and sweet devotion today we behold 'Our Lady of the Federation,' carrying in her arms, her beloved child, the child of the mountains, that she has found and that she is teaching all Georgia to love and work for. As her servitors, there are many whose zeal knows no limit, whose good works do shine, and who, having tasted the joy of serving here at Tallulah, will never yield the right to do so. Grateful acknowledgment of these witnesses and pledge of continued cooperation is one of the joys of this longed-for day. In assuming for the school the memorials, the service tributes and name gifts, we rejoice that so many of the givers and those honored in the naming are still striving to make Greater Tallulah, even greater. Up the heights, together we will go, there to lay at the feet of the federation our gifts, more precious than gold or frankincense or myrrh. To those sainted souls that are looking from out the heavens today, souls whose work for Tallulah while they were in like speaks for them, let us make a special form of assumption.

Isma Dooly Honored.

Thy clear keen joyaunce,
Langour cannot know!"

Thus do we think of Isma Dooly, one of the builders of our people, that Georgia must never forget to honor. Her brain was ever giving off brilliances, tempered with love. Her pen fought for the underprivileged wherever found, her heart caressed its friends and strove to help them realize their ideals. Her trenchant blade was sharp against wrong and ever ready to do battle for the right. God gave us Isma that she might express love, courage, faith and heavenly humor that draws together men of all creeds.

Realization of responsibility is not indisputable, unless those claiming it are ready to sustain the trust by concerted action in behalf of greater and surer development. The permanent value that this plant shall be to the mountain people and through them to the state of Georgia, depends upon the continued outpouring of interest anad money towards this school of citizenship. Not the citizenship which is represented merely by a ballot, but a citizenship as old as the ten commandments, a citizenship which shall sweep down from these hills with power to remove from our long suffering commonwealth, the stigma of lawlessness. God has reserved this mighty stream of pure Anglo-Saxonism unto his own good time and is letting us have a part in its direction.

Assuming Memorials.

In assuming these memorials we acknowledge the duty of starting our younng friends of the mountains on the way to help the state in her future problems. Thus may we build against the insidious radicalism that is sweeping into and over our land. We look to the hills from whencé cometh our help and thus is established a partnership that can augur good alone to mountains and to lowlands. These stones, this mortar, those nails and this timber so deftly united shall become to us, not merely buildings to which people come, but a mighhty orgauism from which shall go forth influence, positive for good. Georgia arise and salute Tallulah Falls school! The light in the mountains! Georgia hold out your arms to Tallulah Falls school! The heart of the federation! May the blessing of the Almighty descend upon and abide with Tallulah Falls school. The tie that binds lowlands auad highlands.

Georgia Federation Adopts Badge At First Council

At the meeting of the executive board at Tallulah Falls the beautiful badge designed for the delegates to wear at West Baden was adopted as the official state badge, and Mrs. Arthur Haxard was empowered to investigate the possibilities of having the die made so that in future the badge so much admired at West Baden would be seen at all state meetings. This badge is of green ribbon, with the state flower, cherokee rose, painted upon it, and with the word "Georgia" in white letters. The badge worn by the Georgia delegates at West Baden was decidedly the prettiest one worn by any state delegation.

Notes From Biennial.

Resolutions of any meeting are, after all, the real results of all discussion and plans for that meeting, and those passed by the biennial council are of interest to Georgia club women. Many suggestions other than resolutions were adopted, among them the revising of constitutions and by-laws of clubs to conform as nearly as compatible with those of the general federation. Especially were the clubs urged to have meetings and elections in the spring as far as possible that when the dues were paid to the general federation, the accompanying list of officers would be current. The advantage of this to both state clubs and general federation is obvious.

The resolution to continue the campaign for the Shepard-Towner bill met general approval.

That we need a national marriage and divorce law, one that each state will accept was most conslusively shown, and the clubs were urged to work for the passage of the bill, which is the handiwork of our own Mrs. Edward Franklin White. A most alarming note was sounded when the following resolution was read: "Whereas, the plan for destruction revolution in the United States by international communists is not a myth, but a proven fact. Whereas, the plan to overthrow the government of our republic set up a communist soviet rule in its place is well organized, is far-reaching, including attacks on the church, the courts and the government generally, be it

"Resolved, That the General Federation of Women's Clubs make a definite study of this danger to our institutions from attacks by enemies without and enemies within our republic."

When proof of this assertion was asked, it was furnished by Mrs. Sherman.

Junior Department Resolution.

The resolution introduced by the junior department, "That we urge every club woman to use her influence to abolish all commercial beauty and bathing beauty shows," was unanimously adopted. The discussion regarding these shows revealed no good which could possibly come of them and that possibilites of great harm; the lowering of standards for the young people was the inevitable result, was the opinion of the body of women.

Many other important resolutions were passed which will come to the clubs later. All clubs are urged to send in at once the answer to the questionnaires sent out from headquarters regarding the home survey. As this will form a part of the history of our country, it is most essential that the questionaires be answered and sent in at once. Mrs. Sherman requests this, almost as a personal favor.

MRS. ALONZO RICHARDSON,
Director for Georgia in the General Federation.

Mrs. Albert Hill Makes Annual Georgia Federation Report

Mrs. Albert M. Hill, of Greenville, treasurer of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs in her annual report to the first biennial council says:

"It gives me great pleasure to present the financial report of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs for the past seven months. It represents the remarkable achievement of our twelve faithful and efficient district treasurers under most unusual conditions. As you know the dues, rate and the time for the payment of dues, were changed at the Atlanta convention last November. Since that time 248 clubs have paid their dues in full to both state and general federation, leaving 87 clubs yet to pay, according to our year book directory. This may seem a large number in arrears, but it is smaller than at the last two conventions, when there had been a year for collections. Some few of these clubs may be disorganized.

"To the twelfth district, our smallest district, goes the distinction of being the first district paid in full this year. The fifth district has the remarkable record of 51 paid up clubs with only a few remaining to pay. Since this district has by far the largest enrollment, Mrs. Smith's record represents untold work.

General Federation Dues.

To May 1 when our check for $1,126.25, general federation dues had to be paid, our general federation dues account lacked $222.90 of having enough money to meet it. So this amount was advanced from Georgia federation dues account. Only $12.90 of this remains to be paid back and enough money has come in to cover this small sum since my books closed for the auditor's work. His report shows that during the past seven months your treasurer has handled $4,675.51 and now has on deposit $1,127.88 with outstanding checks amounting to $164.16.

Mrs. Westberry, treasurer of second district, has issued cards on which are listed the various funds, etc., to which they are expected to contribute and the address to which such contributions should be sent. The list includes state and general federation, Ella F. White fund, Tallulah Falls school, student aid foundation, district dues, etc. I recommend that similar cards be issued by each district through the treasurer. I feel sure this will prove most helpful to all.

"This is the first year that we have had a fund for the maintenance of headquarters, the 10 cent per capita increase in dues being or that specific purpose. Up to date this fund has approximated $800, with an expenditure of $755.75 for maintenance and $125.48 for permanent office furnishings. If the remaining 87 unpaid clubs send their dues in promptly, headquarters can be financed for the rest of the year without encroaching on our regular funds. Club presidents, please remember that dues for 1926 are in order January 1. See that your treasurer sends your check promptly to the district treasurer, thereby incurring her sincere appreciation and saving her many unnecessary letters.

"Your attention must be called to the note for $940 still owed by hte Georgia federation. This amount is the balance still due on the sum borrowed about three years ago to pay our pledge to general federation headquarters. I am sorry to report that contributions to this fund have come in very slowly, painfully slow, it has seemed to Mrs. Inman and your treasurer, who are the personal indorsers of your note, and to Mrs. Richardson, your general federation director, who feels the responsibility for raising the funds to pay this indebtedness. Won't you urge your clubs to contribute to this cause at once and so make it possible to close the matter?

In conclusion let me thank you, one and all, for your cooperation and for those 12 splendid district treasurers who have made this report possible.

"Mrs. Albert M. Hill, treasurer."

Mrs. Stevens Makes Report For Atlanta Federatioon

Mrs. T. T. Stevens, retiring president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs, made a remarkable record of achievements during her administration, and in the reading of her report last Wednesday at the all-day session held in the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium, the following outstanding points were brought forth. Mrs. Stevens said:

"In bringing to you a record of my stewardship as president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs from October 4, 1922 to the present day, June 17, 1925, I wish first of all to express my deepest appreciation of the confidence you placed in me by choosing me to lead this great organization and to express further appreciation for your ever-ready and unfailing support given me in all our undertakings. The Atlanta Federation, which has the distinction of being one of the largest federations in the country and which is the clearing house of women's activities in this community, embraces in its activities every phase of community life, philanthropic, cultural and educational. The Atlanta federation in its nearly 27 years of existence has had a conspicuous part in the development of the civic consciousness of Atlanta and no movement for the betterment of the community has been undertaken but that this organization has been called to take a leading part.

Talks on Biennial Council.

"This meeting, coming as it does at the close of the Georgia federation's biennial council held at Tallulah Falls school, brings to our attention immediately the fact that in the production of the marvelous enlarged school which we have so recently visited, the federation had a part so large that it totaled one-half the entire sum raised for Greater Tallulah resulting in the naming of the school building for the Atlanta federation. A bronze tablet on the front of the building bears the name of this organization. This building is modern and up-to-date in every detail and is a model of its kind, and has in it the Isma Dooly auditorium and the Ellen Ottley McCabe library in memory of two valued members of Atlanta federation. Mrs. McCabe was president of the federation 1905 to 1907. Miss Dooly was head of the federation press work for a number of years.

"Memorial tributes to the founders of Atlanta Federation, Mrs. Julia Brown and Mrs. W. P. Pattilo, who were also presidents of the federation, Mrs. Brown from 1898 to 1899, and Mrs. Pattilo from 1899 to 1901, have been established in the form of two perpetual scholarships of $2,000, at the Tallulah Falls school. These scholarships were to have been paid for at the rate of $200 a year each until completed. In 18 months we have paid $1,000 on each scholarship —$2,000 in all, which leaves only a remaining $1,000 on each scholarship to be paid in the next three years. Launching the campaign for funds for the founders' scholarship was a series of three lectures on psychology, given by Dr. Blanche Grosbec Loveridge, chairman of the division of literature for the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Dr. Loveridge compiled her first series of lectures, which were published in book form and sold for the scholarship fund. Another effort put forth by our Atlanta federation was a lovely lawn fete and bridge party given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Stone, May 22. This party added $400 to our scholarship fund.

"At the executive board meeting of the federation held at East Lake Country club in August, 1924, which was followed almost immediately by a large luncheon held at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, when Miss Nannie C. Davis, principal of the Tallulah Falls school, and several of the students were guests of honor, there was launched the campaign in Atlanta for the greater Tallulah movement. Your president was one of the four women chosen by the board of trustees of Tallulah to go to Chicago in July to aid in the benefit production of 'Sun Up' for our mountain school. At a large meeting of the Presidents club of the Parent-Teacher association held at the James L. Key school last year, it was my privilege to bring the message of our mountain school to that great body of workers in the interest of education.

Hostess to Convention.

Atlanta federation was hostess to state convention of Georgia federation November 11 to 14, 1924. Entertaining this large body of women is an outstanding piece of work for any group of women and the fact that our federation entertained the convention brilliantly and had money left in the treasury is a matter that we can congratulate ourselves upon. Letters and telegrams received from all over the state proclaimed it one of the most successful and far-reaching in its results ever held by Georgia federation. Armistice day was selected as the opening day for the convention and the significance of the day was brought out in the program which linked with the federation the American Legion in a patriotic program. General John F. O'Ryan of New York a brilliant speaker and member of the Non-Partisan League of Nations association, was a guest of the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs and delivered the main address on this occasion. Notables present included Governor Walker, Mayor Walter A. Sims, General Davis Shanks, other military officials, the commander of the American Legion and state and national heads of women's kindred and patriotic organizations. A proclamation was issued by Mayor Walter A. Sims making this meeting the city's Armistice day observance, which was held at the Baptist Tabernacle, and was attended by several thousand people. Earlier on that day Atlanta federation presented to the city of Atlanta a handsome United States flag for the flagpole at Five Points. The flag was raised by Colonel Ryburn of the 4th corps area and his military aides, with members of the Atlanta federation, Mayor Sims and the members of the American Legion attending the ceremony. Mayor Sims in a short address accepted the flag on behalf of the city of Atlanta. The convention sessions were held at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel and each day the delegates were guests of the federation at luncheon. Those luncheons were marked by the presence of distinguished guests, including General O'Ryan, Colonel Jason A. Joy of New York, representing the Hays motion picture organization, newspaper representatives from all over the state and leaders along various lines of endeavor who were here for the convention. An innovation was the inspection of the model cake factory of the south, the F. O. Stone baking plant. Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Stone entertained at a buffet supper after the inspection. Art was emphasized through the courtesy of Mr. J. J. Haverty and Miss May Haverty, who entertained the convention at a buffet supper at Villa Claire, followed by an inspection of the beautiful pictures which adorn the Haverty home. Entertainment features of the convention began with a reception given by our largest club, the Atlanta Woman's club, this being also the birthday celebration of that organization.

Wednesday afternoon, November 12, was featured by a visit to United States hospital No. 48, which brings us in this account to a great achievement of the Atlanta federation, the construction of the beautiful stone shelter at the car stop in front of the hospital. This visit was arranged by Mrs. H. M. Nicholes, chairman of soldiers' relief work for the Atlanta federation, in order that the women of Georgia might have the privilege of visiting the wounded world war soldiers, and see first hand what they themselves, as organized groups, might do for these boys. Details of this visit included a speech from General John F. O'Ryan, music by the military band of Fort McPherson, inspection of the stone shelter erected by Atlanta federation and a reception in the hospital when the members of the convention were given the privilege of meeting the doctors, nurss and patients.

"In taking up the subject of the stone shelter in front of the hospital I pause to pay tribute to Mrs. H. M. Nicholes, loyal and devoted chairman of soldier activities for the federation. Mrs. Nicholes is untiring in her efforts for the comfort and pleasure of our wounded soldiers and she has led us into splendid accomplishment for them. It was Mrs. Nicholes who brought the suggestion of the need of the shelter to your president. The federation immediately set out with Mrs. Nicholes as guiding star to give our boys a place to wait for the street cars, sheltered from all kinds of weather. The plans first conceived were not so pretentious as later developed. Working with Mrs. Nicholes through the summer and fall we secured aid from the counties of Fulton and DeKalb and the city of Atlanta, together with the federated clubs and friends of the federation with the result that on May 12, 1925, a National Hospital day, an imperishable shelter of stone was dedicated to the World war soldiers as a gift from the Atlanta federation. Doctor William Russell Owen of Macon was the principal speaker. The cornerstone was sealed by the Masons and attended by the Grand Master, J. D. Hamrick, of Carrollton, Ga. In the cornerstone was placed the history of each club in the Atlanta federation. Other soldier relief work done by the federation was the gift of a handsome radio set at Christmas in honor of the 110 Georgia soldiers in the United States hospital No. 26 at Greenville, S. C. The radio set was christened by your president when she gave a message of cheer and good will to all wounded soldiers who were listening in, and especially to the Georgia boys in the Hospital No. 26. A brilliant concert broadcast from the Journal station, WSB, at the same hour included a band concert, vocal numbers, and a short address by Miss Moina Michael, of Athens, known as the "Poppy Lady." The Easter season of 1923 was also celebrated at the hospital by the Atlanta federation, an Easter lily being sent to each of the 110 boys in the hospital at Greenville. An orchestra furnished delightful music and refreshments were served the patients. In connection with the annual meeting of June, 1923, which was held in the Cycloroma building at Grant park, the federation entertained at a picnic in honor of the doctors, nurses and patients of hospital No. 48. Other entertainments given for the hospital patients was a theater party at the Metropolitan theater to see the Abraham Lincoln film, and a party at the Junior League carnival last year. Your president had the pleasure of writing an article, be request, on our duty to ex-service men, which appeared in the Atlanta papers January 21, 1923.

Federation Assumes Fund.

"Mrs. H. M. Nicholes' report will cover in detail all soldiers' activities. Before leaving the subject, however, your attention is called to the fact that the federation assumed $500 to raise for the American Legion endowment fund during the recent national campaign which was put forth throughout the United States. Your president was honored by being placed on the state committee headed by ex-Governor Hugh M. Dorsey, and was a guest and one of the speakers at the dinner given in honor of Commander Drain, national commander of the American Legion, when the Georgia campaign for the endowment fund was launched. She also served as a member of the advisory committee of the Atlanta committee for the legion endowment fund which was headed by Asa Warren Candler. A movement in connection with out soldier boys which has been launched by the federation and which has been given special attention by your president, who hopes to carry to completion this important work, is the marking of the camp sites used by American soldiers during the world war. A visit to Washington in February in the interest of marking the camp sites and an interview with Senator W. J. Harris, and General Hart of the war department resulted in assurances that a bill will be introduced in the next congress whereby the government will be asked to appropriate sufficient money to properly mark and to preserve the history of each of the camp sites.

"One of the greatest honors that has come to me as your president was the appointment by Mayor Walter A. Sims as chairman of the city of Atlanta of the memorial exercises in memory of our war president, Woodrow Wilson, held at the same hour the funeral was being conducted in Washington, D. C. This appointment came as a result of a suggestion made by me that such a memorial hour be held in Atlanta, the city honored by the residence of Mr. Wilson for a short time. A telegram expressing the sympathy of the women of Atlanta was sent to Mrs. Wilson and was acknowledged by her. Your president is also a member of the memorial committee for a permanent memorial in Atlanta in honor of Mr. Wilson. You were represented by your president on the committee which arranged the memorial hour in memory of President Warren G. Harding. Another appointment I was called upon to fill was to represent the city of Atlanta on a milk commission appointed by Mayor Sims. The work of the commission resulted in a law being passed to standardize Atlanta milk.

"At the request of our past president, Mrs. Albert Thornton, who represented the American Red Cross, the Atlanta federation put on a drive for the Japanese relief fund, with Mrs. Spencer Atkinson as general chairman, which resulted in over $3,000 being added, in one day, to Atlanta's quota for the relief of the Japanese in the terrible earthquake of 1923. This drive was launched at a meeting of the executive board of the Atlanta federation which was in session at the Piedmont Driving club on September 12, 1923. Mrs. John Marshall Slaton was appointed by your president as chairman of the last Red Cross roll call, which was held in November, 1922. The roll call for the Red cross had been sponsored in Atlanta by the federation each year, and the appointment of Mrs. Slaton received hearty support of the women of Atlanta.

"General David Shanks, commander of the fourth corps area, oppointed your president chairman of the women of Atlanta for Defense Day, September 12, 1924. Participating in the Defense Day program besides the army, navy and national guard were the ex-soldiers and all groups of citizens, including the men and women of Atlanta. As one of the founders, and a vice president of the Stone Mountain Memorial association, your president was requested to act as official hostess for the unveiling of General Lee's head at Stone mountain, January 19, 1923. This was a labor of love and met the heartiest support from the women of Atlanta, who were the hospitality committee at the headquarters at the Ansley hotel, who furnished the cars for the conveyance of the several hundred people from all over the United States who gathered here for the great occasion. To arrange for this undertaking headquarters were established at the chamber of commerce. Through Alfred Newell, who is the husband of our first vice president, and who was president of the Atlanta chamber of commerce in 1923, permanent headquarters were given to the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs in the Chamber of Commerce building. This generous gift of space has been used from time to time when the federation has had special need of headquarters, as in its Tallulah Falls school campaign for the convention arrangements, and for the Defense day campaign.

For 15 years the Atlanta Federation as the originator of a semi-annual clean-up campaign, through its president, Mrs. Sam D. Jones, has supported this important movement. Three years ago, at the request of the Atlanta federation, the clean-up campaign became a part of the city of Atlanta's program, with the cooperation and help of the Atlanta federation. This year the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce took over the clean-up campaign, and has made it a permanent activity of that organization. The Atlanta federation will always have a leading part in the clean-up campaign of Atlanta because of the pioneer work which our organization did before the city took notice of this special work. We feel that this important work is now in proper hands, as the chamber of commemrce, with its paid secretaries, can keep the records from year to year, giving continuity to the work.

Invited to Serve.

"Among the honors cherished by your president was the appointment to serve two years on the board of the Opportunity school which the federation has sponsored and helped to preserve, and the appointment by Mr. Hancock, president of the board of education, on a committee to make a survey to find the needs and ways of helping the schools. The Atlanta federation, through Mrs. Joseph Moody and Mrs. Harry Goodhart, led a movement to establish the police woman's bureau in Atlanta. The federation has acted as hostess at the Grand Central Art galleries art exhibit in 1924 and 1925—has given unstinted aid in establishing and maintaining the symphony orchestra has urged registration before each election, has aided in the purchase of Snapbean farm to complete the memorial to Joel Chandler Harris, has aided in the better homes program each year, has helped with the community Christmas pageant, has emphasized the exhibit of the National Association of Women Painters and Sculptors held at the Atlanta Woman's club, March 15, 1924, has stressed the importance of the work being done by the Grady Hospital auxiliary, has emphasized garden week, has put forward the civic programs of the Atlanta club, has taken an active part in the forestry convention held in Atlanta, has especially stressed national music week, has emphasized Arbor day, urged the Children's Founders bell for the Stone Mountain memorial in the beginning of that work, has extended a general invitation to all club women from Mrs. Plato Durham to attend the opening of the new Wesley Memorial hospital, as president of the federation was one of the memory day committee of Atlanta chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, is also a member of the Salvation Army executive board, and gave aid to the Couer de Lion Commandery, Royal Arch Masons, in the production of Pandora.

"Our federation has had the pleasure of bringing to Atlanta the following speakers of note: Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the most noted woman speaker on the platform today, brought to Atlanta through our efforts and presented at the Grand Theater on Sunday afternoon, March 1, to an overflowing audience. Her lecture on "World Peace" was a remarkable message. Mrs. Lula Shepherd, of Utah, a speaker of distinction, brought to the federation on March 27, 1924, a message on "World Peace," which stirred her listners to enthusiasm. At this meeting the federation adopted the general federations peace program as presented by Mrs. Samuel M. Inman. The federation has also had the privilege of joining with other groups recently in presenting to Atlanta, Dr. Hamilton Holt, of New York, who gave a masterful address on the League of Nations. Other speakers of note who have complimented the Atlanta federation were: Clayton Hamilton, of New York, critic and author, who gave a delightful morning talk on the "Drama of the 18th Century." Miss Ruth Egge, of New York, another delightful lecturer, spoke before the Atlanta federation at its meeting in March on "Antique and Modern Silver." Miss Egge brought with her a rare collection of antique silver which she used to illustrate her talk. Specially to be noted among the social attentions accorded your president have been attendance at a luncheon given for the national president of the American Legion Auxiliary, receiving at the Atlanta Woman's club at its reception in honor of the governor and the legislature and in honor of the Service Star Legion, representing the federation on the better films committee, speaking in New York before the welfare committee of the Russell Sage foundation. Your president was entertained at luncheon at the New York Woman's club by Mrs. Elizabeth Duessez, head of the educational department of the Pathe Film corporation, entertained by Mrs. Ida Clyde Clarke, associate editor of the Pictorial Review, at dinner at the National Arts club, entertained at luncheon in the state dining room in Washington by Senator William J. Harris, of Georgia; invited to speak at the Club Institute in Athens last year; addressed the sixth district meeting at Barnesville in 1924; spoke before the Pike County federation in April, and represented the Atlanta federation at the East Point Woman's club barbecue recently when their campaign was launched for a club building; was a guest of the Americanization committee of the Parent-Teacher Association council at luncheon. Your president has had the pleasure of entertaining the executive committee of the federation in her home in January, 1923, and has been honored by being entertained together with the officers of the federation by Mrs. Arthur I. Harris, secretary, at luncheon at her home in Druid Hills; by Mrs. H. G. Hastings, vice president at tea at the East Lake Country club; by Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, past president of the federation at tea at the Driving club; by Mrs. R. K. Rambo, vice president, at tea at her home in Druid Hills, and by a luncheon given by our auditor, Mrs. F. J. Paxon, at the Piedmont Driving club, May 27. She also attended the house warming given recently by the West End Civic club. The Atlanta federation has had the distinction of entertaining at luncheon during the general federation biennial council which met in Atlanta in May, 1923, the officers and general chairman of the general federation and entertained the members of the Service Star Legion convention at afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. F. O. Stone in Druid Hills, on May 22, and has had the distinction of having as its guests, Mrs. Val Taylor, president of the Alabama federation, and Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blacksbear, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

"The present administration with its efforts for the uplift and betterment of the community places its record before you. I could not close the report, however, without paying a tribute to those women of the federation who have stood the acid test of heroic effort in season and out of season, for the campaign for our greater Tallulah work was launched last summer in the hottest weather Atlanta has ever known. It must be recorded that our women went forward with determination to work for the under-privileged children of the mountains without murmer or complaint.

Loyal Support.

"To you my dear friends of the Atlanta federation, and I will call you that after we have worked together for the past two and one-half years, my heart goes out to you in loving appreciation for your loyal support in all that we have attempted to do for the good of mankind. The greatness of our federation lies in the fact that we bind our efforts together for the common good of the whole, and in the past two and one-half years I have learned to know, to love and to value you for your true worth. As we stand here today this June 17, 1925, I would say unhesitatingly there is no task too great for you to accomplish, and looking toward the future for greater achievements by this great organization than ever accomplished in the past. I will watch your every step forward with the keenest interest. To the Atlanta newspapers, The Constitution the Journal and the Georgian, who have given unstinted space to our work—to the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce for valuable assistance always when needed, and to all of our friends who have helped in the active program of the federation for the past two years we extend our sincere and heartfelt appreciation."

Friends of Tallulah Make Liberal Gifts to the Work

Georgia clubwomen went to the biennial council at Tallulah with a feeling of pride and joy as they looked forward to the dedication of the completed plant of the Greater Tallulah and the dedication of the memorials to those who helped in this great work and passed on leaving it to the workers of today to carry on. In the midst of all of this rejoicing along came friends of the work and made gifts, some of them wonderful and unexpected gifts to help keep the light burning in the mountains and to prevent great minds going to waste.

Lewis H. Beck Makes Gift.

The most notable of these was the gift of Lewis H. Beck for $10.000 and which was a big surprise Mrs. McCall had vaguely hinted at but had kept the secret so well that she was the only one who knew of it until it was announced. Mrs. McCall, through whom the gift was made by Mr. Beck, was made one of three trustees of the fund, the other two being Mrs. John K. Ottley and Mrs. Samuel M. Inman. The five perpetual scholarships that this fund will provide will keep five girls at school for all time to come and the good that their lives will be to the state an ever-widening circle blessing the big-hearted philanthropist who has made many other gifts to worthy causes. Mr. Beck could not be induced to go to Tallulah but the Atlanta Federation had him as a guest of honor at the luncheon on Wednesday when the annual meeting of the federation was held and "Uncle Lewis," as he is affectionately called, was told of the appreciation, love and affection in which he is held.

The Atlanta federation under the capable leadership of Mrs. T. T. Steele, a woman who is heart and soul in love with mountain school work and all work of the federation, has more than paid their quota of $20,000 and at the council announced that the Atlanta federation would establish two perpetual scholarships to be called founders scholarships in honor of Mrs. Frances Fort Brown and Mrs. Sallie Chase Patillo, two noble women who did much for the organized work of women in the early days of organizations. Another gift in memory of Mrs. Brown was the check sent by her sister, Mrs. S. F. Milton, of Chattanooga, in her letter of regret at not being able to attend the council.

Many Other Gifts.

The State Association for the Education of Georgia Mountaineers, Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan, president, and state headquarters, Savannah, gave a perpetual scholarship of $2,000. Mrs. Richard P. Brooks, of Forsyth, gave a perpetual scholarship of $2,000 to be called the Dosia Head Brooks perpetual scholarship. Mrs. Kelly Evans, Hot Springs, Va., gave a perpetual scholarship of $2,000 to be called the Letitia Pate Evans perpetual scholarship.

1925 Debutantes club of Atlanta, Miss Harriet Shedden, president, gave a perpetual scholarship of $2,000.

Mrs. M. E. Judd, of Dalton, gave $100 for starting the feather industry in the crafts department of the school, so adding to the beauty and income of the crafts department.

Mrs. Sam D. Jones, president, gave the furnishings for the dining room of the trustees guesthouse. The furnishings for the bedroom of the guesthouse were given by Mrs. Eugene Harrington, chairman of the Atlanta Tallulah Falls Junior Circle.

Valley Hills Manufacturing company, of LaGrange, gave two nice 9x12 art squares. Young Matrons' club of Winder, Mrs. G. L. Johns, president, gave a crocheted afghan. Sixteen matrons made 15 squares each.

Mrs. G. L. Garrett, of Barnesville, gave a reference library and $60 for teachers' supplies. The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Will H. Hays, president, made a gift of a projector and screen and a continuous supply of pictures. A friend gave a fund for building a reservoir for the water supply.

The Remington Typewriter Company, E. D. Trotti and H. B. Plage local managers, gave a fine, new Remington typewriter, through Mrs. H. M. Nichols.

Stone Mountain coins were given to each of the children, the gift of Robert Pegram. Mrs. Charles Haden, Mrs. John MacDougald, Mrs. Sam D. Jones and Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith. The coins were presented by Mrs. S. M. Inman.

Celeste Parrish Scholarship.

The board of trustees established a scholarship to be called the Celeste C. Parrish perpetual scholarship in honor of this great woman who not only did so much for education in Georgia but was closely identified with the work of Tallulah. Miss Parish was acting as supervisor of schools when Miss Davis took charge of the work at Tallulah. The Board has only established one other scholarship and that was for Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan and was established on the completion of the cycle.

The board of trustees made Mrs. Howard McCall and Mrs. Bolling Jones directors for life as a recognition of the splendid service rendered the work at Tallulah. This is an honor rarely bestowed, the only time it has been done was when Mrs. H. B. Wey and Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan were made directors for life at the Athens convention in 1922 and it will probably be many years before it is conferred again.

The board of trustees voted to name the new cottage for Miss Nannie C. Davis in recognition of the wonderful work she has done, 10 years of service with no thought of self and all for the work and the children. Miss Davis worked with Mrs. Lipscomb and Mrs. Hugh Willet when those noble women were building what has grown into the present splendid school and plant.

Blackheads Go Quick By This Simple Method

Blackheads—big ones or little ones—soft ones or hard ones—on any part of the body, go quickly by a simple method that just dissolves them. To do this get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—and wash off. You'll wonder where the blackheads have gone. Pinching and squeezing blackheads only open the pores of the skin and leave them large and unsightly—while the simple application of calonite powder and the water dissolve them right out, leaving the skin soft and the pores in their natural condition.—(adv.)

Mrs. B. S. Thompson Describes Big Convention at Memphis

It is hard to write about a great convention because the outstanding feature of a convention is the atmosphere or spirit of the meeting which one cannot convey to another through the medium of pen or print.

It has been said many times since the Memphis convention that it was a failure, a loss of time and money. One who attended the W. M. U. meeting had no such feeling. While the S. B. C. was discussing the majority and minority report of certain committees, the W. M. U. was quietly planning ways and means of carrying out the great commission, remembering that our Savior said, "All power is given unto me," and that "I am with you always." So, from the opening devotional led by Miss Bonnie Ray, of China, on "If I be lifted up from the earth will draw all people unto me," on to the closing consecration service the spirit of Christ—which is love—reigned in the W. M. U. convention.

I have thought seriously over one thing since hearing the report of the convention. We have today more organizations than ever before, we have more mission study classes, more societies reaching standard of excellence, more women and young people enlisted and, yet, we have fallen off in gifts, Georgia taking seventh place. Why do not our women "abound in this grace" also? Do we teach our young people the joy of giving? Do we, by example teach them that as God has prospered us, so we are to give? One of the greatest appeals of the convention was from a young woman missionary, who told us that her greatest concern was not for the millions of heathen in darkness, not for the giving of her life to this task, but for the indifference of southern Baptist people. What a wonderful opportunity we have, with every door wide open, with men and women prepared to go and southern Baptists with money in their possession yet going carelessly on their way. My daily prayer is that we may realize our opportunity and our duty!

Beautiful Program At First Christian On Children's Day

Children's day at the First Christian church began by many happy, childish voices singing "Haste Zion, Haste." The program had been written and arranged by Mrs. N. T. Moore, missionary superintendent of the church school. Mrs. Moore, herself, related in a charming manner the story of the origin of Children's day. It was in 1880. At that time the Christian church (Disciples of Christ) did not have a single foreign missionary in the field. But the missionary sentiment was growing and a prominent place had been given to a discussion of the missionary movement in the national convention to be held that year in Louisville.

J. H. Garrison, one of the most prominent ministers of that time, was to address the convention in the interests of the foreign missionary work. The evening before starting to the convention Dr. Garrison called his family together for the usual evening prayers. He explained to the children in terms they could understand how that on the next day he was going to plead in his address that the church send out missionaries to heathen lands to preach the gospel to those who had never heard about Jesus coming into the world and dying on the cross because he loved us. He then prayed with them, in terms that the children could understand, about the address on the next day. After the prayer the three children were noticed putting their heads together, and presently they came bringing all their little savings of pennies, nickels and dimes tied up in a rag, and said: "This is all the money we've got, and we want it to go to helping those children who have never heard about Jesus."

When, on the following day, Dr. Garrison told in the convention the story of the children's offering it served as a challenge to those present so that they created a fund to which this children's gift was added and which served as a nucleus for a fund which has since sent many missionaries to the foreign field. At that convention a Children's day was appointed to be observed in the Bible schools once a year, and from that first fund of $1.13 the receipts have grown until this year we are confidently expecting the year's receipts to total a half-million dollars.

After Mrs. Moore's story the beginners and some of the primaries were brought to the platform and sang the old familiar "Jesus Loves Me." Then they sang the welcome song to two of their number who had been dressed, the one as a Japanese, the other as a Chinese child.

A visiting junior, Wilbur Kurtz, rendered a beautiful cornet solo, "Mighty Lak' a Rose." Bess Tinder, of the intermediate department, made a call for the offering and the program was concluded by the presentation of a poster showing what the missionary dollar does, while 10 young ladies from the Loyal Daughters class each told what a dime of the dollar accomplishes. The offering from the church school amounted to $155, which brought the offerings for the year well over the thousand-dollar mark.

"Large streams from little fountains flow;
Tall oaks from little acorns grow."

Tells How Japan Is Evangelized By Newspapers

It was the privilege of the writer to live and do missionary work for 30 years in Kumamoto, where, during part of the time Rev. Albertus Pieters, who was the founder of newspaper evangelism in Japan, lived. It was here that he began writing for the papers and had such success that an association for the promotion of newspaper evangelism was finally formed.

Missionaries have been working for many decades in Japan, telling to individuals the story of salvation; gathering around them classes of men and women, boys and girls, to whom they have taught the Bible both in Japanese and in English; preaching the word in season and out of season, in churches, chapels, private homes and on the streets; and writing many tracts and books hoping to win the hearts of the people to the Saviour of men. They have toiled early and late, but so many obstacles have had to be overcome that results have not been altogether as encouraging as many could have wished.

There have been many conferences of workers to try to devise means by which the work of evangelizing Japan might be advanced more rapidly. Realizing that "The King's business requireth haste," it was deemed advisable to use methods which are used by other organizations for the selling of their wares, in order not only that the gospel may be preached, but that there may be a greater demand for it throughout the island empire.

Mr. Pieters began in a very small way in the southern island of Kyushu and the work taken up by other missionaries is growing. The plan is simply to publish in the Japanese daily papers articles on religious subjects, explaining Christianity, the plan of salvation, giving the facts about the progress of Christianity among the civilized nations of the world, giving passages of Scripture with adequate explanations, telling the Christian experience of leading statesmen of the world and telling where further information may be obtained. One can readily see how hundreds of subjects may be used in the articles which are not only instructive, but persuasive and convincing.

Newspapers enter many places where the Bible, or an evangelist or a missionary can not go. The evangelist may have a hundred or so in his congregation while the newspapers enter thousands of homes and offices. There are cases where young men and young women can read in private what they would not be permitted to go to a church to hear. Newspapers go to hundreds of small towns and country villages where there is no church and where no missionary has ever gone. Mr. Pieters tells of the conversion of a man who was a convict. One of these articles was in a newspaper that was wrapped about a parcel that was delivered to the prison. One of the convicts received the package and because the paper was not usually accessible to him, read the whole paper, Christian article and all, believed and was converted.

Ten Steps.

The address of the writer of the article is given with an invitation to the reader to write and ask questions. The responses to this invitation prove the soul hunger of the people. When an answer is received, suitable literature is sent and a correspondence begun which in many cases leads to the conversion of the inquirer. This follow-up work is most important.

The ten steps in this work as given by Mr. Pieters are as follows:

1. Publication of newspaper articles on religious subjects.
2. Sending literature free.
3. Sending of a Christian magazine free for six months.
4. Sending a letter of introduction to an evangelist, if there is one in town, and also sending a letter to the evangelist in regard to the inquirer.
5. There is a traveling evangelist sent from time to time to visit those who have applied for literature, especially those who live in places remote from any resident evangelist.
6. After about a month a second letter is sent telling of the first letter and tracts and sending additional literature.
7. A library of about 400 books is kept at headquarters, and these are lent to enquirers. A fee of 5 sen a month is charged for membership. Naturally these are books that will help the unbeliever to become a Christian and help the new Christian to grow in grace.
8. The next step is pressing the enquirer for a decision after he has had sufficient instruction. He is sent tracts answering such questions as "What is it to be a Christian? How does one become a true Christian? and What does a Christian do?"—the age-long question, "What must I do to be saved?" Also an application for baptism is sent setting forth that the applicant "believes in the one true God Jehovah, and his Son Jesus Christ and will offer religious worship to no other, that he pledges himself to read the Bible and to pray every day, that he will attend Christian meetings as he has opportunity, and that he will take whatever course of study is considered necessary in preparation for baptism."
9. When one of these applications is received, a catechism especially prepared for this work, and material for a course of daily Bible reading and study are sent. The applicant is supposed to prepare one lesson every day and to write out answers to examination question once a week. When these examinations have ben satisfactorily passed, if there is a church or evangelist near, the matter is reported to the church and the applicant is received in due form. If there is no church near, the ordinance of baptism is administered by the visiting evangelist or missionary.
10. If the man has joined a nearby church, that church has the responsibility of his spiritual development, but if not, he is registered a member of some church, although it may be miles from his home. This, while impressing upon him the value and dignity of the church, does not do much for his spiritual life. We are commanded to "Go—baptize—teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." So it becomes the duty of the missionary and evangelist who have brought him into the fold to "feed the sheep" and help him to be built up unto every good word and work.

Work Is New.

The work is comparatively new in Japan, but results so far have been very promising and a bright future is expected for this branch of evangelism in the Sunrise Kingdom.

If asked what is the greatest obstacle to this form of work, I should say "Unquestionably the lack of funds." It goes without saying that this systematic publication of articles directly on Christianity must be paid for. It is quite reasonable that it should be, for editors naturally have to consult the tastes of their readers and so far there is not sufficient demand for Christian literature to warrant the newspapers putting such articles in the ordinary columns, but if put in as advertising matter and paid for as such, there is no objection. Hundreds of thousands of dollars might be used in this way to create a demand for Christian teaching, and to supply that demand. The writer knows no way in which God's stewards could spend money entrusted to them to better advantage to bring in the kingdom more speedily than by contributing largely to this great work of newspaper evangelism in Japan.

When not only the Fatherhood of God but the brotherhood of man shall have gone a long way toward hastening the day when the "kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ."

Mrs. W. HARVEY CLARKE.

Scarritt Student and Alumna

MISS LAURA STILLWELL and MISS CATHERINE PARHAM

Miss Catherine Parham, of College Park, was graduated from the Scarritt College for Christian Workers in Nashville, Tenn., on June 4, and is at home for a few weeks before going into her chosen work of "Deaconess" under appointment of the woman's department of the board of missions, M. E. Church, South, to the coal fields of West Virginia.

Miss Parham was the only north Georgia girl in the graduating class of Scarritt this year. When a recent visitor to the school remarked that north Georgia came very near being left out—having only one representative—the girls of Catherine's class said, "You were well represented, for Catherine equals twelve average girls," and so she was esteemed by her classmates. The teachers also commented on her splendid record and said the north Georgia conference is to be congratulated on having such a young woman to represent them.

During her vacation Miss Parham is attending several of the annual district meetings of the Woman's Missionary society in the interest of her college and of Life Service Volunteers. She takes up her new work on July 15th.

In 1925-26 north Georgia will be represented in the student body of Scarritt by Miss Laura Stillwell, of Hapeville, who will enter the college in September to prepare for service in foreign fields as a kindergartner. She hopes to be appointed to Cuba when her preparation is completed.

Miss Stillwell is the daughter of the late Rev. W. R. Stillwell, for 25 years a local preacher employed by the North Georgia conference, and Mrs. Laura Kennedy Stillwell. Laura lost both parents when she was only five years of age and has been reared by her aunt, Mrs. J. L. Driver, who has been a devoted mother to her.

She is well prepared for her college course, having had advantage of grammar school, high school and normal school work in the Atlanta public school system and post graduate work at Emory and Columbia summer schools. She has also had actual teacher training in the kindergarten of Hapeville for the past two years.

The 11,000 women of the North Georgia Woman's Missionary society will follow these two young lives with prayer, pride and great interest as they will take up their chosen work in the name of the Christ who said, "Go ye . . . and make disciples of all nations."

Brown Memorial Holds Meeting.

Sunday, May 31, was a memorable day in the history of the Brown Memorial Baptist Women's Missionary society. The pastor, Rev. W. D. Owens, gave the 11 o'clock hour to the women for a W. M. S. rally. The society members all wore white "designation" ribbons and seats were reserved for them on the platform. The president, Mrs. F. G. Gloer, used as the theme of her devotional, "Consecrate yourselves anew unto the Lord." She spoke with much earnestness of our service for the Master, and our great responsibility to foreign missions.

The membership chairman, Mrs. C. E. Winn, made an appeal for new members. The chairman for denominational papers stressed the importance of having a paper in each home. Mrs. Ben Chastain, personal service chairman, gave a splendid report for the last month, showing 127 visits to the sick and four linen showers given the poor of the community. The pledge of the Goodwill centers has been paid in full for the year. Reports from the G. A. leaders, Mrs. George Roach, and the Sunbeam leader, Mrs. Virgil Hendrix, were given. Both of these junior auxiliaries have been organized in the last month.

Following the secretary's report and the treasurer's report, Mrs. A. G. Sullivan, sixth district secretary, spoke on "Following the Standard." She spoke of the fact that we are all trying, in our Christian lives, to "measure up," and our ideal, our pattern, is Christ. Also in our regular every day lives in society, in business, in economics, we have standards and stands of measurements and our women's missionary societies likewise have a "standard of excellence," to which they should continually try to measure up.

Brown Memorial is trying faithfully to attain all ten points of the standard and it will only be a short time until they are an A-1 society.

The pastor closed the rally with a brief address on general W. M. S. work.

The society is fortunate in having the hearty cooperation of the pastor to the extent of the use of the 11 o'clock preaching hour for the presentation of the work of the mission society for the purpose of enlightening and enlisting the other women of the church.

Baptist W. M. U. Meeting June 25.

East Lake club will be the place of the third quarterly meeting of the W. M. U. Atlanta association on Thursday, June 25. Because of the importance and the number of plans to be made for the annual meeting in October, this meeting will begin promptly at 1 a. m. and continue after lunch, which will be served at 1 p. m., in the sun parlor of the club.

All committees will be appointed to make plans for the next year's work, among them the committee on nominations to select officers who are elected annually by the organization. All plans for the meeting have been arranged by Mrs. C. W. King, the superintendent, and Mrs. J. W. Awtry, who has made reservations for the luncheon. A 100 per cent attendance is planned for and greatly desired.

St. Paul Society Has Unique Event.

The St. Paul Woman's Missionary society, noted for its original and unique programs, gave a most instructive and entertaining "Goodwill Demonstration" on Monday evening in the church. The purpose of the program was to create interest in and explain the work of the newly organized Goodwill Industry on Edgewood avenue. The entire demonstration was planned by Mrs. W. C. McDonald and was original with her.

In the auditorium of the church, the service opened with singing "Rescue the Perishing" which was followed by prayer by Rev. Wilkie Collins. Mrs. McDonald told the audience that "believing information to bring inspiration" was the basis of the program and announced the various ways of securing information about the work of the Goodwill Industry, viz.: The Missionary Voice, the Wesleyan Advocate and the Federated church page of The Sunday Constitution. Then Mrs. Coedge and Mrs. Arthur Styron gave the demonstration "The missionary society that lost its voice" which was well rendered.

Prof. Floyd Field gave a Scripture reading and an address on the 6th chapter of John. Among other helpful things, Mr. Field said that things which seemed very small in our hands might become very large when put into the hands of Christ for His use—as did the little boy's loaves and fishes and suggested that when the Master told the multitude to "gather up the fragments" that the same idea was expressed then as is expressed now in the gathering up of seemingly useless things and serving humanity through the Goodwill Industry in turning waste into wages and junk into jobs.

Mrs. Clifford Walker Guest of Class.

Mrs. Clifford Walker, wife of the governor, will be the guest of the Susannah Wesley class of the Druid Hills Methodist church this morning at the Sunday school hour and will address the class.

This is one of the largest and most wide-awake classes of women in the state. Dr. Elizabeth Broach is their lecturer and Mrs. J. C. Oliver the president; their average attendance is 125. A four-page newspaper is issued weekly, devoted to the interests of this class that would be a credit to any church congregation instead of one class. Their motto is: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me," and all their work is done with that in mind.

CHINA NOT UNIQUE FOR CHILD MARRIAGES.

One of the things that our missionaries have always deplored and always emphasize in the talks about China and other countries, is the child marriage and the menace that it is to the country. We have always thought of that as being one of the things that we should endeavor to prevent by the work of our mission schools in foreign lands.

Yet, recent investigations made under the direction of the Russell Sage Foundation show that in the United States today there are about 700,000 persons who married before they were 16 or married persons under 16 years of age.

Then are we in position to congratulate ourselves that our country is so very different from other countries—after all?

In the social service department of the Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. church, south, women are urged to use all possible influence in the passage of laws pertaining to welfare of women and children and it seems that this would come under that head. Passage of a minimum marriageable age law would, in time, prevent such an unfortunate situation as we now have in our own United States and, after that, we can point the way to our sisters across the sea.

Sunbeams Hold Their Annual Rally Next Wednesday

Mrs. J. M. Buckner, Sunbeam leader of the Baptist W. M. U. of the Atlanta association has prepared a program full ow interest and genuine profit for the annual rally which is to take place on Wednesday afternoon, June 24, 3 o'clock, at the Baptist Tabernacle. Sunbeam organizations are continually on the increase and this year Mrs. Buckner is able to report 32 organizations in the Atlanta association. At the annual rally on next Wednesday all the Sunbeam bands and their leaders are expected to be present and every band will vie with the other in presenting a large attendance and in giving in song or recitation a missionary demonstration of the progress made during the past year. Refreshments will be served at the close of the program.

Briefly Told

Mrs. B. B. Brown, of Griffin, Ga., recently elected superintendent of supplies for the North Georgia Confernce Woman's Missionary society has resigned her office in the State Federation of Women's Clubs in order that she may devote her entire time to the work of the church in her home church and the conference.

The Sue Bennet school at London, Ky., lost its boys' dormitory by fire last week. This property is owned by the women of the M. E. church, South, and plans are being made to rebuild at once.

Mrs. Luke G. Johnson will be one of the speakers at the Young People's conference soon to be held in Lincoln, Nebraska, by the M. E. church.

Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, of the Nashville, Tenn., headquarters office authorizes the statement that missionary societies cooperating with the Atlanta Goodwill Industry will be given credit for all supplies sent. The address is 326 Edgewood avenue, Atlanta, Ga.

No reader of this page can afford to miss today's editoria. by Mrs. W. Harvey Clarke on "Newspaper Evangelism in Japan." Evangelical churches at home and abroad are realizing as never before the great value of newspaper publicity in promoting Christian activities and disseminating a knowledge of "Kingdom" progress.

Miss Julia Allen, the untiring young people's leader and college correspondent of the Baptist W. M. U. of Georgia, returned to her office on Monday, the 15th from the missionary institute at Bessie Tift college, Forsyth, and left that night with a goodly company of Georgia girls to attend the Baptist assembly at Ridgecrest, N. C. This assembly is southwide and great interest is annually taken in its varied missionary program and vacation pleasures and activities.

Camp Tomochichi Opens at St. Simon's.

With a registration about complete, including 45 leaders and young people, the second annual young people's camp, "Camp Tomochichi," diocese of Georgia, opened at St. Simon's Island, Ga., June 20, under the auspices of the diocesan department of religious education.

The bishop of the diocese will be at the camp for the entire five days and will be a member of the faculty which will include the Rev. W. A. Jonnard, director; Miss Emma Twiggs, registrar; Frank Smith, recreational director; instructors, Bishop Reese, course of the prayer book; Rev. David Cady Wright, two lectures on the Bible; Rev. Robb White, Jr., course on missions entitled "What a Real Missionary Actually Has To Do;" Rev. E. W. Hallack, course on personal religion for boys; Mrs. W. J. Cranston, course on personal religion for girls. The classes will be held daily from 9 to 12; in the afternoon there will be recreation and at a vesper service an inspirational address by the bishop.

At the close of the evening there will be prayers around the camp fire and "taps." For the Sunday service the campers will attend service at the old colonial parish Christ church. Frederica, where the bishop will preach, and Sunday evening there will be the presentation of the diocesan awards on the stewardship essay contest to Henry Farr and Burdick Farr, of St. Mark's parish, Brunswick. Some time during camp an award will be made by the Rev. E. W. Halleck, of Grace church, Waycross, of a life-saving medal to one of the boys of his parish. One day a visit will be made to the lighthouse on the island and on Wednesday evening of the parishioners of the Frederica parish will be invited to supper, after which the visitors will be entertained with stunts. Camp will close on Friday, June 26.

Seven boys from St. John's church, Savannah, Ga., attended the conference on the call to the ministry, held at Porter Military academy, Charleston, June 10 to 14, which was a provincial conference, the first of this kind ever held in the south. The boys were accompanied by their rector, Rev. W. A. Jonnard, who is a member of the executive committee.

Mrs. De Lamar Presents Pupils.

On Friday evening, June 5, Mrs. W. A. De Lamar presented a group of pupils in a piano recital at her studio, 252 Park avenue.

Their work showed the careful training to which they had been subjected, all students playing from memory, with thorough technic and musical understanding.

The annual medal for best major scale performer was won by Miss Annie Roberson.

The following took part: Miss Evelyn Satterwhite, Miss Annie Robertson, Miss Glenna Mae Satterwhite, Miss Dealva Cummings, Miss Irma Jones, Miss Ethel Jones, Miss Viola Lott, Miss Martha Sue Thompson, Miss Louise Estes, Miss Louise Roberson and Miss Ruth McDonald.

Pioneer Day Is Observed By Decatur First Church

Recently a meeting, unique in the history of the Woman's Missionary society of Decatur First church, was held in the parlor of that church.

This was the observance of "Pioneer Day." The meeting was in charge of a group of pioneer women with Mrs. J. H. Baxter acting as chairman. Mrs. W. E. McCalla, Mrs. Geo. H. Hammond, Mrs. Cora Holleyman and Mrs. T. H. Alston completing the committee.

Those of our number who had been members longest were our special honor guests and occupied seats in front, facing the audience.

Circle No. 5, Mrs. J. Floyd Hammond, chairman, acted as hostess on this occasion and sponsored the program.

The meeting opened by singing "How Firm a Foundation."

Devotional was led by Mrs. J. R. King. She read from Mark's Gospel, 14th chapter, several verses. She spoke of the little band of women who met May 23, 1878, and perfected the first organiation. She concluded: with its light, don't you feel that we

"Now, as we stand in this the glorious life of the 20th century, filled with its light, don't you feel that we ought to have stronger faith for this work and have faith that it will go on and believe what the Master said when he said: 'Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My word shall never pass away.'"

Mrs. J. H. Baxter, who was to preside, was called out of the city by the death of her sister and Mrs. W. S. Nelms presided in her place. She gave some information about the beginning of our work.

July 23, 1877, a sewing circle was organized with 18 members and functioned for several years. Of that original number, Mrs. W. E. McCalla is the only living member.

February 11, 1879, the Woman's Foreign Missionary society was organized in our church. Rev. C. A. Thomas was our pastor at that time. Mrs. Susan Avery was our first president. Thirty women joined at that time and of that number Mrs. Cora Holleyman and Mrs. W. E. McCalla are still active in the work.

Mrs. W. E. McCalla has served in many capacities durnig all these years and gave a few words of greeting and said Mrs. Thomas Alston would be her spokesman.

Mrs. Thomas Alston gave an interesting talk on the work of the ladies' aid. They bought a communion service, linen communion cloth, painted the church, helped raise money for a steeple and raised most of their money by work of various sorts, such as quilting, holding fairs, ice cream festivals, etc.

In February, 1911, the ladies' aid was abolished.

Mrs. Cora Holleyman gave a very entertaining account of the organization of work for the children who called themselves "The Gold-Diggers." They were of various denominations, Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians and Methodists. In 1882-3-4-5 and 1886, they sent $40 per year for the education of a girl in China, by name of Rosia Turner. She said in part: "I felt like the young people ought to begin early, that it had been such a hard time for us, at that time ladies were not working and knew nothing about business.

"In our little missionary society we made a good deal of money. We called ourselves 'Gold Diggers' and kept digging up members until in four years' time we had 142."

The final results of that beginning have been juvenile societies in all the churches of Decatur.

Mrs. George H. Hammond made a beautiful talk on the work of the treasurer in the pioneer days.

She told of the organization in 1903, at the home of Mrs. W. F. Ehle, of the Woman's Home Missionary society.

In March, 1911, the home and foreign societies united and Mrs. Luke Johnson came out and assisted with the reorganization.

Mrs. Luke Johnson was a much-loved guest of the afternoon and gave some touching reminiscences of her coming to Decatur as a bride. The coming and passing on of her first born here, and she paid a tribute to Mrs. Cora Holleyman in that from that time to the present she has continued to place flowers on the precious little mound.

She then told us some very pertinent facts concerning the situation as far as our mission board is concerned now.

Mrs. W. W. Foote was to have taken part in the program but was called out of town.

At this juncture Mrs. Walter Foote, superintendent of children's work, gave a word of appreciation of our pioneer women and brought in about 35 of her precious children who heaped flowers in the laps of all the pioneer women present.

A social hour followed at which time Mrs. Hammond's circle served dainty refreshments and we, as a society, feel we owe a profound debt to our beloved pioneer women for an entertaining, inspiring afternoon.

MADE A NEW WOMAN OF HER

That Is What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Mrs. Jenkins

Middleport, Ohio. — "I am going through the Change of Life and I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for the troubles that come at that time. I got so run-down I could scarcely do my work and I keep a rooming house and have a family of eight to take care of. A friend told me about the Vegetable Compound and it has made a new woman of me. I keep it in the house all the time now and won't be without it. My weight got down to 90 pounds and now it is 132½ pounds. I give the Vegetable Compound the praise and hope that women will realize the good in it." — Mrs. MYRA JENKINS, 593 North Front Street, Middleport, Ohio.

Over 200,000 women have so far replied to this question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 out of every 100 of the replies say "Yes," and because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women it should help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.

How to Reduce

The solution to your personal problem

Have you often wondered how some women keep their figures slender? Have you often wished that you could be slender, too?

Perhaps you have tried to reduce by dieting, exercising or other methods. And still you are overweight.

But have you tried the pleasant way to reduce? Have you used Marmola Tablets?

These tablets are not something new and untried. For nearly twenty years, hundreds of thousands of men and women each year have regained slender figures by using Marmola Tablets. Last year alone, users purchased more than a million boxes!

Surely you would rather use these tablets and regain your slender figure, than try some unknown and perhaps harmful method of reducing!

Get some Marmola Tablets at any druggist's (one dollar a box) and try the pleasant way to reduce. Or if you prefer, a box will be sent to you in plain wrapper, postpaid, by the Marmola Co., 1551 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Will Celebrate Wesley's Birthday.

John Wesley, the founder of the Methodist church, was born on June 28, 1703. Churches, community houses, colleges and hospitals still bear his name and perpetuate his memory.

An annual event among the women of the Methodist churches of Georgia is the linen shower given Wesley Memorial hospital on the Wednesday nearest the 28th of June, celebrating Mr. Wesley's birthday in this way. This year the 24th has been set for this celebration.

Mrs. W. M. Nichols, Mrs. Florence Candler Harris and Mrs. John A. Manget will head a committee who will receive and open the packages. All articles received will then be placed on exhibit in order that all who are interested may see them and the Woman's auxiliary will be "at home" all day Wednesday, June 24, to the visitors who care to call. It is hoped that many will come, bring a box lunch and stay all day. The lunch will be eaten out of doors and drinks will be furnished by the hospital.

The shower last year brought 2,324 articles valued at $871.45. In addition to this $577 was received in cash with which to buy towels. This amount was sufficient to buy 1,800 towels direct from the mills, with "Wesley Hospital" woven in the material and they have proven very satisfactory.

Mrs. Plato Durham is chairman of the Woman's auxiliary which is doing a splendid work for the hospital.

Lucienne Delahaye, who recently arrived in New York from Paris to join Ziegfeld's follies, brought with her this 46-carat diamond set in a ring. (International)

ATLANTA'S SONGBIRD AT PLAY
Miss Louise Hunter, of the Metropolitan opres company and a star of the municipal light opera company, of Atlanta, spends many morning hours on the municipal tennis courts at Piedmont park. She is pictured here in a remarkably spectacular play. (J. T. Holloway)

TEN GRAND FOR A PAIR OF PUPS
A record price for thoroughbred dogs was set recently when Mlle. Marcelle Lucas, dancer and wife of a wealthy Paris clubman, purchased two pekingese pups for $10,000. (Kadel & Herbert)

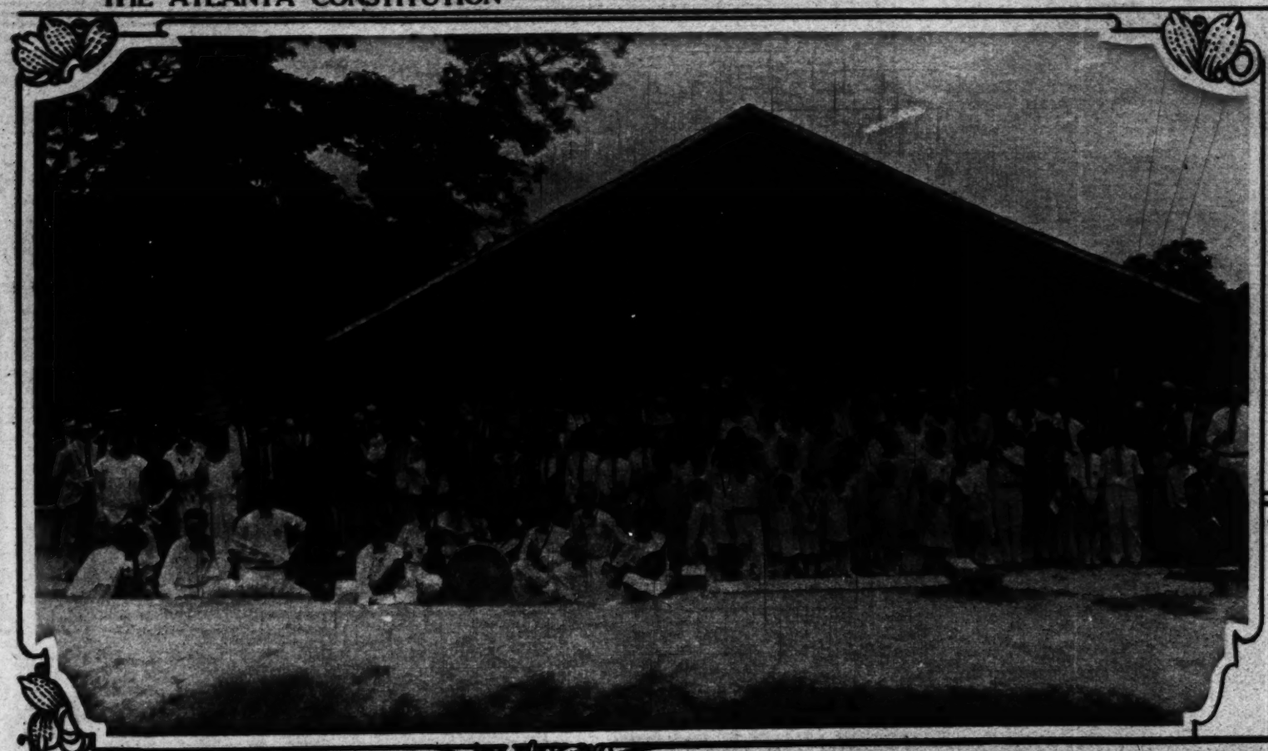

SUZANNE BACK AT THE OLD GAME
Mlle. Lenglen, French net star, is back in her stride again. In her first appearance on the courts this season she won the St. Cloud, France, tournament handily. (Kadel & Herbert)

PAINTING NIAGARA WITH NEW GLORY
Remarkable and beautiful new effects at Niagara Falls were obtained recently when the General Electric company used electricity with fireworks in a great display. The falls were illuminated with powerful searchlights, while pyrotechnics were shot into the air. (International)

ENGLAND CARICATURES SUZANNE
When an ancient tennis court was reopened at Lichfield, England, Suzanne Lenglen, French net star, was one of those caricatured in the wall mahogs. (International)

UNIQUE IN THE SOUTHEAST is this non-sectarian Sunday school, which is located on the Marietta car line in Cobb county. It is known as the Log Cabin Community Sunday school and is one of three or four institutions of its kind in the United States. It serves about 200 people. (Francis E. Price)

SAN FRANCISCO'S FALSE-FACE POLICE are shown here wearing their gas masks they are required to use frequently in combatting criminals using small tear gas bombs. (Kadel & Herbert)

COOLIDGE GOES TO THE WEST

"CARRY ME BACK TO OLD ALASKA"

is probably this polar bruin's paraphrasing of the songs of a warmer clime, as he nozzles into a water fall in his den in the Central Park zoo, New York. (International)

A GRINNING LOSER

Tommy Gibbons showed this grin just before the battle in which he was knocked out by Gene Tunney, American light-heavyweight champion, and came up smiling after he knew what it was all about. "He won the fight, all right," was Gibbons' remark afterwards. (Kadel & Herbert)

CLARKE COUNTY HONORS ITS WORLD WAR DEAD with this bronze tablet. The tablet is located on the Oconee county [illegible] at Athens. Children who took part in the unveiling are, left to right: Eleanor Barrow Williams, granddaughter of Chancellor Barrow of the University of Georgia and daughter of Captain Jewett Williams, first Athens division soldier killed in France; Sara Elizabeth Payne, niece of Allen H. Fleming, for whom the American Legion post of Athens is named, and Nell Rolling Johnson, daughter of Major Hammond Johnson, killed in the war.

In business advancement age plays an important part. Keep your hair YOUNG!

Your hair could not be gray
If age, alone, were the cause

Ninety per cent of grayness today is premature! The strain of modern life, scientific authorities now agree, robs the hair of its precious pigment—the coloring matter of its tiny cells.

But now a substance has been discovered which replaces this precious pigment—restores the natural color of your hair. It is the formula of an eminent physician used for years by a fashionable beauty specialist of Florida, Mrs. K. M. Lea. Its results are simply amazing!

Graynix, as this formula is known, as a clean, colorless liquid. It is a real scalp food. It penetrates to the roots of the hair, stimulates the scalp, stops dandruff and checks falling hair.

Don't allow streaked or gray hair to steal your beauty! Be fair to yourself—for you have a right to always look your best.

The very first bottle of Graynix gives remarkable results. Leading druggists sell the regular $1.25 size under guarantee of complete satisfaction or no cost. If you want to first convince yourself we will gladly send a generous sample bottle—FREE—enough to make a thorough test upon a lock of hair.

"M" SYSTEM SELF-SERVICE GROCERY STORE

This store was invented by a practical grocery merchant and has the merchandising of groceries down to an exact science. In appearance, cleanliness, utilization of floor space and economical operation it excels any store in existence. While the "M" system is comparatively new, nearly four hundred stores are already in operation. In most instances operations were begun by individual merchants. Each and every one is a pronounced success, and many have already started chains. Work has begun on two hundred of these stores for Florida and a large number in Georgia. A corporation is now being organized in Atlanta to operate stores in Atlanta, Columbus, Macon and other points in the state of Georgia where franchise rights have already been sold or will be sold within the next few weeks. Fixtures are made in Atlanta.

ALL RIGHT

NOW WE MUST STOP AT THE BAKERY, JOHN-

AND THEY SAY "THE WOMAN PAYS!" - BAH!

I SHOULD THINK YOU'D BE GLAD FOR THE CHANCE TO GO TO SCHOOL!! ---- DO YOU WANT TO GROW UP TO BE A NUMBSKULL?

GEE WHIZ, PA!--A COUPLE OF EXTRA MONTHS VACATION WOULDN'T MAKE A NUMBSKULL OUTA YA, WOULD IT?

Just Boy—Elmer's "Sorrow" Is No Surprise, After All.

WHAT DO YOU THINK, ELLA? THE ELM STREET SCHOOL WAS BADLY DAMAGED BY FIRE TODAY!! ---IT'S FORTUNATE IT'S SATURDAY AND NONE OF THE PUPILS WERE IN THE BUILDING!-+

YES, I HEARD ABOUT IT--ISN'T IT TOO BAD?--SO NEAR TO THE END OF THE TERM, TOO!--WELL, IT SIMPLY MEANS THAT ELMER WILL HAVE A LITTLE EXTRA TIME ADDED TO HIS SUMMER VACATION--

I SUPPOSE THE SCAMP WILL BE TICKLED SILLY OVER IT, TOO---I NEVER SAW A BOY WHO DISLIKES SCHOOL AS MUCH AS HE DOES--- I CAN ALMOST SEE HIM LAUGHING UP HIS SLEEVE!-!

WELL, THERE'S ONE CONSOLATION, CLEM--THEY WILL HAVE ALL THE DAMAGE REPAIRED BY THE BEGINNING OF THE FALL TERM.

AS MATTERS STAND, HE WILL ONLY MISS THE FINAL WEEK OF SCHOOLING--AS LONG AS THE BUILDING HAD TO BURN, IT'S LUCK IT DID IT AT THE END OF THE SEASON!

YES, BUT WHAT DISCOURAGES ME, ELLA, IS THE WAY ELMER WILL TAKE ON!! -HE WILL CONSIDER IT A FINE STROKE OF LUCK, INSTEAD OF A MISFORTUNE-

I GUESS PA AND MA KNOW ABOUT THE TOUGH LUCK---THAT OLE SCHOOL BURNING ALMOST TO THA GROUND JUST A WEEK FROM WHEN VACASHUN BEGINS-!!-!

I'M THE UNLUCKIEST KID IN THE WHOLE WORLD!!-!--RATS!-!!-

SO YOU HEARD ABOUT THE SCHOOL, ELMER?---AND YOU'RE SORRY IT HAPPENED?---DEAR ME, WHAT HAS GOTTEN INTO YOU ALL OF A SUDDEN? KNOWING HOW YOU DISLIKE TO STUDY, I THOUGHT YOU'D BE GLAD!!-!

GLAD NOTHIN'!! ---- I THINK IT'S THE TOUGHEST PIECE OF LUCK A KID COULD HAVE!

WELL, I'M GLAD YOU LOOK AT IT IN THAT SPIRIT, ELMER---IT IS VERY GRATIFYING TO MOTHER THAT YOU ARE AT LAST TAKING AN INTEREST!! NEVERTHELESS, IT'S A GREAT SURPRISE TO ME---

THERE'S "SHORTY" TURNER CALLING ME OUT IN THA YARD---I GUESS HE'S HEARD THA BAD NEWS TOO!---I'LL GO OUT AN' SEE, ANYHOW---

TOUGH?--COURSE IT'S TOUGH, SHORTY! WHY COULDN'T THA OLE SCHOOL BURN IN THA WINTER WHEN WE HAFF TO GO, 'STEAD OF RIGHT AT THA BEGINNING OF VACASHUN WHEN WE DON'T HAFF T'GO? THAT'S WHAT GETS ME!!---!

WELL, HOLY SMOKES, ELMER, WE GET A EXTRA WEEK OUT OF IT, DON'T WE?--- WHATCHA KICKIN' ABOUT?---?

OH!---I'M BEGINNING TO SEE THE REASON FOR ALL THE SORROW ON ELMER'S PART!--I THOUGHT IT SOUNDED KINDA FISHY--- COMING FROM HIM! --SHAME!

BUT JUST THINK, IF IT HADDA BURNED IN THA WINTER, WE WOULDN'T HAFF TO GO AT ALL!! NOW THEY'LL BE WORKIN ON IT ALL SUMMER, AN BY THA TIME VACATION'S OVER IT'LL BE ALL FIXED!!---GET ME?---

GOSH, YER RIGHT, ELMER!! I'D FERGOT ABOUT THAT!--- WE CERTAINLY ARE OUTA LUCK!!--GEE-RU-SLUM!!---!

ROSCOE, HE'S A THOUGHTFUL BOY.

Pay WINKO

FUNNY YOU HEARD THE PHONE RINGING.- IT DIDNT WAKE ME UP, JOHN.

WHO WAS IT, JOHN?

OH! OUR SON.- SAID HE WOULDN'T BE HOME TONIGHT. GIMME SOME OF THEM COVERS.

SAID HE WOULDN'T BE HOME TONIGHT.- WELL, I'M GLAD HE CALLS AND LETS US KNOW AND SPARES US THE WORRY.

YOU'RE RIGHT

WHAT TIME IS IT, JOHN? DID YOU LOOK?

NO! BUT I WILL

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

A Frank Summerson

"You're not a liar, I suppose?"

The Adventure of a Bored Young Man Who Consented to Make An Unexpected Fourth at Dinner.

IT WAS an evening in late summer. Dusk, not yet mastering the town, was making the sky luminous. Traffic was heavy, and Regent street was beginning to lose that thick pedestrian swarming which marks its afternoon encounter with shopping women and the later homeward rush of workers. Abel Raikes stood under the arch of the Provident Life Insurance offices by Piccadilly circus. Stragglers were waiting near him and opposite, outside Swan and Edgar's, for the motor omnibuses. A few of them had turned to the shop windows; but the majority seemed only to be loitering upon their way home.

Abel himself was loitering with a less definite intention. He was vaguely surveying the outlook, having found his lonely flat unendurable on this warm evening. Not very convinced plans for solitary dinner and a theater—never very tempting—had formed in his head. He had dressed for the evening, and had left the flat to his man servant; and at each step taken since then Abel had found the evening's prospects less enticing. So he stood at the junction of Regent street with Piccadilly circus, watching the people and the vehicles, conscious of the dying heat, the pale sky, the egregious unpleasantness of dining alone at a restaurant, and his own futility.

Abel was a young man with a good deal of money and a great deal of independence. He had enough money to make him not at all extravagant; and his independence was such that none of his associates dared be censorious and thoroughly dislikeable in the name of friendship. Abel was not insulting or haughty to his self-styled friends: he ignored their representations. He went his own way. In person he was far from handsome. Slim and wiry he was, and his hands and feet were small; but his face was the face of good nature, rather than of beauty. He had a thick wad of lightish brown hair, and a light mustache; an unremarkable mouth, a round chin with a good jaw, a square brow, and a quaint babyish nose. In height he was not above five feet seven inches. Passing Abel in the street, one would have allowed one's eye to run casually over him without any stir of interest. In a dissecting or a docketing mood one would have said: "English: public school: decent: nothing much."

That was where one would have been a little wrong. The casual glance, like the too intensive nearer scrutiny, is apt to mislead. In passing, one would not have allowed for Abel's jaw, nor for the possibility of flashing hardness in the bright eyes. Abel, although not a fighting man, was tenacious. He could be fierce. He could say "yes" and "no," and mean what he said. Money, education, self-reliance, had given him the power to do as he pleased. He was good natured, but he was not amiable. It was this distinction that the exploiters of men were made to appreciate when they took Abel's good nature for weakness. They then learned that he was tough and resourceful, and the exploiters of men were puzzled to discover that he was not of their own number. Without money, perhaps he would have been. Probably not, however, for kindness of heart was his jewel.

ABEL, unconscious of all these things in his own character and appearance, became aware that he stood in the way of those who were trying to board an omnibus which had drawn up close at hand. He looked at his watch: the time was ten minutes past seven. A sigh came to his lips. Dinner . . . theater . . . alone. He grimaced: the prospect was so uninviting. However! What was a man doing in London upon such an evening? Abel had brought the boredom upon himself. An invitation to the country at this instant lay upon his writing table at home; and he knew it. Yet Abel was here, faced with the need for some sort of activity. What should he do?

First of all, an evening paper must be bought, so that he could choose his theater. It was no sooner thought of than it was in his hand, like a wish in a fairy tale. Grasping the paper, Abel strolled uncertainly towards the Cafe d'Or, only half determined to eat there. The dusk made the street dimmer; an electric lamp in the roadway began faintly to fizz into life. Abel's white shirt front shone suddenly. He stopped outside the Cafe d'Or, and opened his evening paper in order to read the theatrical advertisements.

"Now, where the devil shall I go?" said Abel, aloud.

He was so absorbed in his own problem that he did not notice an agitated young man, also dressed for the evening, who fumed within a yard of him. If Abel had seen this young man he would have stood farther off, because he could not endure excited or excitable people. But he was intent upon his paper. The names of the plays bored him, even the names of the theaters. He felt he had seen them all too often. How much better if the theaters periodically changed their names and the plays occasionally changed their subjects! Unchanged, how boring they were! How boring! He dropped the paper to the ground, and shrugging, had hardly the energy to pick it up again. His hands went into his trouser pockets.

It was here that Abel caught sight of the fuming young man, who proved to be not so young as a boy, but of that type which grows up at forty by losing its hair sandily from the temple rearwards. This young man, now perhaps thirty, which was Abel's age, was unable to control his agitation. He moved hither and thither, not actually clucking his tongue, but visibly perturbed. He was tall and well covered, most exquisitely dressed, irretrievably juvenile and slow of wit. Abel glanced at him, glanced courteously away, and again glanced, more steadly, thinking: "Some young woman late, I suppose;" and was an instant later surprised to find himself being addressed.

"—extraordinary position—telegram — absolutely essential—can't understand the fellow—most distinctly promised."

ABEL grunted a sort of sympathy with the young man. His kind eyes looked with even greater sympathy. There was a faint interchange of interest between himself and the young man. They stood facing one another, while the sandy stranger breathed and gluped heavily, and at length, forced into trustfulness by his dilemma, pressed a telegram into Abel's hand, bidding him read it. The telegram read: "Vernon Cumberdale, at Cafe d'Or. Very sorry had serious accident prevents my dining with you, every apology. Maggots."

"Hard lines," said Abel, sympathetically.

"Worse," continued the young man. "Intolerable."

"The writer says he or she has had a serious accident."

"Rot!" cried the young man. "I don't believe it. I can't imagine anything serious enough to keep Maggots away."

"It sounds unavoidable," urged Abel.

"Yes. But what the deuce am I to do? That's the trouble!"

There was a slight pause.

"You'd better—you'd better dine with me," at last kindly suggested Abel. "I mean, if you're stumped for a companion. Im dining alone in any case." He thought with less enthusiasm of the reckless invitation even as he spoke. "A young woman, I take it."

The stranger started. A dazed look was in his eyes, as though Abel spoke a foreign tongue.

"No, no. A—a—a man. Maggots—Charlie Maggersford. That's the devil of it."

"Oh—oh! Old Maggots!" cried Abel. "Was he in the 51st? Splendid. Weird chap. Must be a jolly serious accident to keep him out of this. Most unlike him. Come in, and let's talk about old Maggots."

His companion recoiled once again, an expression of horror upon the fair, handsome, insignificant face. He was childishly plump, even in a tragic mood.

"No, you—you don't understand. I've got two—two ladies coming. He was my—my fourth. Most important, it was."

"Oh, I see. Well, that's all right," said Abel, looking at the sandy young man with some relief. He foresaw his own escape. "What's the matter? It's not a calamity. Perhaps it's a blessing. Surely you can entertain two young women? If Maggots had been one of them it would have been different."

"Yes, but don't you see—" The stranger grew desperate. His hands moved helplessly. He became for a moment almost contemptible to Abel. Then, with a great effort, he recovered his composure. "Look here, I don't know who you are."

"My name's Raikes. I was in the 51st with Maggots. He was senior to me."

The young man stopped dead. He clasped Abel's arm. Thoughts were evidently churning in his mind. One quick, suspicious look shot from his eyes. He looked away, down, back at Abel. Then, like lightning: "Raikes," he cried. "Ah. I've heard of you. Abel Raikes. Thank God! You dine with us, d'ye see? Take his place. So grateful— This is it. I must tell you. The two girls coming—one of them— We were going to dance afterwards. I want to dance. There's a special reason—I can't tell you. It's most awfully important and private. It's my only chance."

"Want to propose?" demanded Abel, in a great dazzle of perception. His lips parted in something of a grin, which, although he did not realize it showed much more of his opinion of Mr. Vernon Cumberdale than Abel was conscious of holding.

THE sandy young man flushed. He drew himself up, again deeply shocked. A light of doubt glistened in his eye. He, too, repented, perhaps, of the engagement so desperately made. Then the fire died: better this dubious fourth than a tantalizing and altogether destructive third.

"Yes," he said. shortly, "Mind, that's—"

"Quite. Forgive me."

"Well, now, Maggots—"

"That's all right. I'm at a loose end. Of course, I'll join you."

Abel spoke almost grimly, so impatient had he begun to feel. No curiosity stirred him: only a premonition of boredom.

"Good man!" The stranger shook Abel's hand with fierce and resurgent gratitude. "Splendid man. Oh, what a relief! Maggots knew how frightfully important it was. I've got to go into the country tomorrow—to stay with my mother. It's tonight—tonight or—Oh, Lord! I say, you can dance, I suppose?"

For the next five minutes the two men were in the hands of the waiters, for a private room had been engaged by the young Cumberdale and all details of the meal had still to be settled. He had arrived early, it seemed, to make sure that all was right beyond risk of peradventure; and the receipt of Maggots telegram had destroyed his intellect. Abel found that the young man had a fussy mind. He had met his like in the army—big, fair, easily rattled babies with stubborn obstinacies which made them hard to control. But Abel was of a different type, and when once the head waiter instinctively referred to him all went satisfactorily.

They were downstairs again by half past seven, Cumberdale heated and embarrassed, Abel with a little nick of a frown in his ordinarily smooth brow. If he had not been committed to the deed, Abel would have walked almost eagerly away from a man who so radiated apprehensiveness and incompetence. Too late. And as they reached the entrance hall two girls were leaving a taxicab and walking towards them. Something had distracted Abel's attention for an instant; but his new friend stepped forward and he followed half in a dream. His heart was strangely beating.

The two girls were both tall, and were both more than pretty. The darker of them was in a pale yellow silk dress, beautifully cut at the throat and rather full from the waist, so that it fell in exquisite delicacies of fold. She was a cheerful brunette, her nose retroussee, her teeth dazzling, and her general air one of irresistible vivacity. The other girl, who came first, and in light blue, was fairer. She, too, had a carriage that made one smile with pleasure, and her liveliness was unchallenged. She was less radiant than her friend; but she had more distinction. Her natural curls, her clear and open brow, her beautifully molded chin and mouth, would have marked her out from any companion or gathering. And she was sweeter in poise and sympathy, more sedate, perhaps, but not less alluring than the girl by her side.

Still Abel dreamed.

"Mr. Raikes. Miss Aveling. Miss Kestrop."

INTO Abel's dream crept a new perception. "Miss Aveling." He almost laughed. Sybil. He bowed, not meeting Miss Aveling's glance, and betraying recognition of her not by so much as the quiver of an eyelid. To Miss Kestrop also he bowed, and stood erect again with his senses alert. To himself it seemed that never had there been a greater need for self-control. He had faced danger without discredit; now let him face this ordeal. Yet Abel was overwhelmed by this moment. Young Cumberdale, it came back to him like a blow, had planned the party for a single purpose. He was to propose during the evening to one of these two visitors. Suppose—suppose— Abel watched Cumberland. He spoke to each of the girls in a similar tone. If there was a difference, it was so slight as to escape detection.

During that moment of colloquy Abel was in agony. What to do? Nothing. He must know. He must know at once which of the two women was to be his own partner, and upon which Cumberdale's attention was set. If the one—well; if the other—then Cumberdale led the way, turning instinctively to Sybil with an expression that betrayed him completely to the watcher. And as he fell into place with Miss Kestrop, the brunette, Abel sighed heavily. His heart was like water in his breast. The situation was clear.

Miss Kestrop's tongue did not betray the impression to be formed from her vivacious appearance. She was an agreeable rattle, pliant, piquante, full of good spirits and radiant laugher.

"Are you a great friend of Vernon's?" she demanded as they walked up the stairs. Her head jerked towards Cumberdale. "He's never spoken of you to me."

"No." Abel's tone was uncontrollably glum. "I'm his chaperon."

"Oh! Does he need one? What things are coming to!" She was laughing archly.

"You see for yourself," said Abel.

Miss Kestrop glanced swiftly aside at him, seeking a possible allusion to her friend, and perhaps a confirmation of something which had occurred to her own quick mind.

"I expected somebody else," she confessed. That stirred Abel.

"I'm a substitute," he said. "You must make the best of me."

"Is that why you seem so gloomy?"

"I'm weighed down by responsibility. You can tell that our friend's a lamb. What if something should go wrong?"

"He's very nervous, certainly: But then, so are you, it's clear."

THEY were in the room now, and this little examining conversation was brought to an end. It was quite a small room, with a dull golden and maroon wall paper, and shaded lights that cast a faint reddish flush upon the walls and brilliance upon the cloth and its decorations. Beneath the light all was clear; without the circle of its radiance all was inscrutable.

Cumberdale, half in shadow, was looking helplessly at Abel. They were seated under Abel's direction, and he caught a mischievous glance from Miss Kestrop at this first demonstration of his role. Instinctively he looked from her to Sybil, to catch merely the tail of a glance withdrawn. Abel was so full of agony that his tongue was light. He did not know what he was saying. He once knew that Sybil looked at him almost with reproach; yet he was thinking not of the present scene, but of scenes which had occurred in the past, and his mind was overpowered by memory. What wonder that a sharp raising of the shoulders made Abel look supremely cynical? He sat with Miss Kestrop upon his right, dark, mischievous, in her brilliant yellow dress: and upon his left Sybil, withdrawn, more serious, but talking quite easily to the foolish Cumberdale.

He returned to Miss Kestrop; he listened to her cascade of words and laughter, and did his best to amuse. All the time, he was aware of Sybil. He could see the soft roundness of her arm; and her averted face revealed the delicate line of her neck as nothing else could have done. If she had been set upon tantalizing him she could have chosen no more provocative pose. She seemed unmoved. Her tongue did not falter, nor apparently, her thoughts. Abel was baffled. Had she no feeling? She was calm; therefore, he thought, she felt nothing. His heart sank lower. Then he received from her an involuntary look that made him tingle. It was a look of sudden fear, so delicate to Abel that he was robbed of speech, and stared straight before him in the most stupid manner possible.

And when he could once more pay attention to his right hand neighbor it was to receive a repulse. He was to be punished for inattentiveness. The punishment began at once; but neither Abel nor his judge foresaw the rapid passing of raillery into conflict. She had turned to Cumberdale, who had fallen into a drowning, finger flicking silence after his first feverish monopolization of Sybil.

"I've been looking forward so much to meeting Mr. Raikes," said Miss Kestrop, mischievously, bent, apparently, upon teasing both Abel and their host. "After all you've told me about him."

Cumberdale flushed. He did not know what to answer.

"Erm—yes. Have I?"

"Well, haven't you?"

"I dunno. I may have."

Miss Kestrop looked archly at Cumberdale.

"Well, somebody" — a thought seemed to strike her. She turned back to Abel. "Mr. Raikes: weren't you with Mr. Maggersford in the war?"

Abel groped in his memory for any reference made by old Maggots—whom he had known very well—to a familiar tease, and was unrewarded.

Broadway Banter

By Forney Wyly

PROMPTLY upon meeting Richard Barthelmess, I asked with rare tactlessness, "How do you pronounce your last name?" a question which for sheer assinity, should win considerable recognition. For far too long, however, have I heard the well-known Mr. Barthelmess' name pronounced anything from "Barthelamus" to "Bartholomew" and while I am sure Mrs. Emily Post and Mrs. Lydig Hoyt would shudder at the very thought of my crudity, I felt that I was doing the best thing for everybody concerned. Mr. Barthelmess—by the way he's the sort of "Richard" who is essentially "Dick"—quite pleasantly informed me his muchly mispronounced name was correctly pronounced as though spelled "Bar-tle-mess" with the accent on the first syllable. This, I believe, is a pronunciation his admirers have consistently missed. You can readily see the "h" in the second syllable is not to be thought of, much less pronounced.

At present there is much activity going on at the Barthelmess studios. Mr. Barthelmess is finishing up "Shore Leave" in which Dorothy MacKail appears opposite him, and is getting ready to begin "The Beautiful City" with Dorothy Gish in the feminine lead. The outer office of a motion picture studio, wherein the would-be extras assemble, is a very interesting sight. Many familiar garden-party faces did I see, and countless advocates of Mary Pickford curls. Other extras I suppose I would have recognized had they had spears in their hands. In "Shore Leave" Mr. Barthelmess, as you would have guessed, takes the part of a sailor. In several of the scenes of this picture which I saw filmed, the conversation in which the participants engaged, was entirely appropriate to the situation, and not, as you so often heard, something like "I wish I had a ham sandwich" uttered while the most heart-breaking scenes were being "shot."

Mr. Barthelmess, one of the most likeable people I have ever met, tells me he thinks his best work was done in "Tolable David" and in "Broken Blossoms." By the way in his current picture, "Soul Fire" he gives what I consider one of the best performances of his career.

My first interview with Mr. Barthelmess went off in such an excellent manner that I should have known it couldn't end up so well. After I had made what I considered a very effective exit from his dressing-room at the studio, I discovered I had brought with me his hat instead of my own. Whereupon I returned, and for forty-five minutes, explained what was quite apparent in the flash of an eye, merely that I had taken the wrong hat! I am still wondering what even the well-liked face of Mr. Barthelmess would have looked like under the gray concoction I wear, and which, at odd moments I am still convinced is a hat.

NOW Katherine Wilson, Jacksonville Florida girl well-known in Atlanta, appeared, you will remember with Mr. Barthelmess in "New Toys" a picture you saw a few months ago. Mr. Barthelmess, by the way, tells me he considers Miss Wilson an excellent screen type, and that he believes, should she so wish, could attain great prominence on the screen. The lovely Miss Wilson, however, has a decided preference for the speaking stage, on which she is doing some very clever work. The day "Quarantine" closed, Miss Wilson started rehearsals for "The Mysterious Way" a play in which she has the lead. The new production will have opened in Stamford by the time this reaches you, and from Stamford will proceed to Atlantic City.

Both Miss Wilson and myself are agreed on Mr. Barthelmess' marked resemblance, both in appearance and in mannerisms, to a certain man of Atlanta society. This southern double of Mr. Barthelmess is the chap who, in days gone by, was often referred to in the press as "an irrepressible youth" but who is now a model husband and father. Miss Wilson says "she knows that she has n-e-v-e-r" seen such a likeness as exists between the two. Mr. Barthelmess has been

Glimpses of Hollywood

By Rosalind Shaffer

THE Shriners invasion of Los Angeles all week was productive of many amusing incidents. Like all tourists they were anxious to see the studios and investigate Hollywood. On Wednesday Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer entertained 20,000; other studios allowed the "nobles" the freedom of the lot and use it they did.

At Fox's Tom Mix in his sanctum sanctorum was getting into his regimentals and makeup when his dressing room door burst open and a hot, perspiring but ambitious Shriner catapulted through the doorway.

After looking hard for a minute at Tom the fezzed one dashed into the hall with a joyous shout, "Here he is, boys; come on in," and dragged in about thirty brethren who proceeded to give Tom blue lodge greetings in a manner which took his breath away.

Goldwyn's Conrad Nagel, resplendent as an officer of the royal household was working in Madam Glyn's new picture. A friendly fez from Ohio approached, introduced himself and in two minutes more had the amazed Mr. Nagel by the arm calling him Conrad and introducing him to an envious group from "back home."

Another leaned into Eleanor Boardman's private car, where she sat in her queen's costume waiting for her call. After some moments in silence Miss Boardman became nervous under the frank scrutiny. The honest gentleman, to put her at ease, remarked—motioning to the scene being enacted, of revolutionists throwing a noble woman out of a window, "I bet she's your double, ain't she?"

A number of the Shriners' ladies were lunching in Hollywood hotel, taking in with rapt gaze a group of movie girls, all of whom wore their picture make-up while lunching at an adjacent table. The girls, aware of the close attention they were commanding, decided to give the good ladies a thrill.

Borrowing some cigarettes from an acquaintance they began to blow smoke through their noses. The ladies stiffened.

Bursting into a loud confidential whisper, one girl remarked: "'Well, I can understand Nita Naughty having four boy friends at one time—one can overlook that in Hollywood—but as for her wandering down Hollywood boulevard in her nightie the other day at high noon, I just can't forgive that." The ladies galvanized. "Yes," answered her partner in the hoax, "but what's this I hear about your going to Russia on location? Don't you know the ideas those communists have about women? It isn't safe for a girl, dearie."

Puff, puff. This time the smoke was coming out of one ear and the ladies were nearly bursting with suppressed emotion and shrimp salad.

"Oh, well," answered the other, nonchalantly, "Russia's nothing in my young life, with what a poor girl goes through here in Hollywood getting into the movies. I'd be just as safe there as here with all these wicked producers."

The Shrine ladies had had enough. Gulping down scalding coffee they dashed off to the nearest oasis to tell the tribesmen.

TOM MIX, seven-gallon white hat, white form-fitting trousers, white coat faced all around the pockets, cuffs and edges with black braid, high black boots stitched with a floral design in white, striped belt and famous diamond-studded belt buckle, arrived back from Europe with Mrs. Mix, Tony, his horse, eleven dogs, including a French sheep dog and a Belgian police dog, two owls, an Angora goat and a colt by Man o' War, at 2 p. m. Wednesday. Tom was greeted heartily by much of Los Angeles, most of Hollywood and his daughter, Tomasina. The latter was resplendent a pink ruffled georgette, pink silk coat and pink flowered poke bonnet.

In spite of an all-day downpour, school boys early began arriving on foot, muleback and bicycle at the Fox studio, where a reception was held for Tom at 3:30.

Cadets from Hollywood Military academy, the Boy Scouts, numbers of conventioning Shriners, and others crowded the studio to capacity to shake hands with Tom and see the Fox cowboys, Tony the horse and the stage coaches full of wild west characters that greeted Tom.

One small boy of 7 was picked up six miles from the studio and brought on to the party after he had done six miles on foot, thereby nearly tying the record of the two Denver lads who came 194 miles to see Tom at the station there.

The animals, all of them gifts to Tom, were sent to Mixville, where Tom keeps his horses and pets. Tom begins work at once on his new picture, "The Unlucky Horseshoe." The colt, Kentucky pride, he figures is a right smart horse and he will give it the same educational advantages he has given Tony.

A DINNER party at the Ambassador Friday was attended by many bright stars of the Hollywood firmament. A South American notable, known as Prince Azzeneava, was host at a party to Jacqueline Logan and her new husband, R. J. Gillespie.

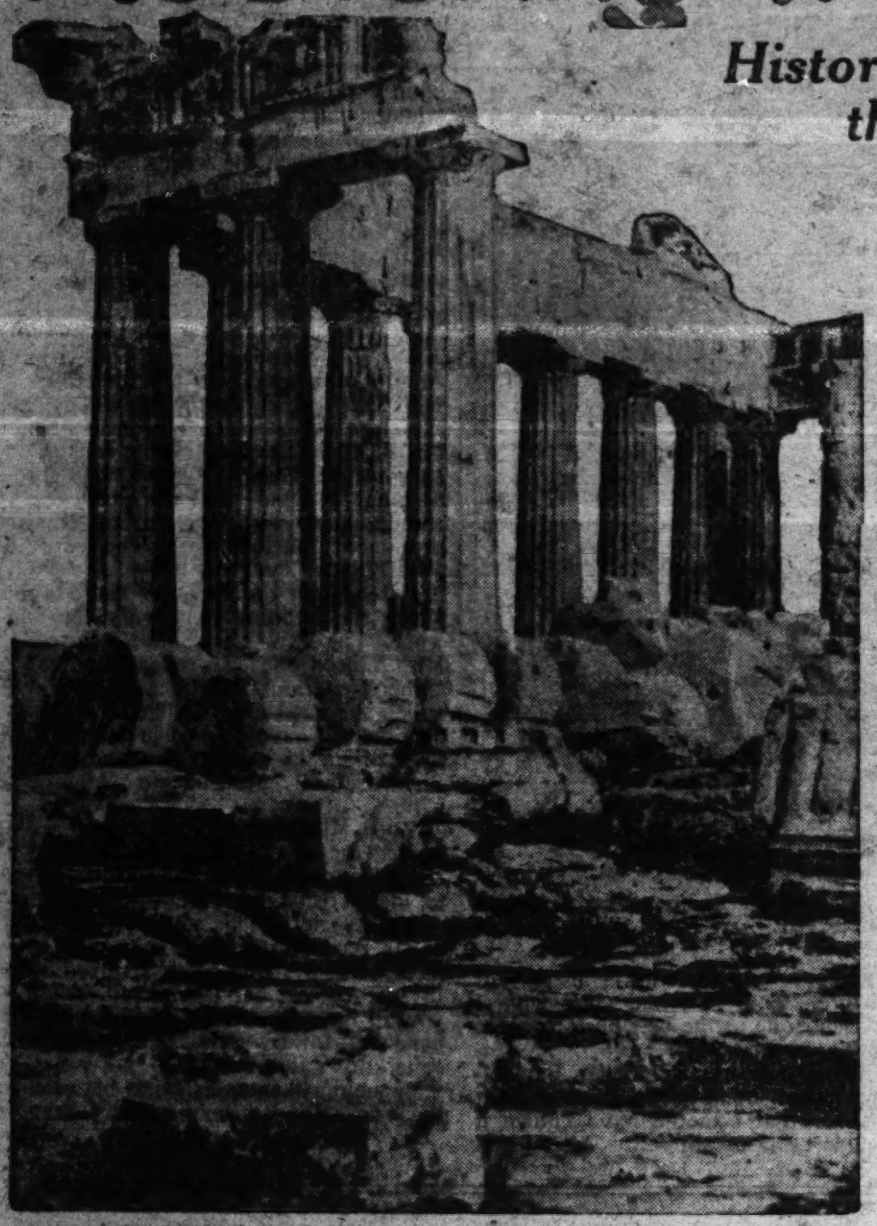

Among those who attended were: Seena Owen, in rose shaded chiffon; Anna Q. Nilsson, in a white chiffon with a full skirt trimmed with an enormous Irish green flower at the waist; Marion Davies in a shaded orchid georgette gown; Peggy Hopkins Joyce in a white georgette beaded with turquoise blue with a girdle of the beading forming a natural waistline and Peggy wearing all her diamonds; Constance Talmadge in a white chiffon gown and scarlet evening coat trimmed with white fox; May Allison in white with a flame and black flower at the waist; Blanche Sweet in orchid; Alma Rubens, striking in a white chiffon gown, full skirt and natural waistline with a black poinsettia at the waist and a cloth of silver wrap; Frances Howard in white chiffon beaded with crystals. The men who attended with this group of ladies were those whom you would imagine: Samuel Goldwyn, Buster Collier, Lew Cody, Marshall Neilan, Ricardo Cortez, Allen Dwan, Monta Bell, Jack Gilbert, James Quirk.

An amazing ballet entitled "The Ballet of the Pearls" is being prepared by Romaine de Tirtoff Ertes to be used in the picture, "Paris," at Goldwyn's. The opening curtain of ruby velvet is to be opened by a nude gilded slave, who stands in the middle of the stage with cords in his hands. He pulls the cords, releasing two counter-balances, which descend slowly to the stage and open the curtains. These weights are formed of two beautiful nudes, hanging by the hair, whose resemblance to tassels is increased by skirts formed of ropes

Restoring the "Glory That

Historic Parthenon Being Rebuilt and Now the Greeks Want Other Nations to Give Back the Priceless Statuary That Once Adorned It

Ruins of the world's one perfect building—the Parthenon on the Acropolis at Athens, which the Greek government is starting to restore to its original beauty.

AT last a start is being made on the long-planned task of rebuilding the Parthenon, that magnificent building on the Acropolis in Athens, which is though to have been the most perfect structure in the world and to have typified better than anything else the "glory that was Greece."

Only the pitifully small sum of $50,000 is now available for the work, but the Greek government promises that more generous funds will soon be forthcoming and that they will continue to be supplied until the Parthenon is restored as far as the Greeks have it in their power to do.

They can replace the broken and fallen columns and supply the other details of the building itself, but they cannot adorn it with any of the priceless statuary which adorned it in the days of its ancient glory, because all those works of art that remain in existence are scattered throughout the museums of the world.

The famous Elgin room in the British museum in London is filled with the sculpture which Lord Elgin spent a fortune in recovering from the ruins of the Parthenon and carrying to England. Museums in Copenhagen, Vienna, Berlin and Rome contain collections almost as large. In fact, there is hardly a museum anywhere which does not treasure among its greatest prizes at least a bit or two of marble from the Parthenon.

What will happen when the Greeks have completed the restoration of the Parthenon as far as they can with what there is left of it to them is a problem that promises to disturb the art world for many years to come. And very probably it will eventually call for the serious attention of the diplomats of all the great nations.

Will the nations which hold the marbles that once adorned the Parthenon generously hand them back to Greece when the restored building is ready to receive them?

Such a gift would involve a tremendous financial sacrifice. Nobody has ever tried to compute the cash value of the widely-scattered Parthenon marbles, but it must run high into the hundreds of millions. In many cases the museums that hold them spent fortunes in acquiring them and in arranging special rooms to display them properly.

The British government paid $175,000 for the Elgin marbles in the British museum and this is only a trivial fraction of what they are worth. It is not half what Lord Elgin claimed to have spent on the romantic task of recovering them.

It has been suggested that Greece might reimburse the other nations for the value of the marbles, but this seems out of the question—at least for a long, long time. The Greek government is too poor. Even the cost of restoring the building part of the Parthenon is going to be a heavy drain on its financial resources.

Should the other nations consider themselves under a moral obligation to restore the marbles to Greece? If they should retain them, would it not be virtually the keeping of "stolen goods?"

These questions are being hotly debated in England, Germany and other countries where the Parthenon marbles are held in such respectful admiration.

Those who think the rest of the world should make the magnificently generous gesture of handing the marbles back to Greece free of all expense say that the satisfaction of having saved these treasures from destruction is worth all and more than they have cost us. We have been further reimbursed by the pleasure of having them close at hand all these years to admire and study.

THE marbles, it is pointed out, were never really ours. We took them only in trust, to hold them until such time as the historic spot where they once stood was safe to receive them again.

The Parthenon is where they rightfully belong and, as soon as that is restored, that is where they should be sent, without a thought of the financial or other loss to us.

But many equally thoughtful and honest-minded persons think quite differently about the matter.

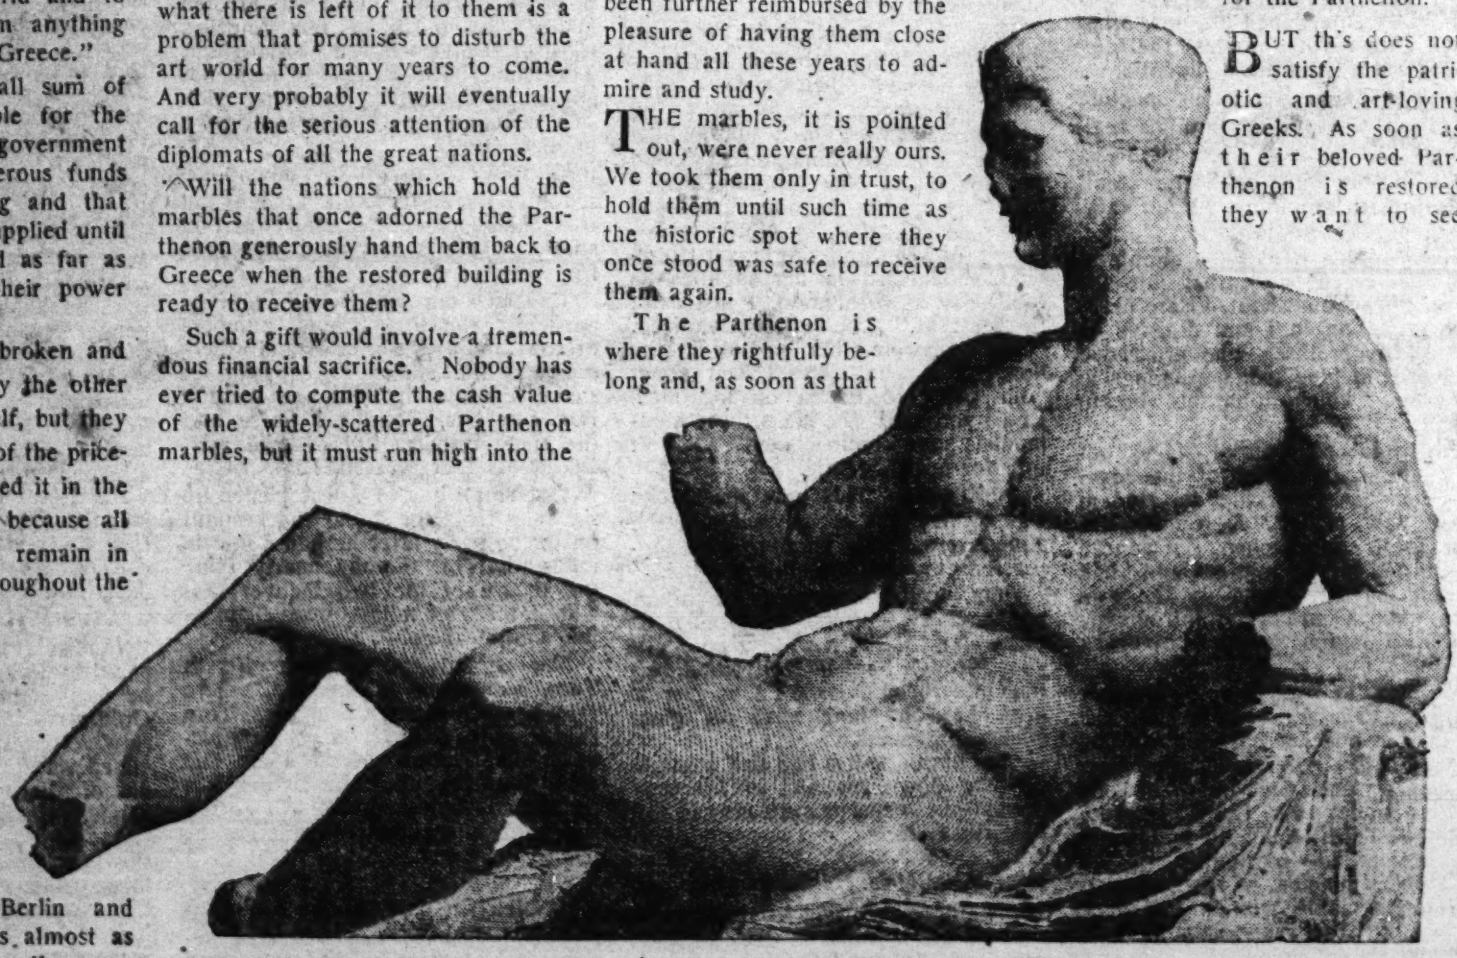

The safety of these priceless treasures, they urge, demands that they be allowed to remain right where they are. At the risk of hurting the feelings of the Greeks it is pointed out that their nation is a most turbulent one, continually the scene of bloody revolutions. No country so hard up in a financial way, so menaced by foreign foes and so torn by internal feuds, is thought a proper place for some of the most precious relics of ancient art the world possesses.

The greatest good to the greatest number is another argument frequently offered in favor of retaining the marbles. Even if Greece were a thoroughly peaceful country comparatively few people would be able to make the long journey to Athens. But in the museums where the marbles now are they are within easy daily reach of countless millions.

As for Greece having any legal or moral claim to the marbles it is argued that the country of their origin forfeited that when it was unable to safeguard them and permitted a large number of them to be destroyed by the Turks and other vandals.

A compromise between these two conflicting views that has been suggested is for the marbles to remain where they are and casts be taken of them for reproduction for the Parthenon.

BUT this does not satisfy the patriotic and art-loving Greeks. As soon as their beloved Parthenon is restored they want to see

One of the sculptures which Lord Elgin recovered from the Parthenon at an expense of nearly $400,000 and which Greece thinks the British Musuem ought to return to the country that produced them.

Was Greece"

every existing bit of marble that originally adorned it put back there. They are greatly obliged to the rest of the world for taking such good care of these sculptures, but they think it will soon be high time to return them.

If England insists on retaining the Elgin marbles after the Parthenon is restored Greece is likely to look upon it as the rankest kind of thievery. For they insist that the order which the Earl of Elgin secured from the sultan in 1802 gave him permission only to take plaster casts of the sculptures and not to carry them off as he did.

The Greeks complained bitterly about this at the time. A number of foreign archaeologists took up their cause and the earl was called a vandal and a robber. He was forced to publish a book to defend himself.

What the earl said in this volume and the reports which travelers brought back from Greece of its terrible wars, pestilences and brigands finally convinced almost everybody that he had done quite the right thing and deserved to be hailed as a great conserver of Hellenic art.

The recovery of the marbles which Lord Elgin gathered from the ruins of the Parthenon and placed in the British museum is one of the most romantic undertakings in the history of archaeology. He was British ambassador to Constantinople at the time when he made up his mind to try to save a few of the priceless fragments scattering the Acropolis at Athens.

For years the Turks had been using the Parthenon as a quarry, carting off the stones and building them into their houses. Their vandalism was almost incredible.

They ruthlessly ripped to pieces the most glorious building the world has ever seen and even fired their cannon at its sculptures. They broke off the arms and legs of statues and gave them to passing travelers. Anything and everything they could do to obliterate the glory of ancient Greece was done.

The Turks took peculiar delight in destroying the things which Christian infidels traveled miles to see, and Lord Elgin realized that in a few years there would be little left. He appealed to the Turkish authorities. After winning the support of the sultan's mother, he was finally given permission to dig in and around the ruins of the Parthenon and—so Lord Elgin always maintained — remove any stones and sculptures which he desired.

Athens is a long way from Constantinople and when he reached there he found his imposing order from the sultan carried little weight. The grafting local officials refused to permit him and his men to enter the ruins until they had agreed to pay $25 a day as long as they worked.

Lord Elgin employed more than 400 men in collecting what was to be saved of the marbles—many of them badly shattered and smashed, but still of unique beauty. Scaffolding was erected to take down some of the matchless figures in the frieze. Stones were taken out of the forts and replaced with less valuable ones.

HEARING that some unusually beautiful marbles had been built into a Turkish house, Lord Elgin sent to the sultan for special permission to tear the house down. But no trace of the marbles could be found.

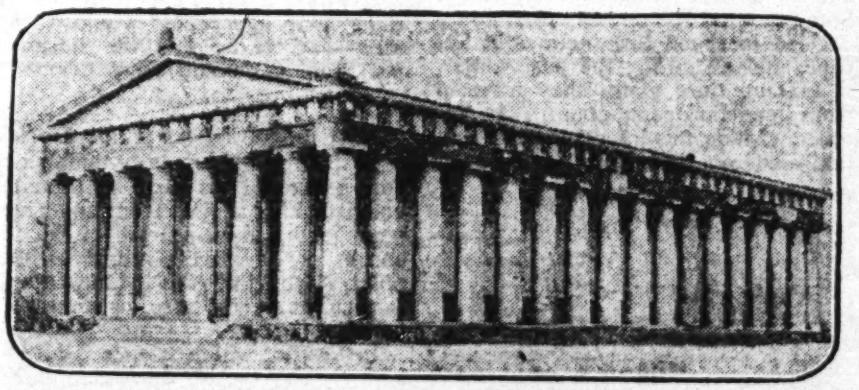

When the house was entirely destroyed its one time owner calmly confessed that the marbles had been ground up to make the mortar used in the dwelling! He thought it an excellent joke that Lord Elgin had been put to so much useless trouble and expense.

When Lord Elgin had gathered as many of the sculptures as he thought it advisable to remove they were carefully packed for the long journey to England. But there was great delay in their reaching their destination.

France and England were then at war and on the voyage home Lord Elgin was captured by the French and taken to Paris a prisoner. As a result the cases containing the sculptures lay long neglected at Malta and other places and it is a wonder that all of them were eventually recovered.

The flight of the Athenian fugitives, one of the many thrilling incidents that crowd the history of the time of the Parthenon's glory. From the celebrated painting by Leon Glaize.

The remarkably faithful replica of the Parthenon recently erected at Nashville, Tennessee, and used as a musuem.

Some of the marbles now in the British musuem lay for three years at the bottom of the Mediterranean. The vessel on which they were shipped was wrecked in the Grecian Archipelago and went down in 60 feet of water. It took long, expensive and daring work on the part of the divers to rescue the heavy boxes of marbles from the sea bed.

Although the art world acclaimed Lord Elgin for what he had done the British government took a pretty dubious view of the whole affair. It questioned whether the former ambassador to Turkey had any right to call the sculptures his private property, even though he had spent a fortune of nearly $400,000 in bringing them from Athens.

Lord Elgin met this criticism by offering to let the government buy the collection for some public museum. Then came the long haggling over the price, which finally ended in the earl's getting back less than half what his enterprise had cost.

The Parthenon was one of the first of the works of beauty conceived for the adornment of Athens after the vandalism of Xerxes had left the city in ruins in 480 B. C.

The master hand of Phidias made the colossal statue of Athena that stood in it, and he and his pupils carved, ornamented and furnished the entire building.

What made the Parthenon the world's most perfect building was the fact that it produced the illusion of nearness no matter at what distance it was viewed. Its sculptures reached their greatest heights of beauty in the frieze of the "cella" — an unbroken strip of colossal figures 524 feet long.

When New York Goes to Church

By Pierre Van Paassen

In a Thousand Ways, With Every Type of Music, Does New York Go About Its Worship

THE bells of New York answer each other through the bluish haze of a Sunday morning in June. From across the river in Brooklyn comes the slow, measured tolling of a heavy bell. It carries that monotonous, persistent appeal that once called Dick Whittington back to become mayor of London. Nearby a set of chimes suddenly crashes forth with the hymn of St. Ambrose, while farther away, uptown, a cathedral carillon ripples out its silver stream of notes. Some bells seem to pause and hesitate, others peal out with thunderous challenge. In some you seem to catch a note of alarm, frantic calling of sinners from the broad path. Others boom heavily, decorously but none the less impressively. If you could rise above the city and listen from the air to the ensemble of hundreds of bells and chimes and carillons, you would hear a medley of tinkling silver and sounding brass, a futuristic popourri, a symphonious morning hymn: calling the faithful to worship.

* * * * *

VOLUMES of music float from the organ loft down into the spacious nave of St. Patrick's cathedral. The air is heavy with the exotic Oriental perfume of myrrh and aloe. Blue spirals of smoke float above the altar in the distance. Myriads of colored electric bulbs glitter like so many rubies and emeralds round the blazing cross. Priests garbed in the sumptuous habits of high mass bend the knee in unison. An immense multitude bows the head in silent adoration. The slow measured step of the acolytes, the swinging of the censers, the solemn peal of altar bells, are overwhelmingly impressive. All at once a temple voice booms forth and intones the Kyrie, the oldest hymn of Christendom.

* * * * *

AT the Church of St. Nicholas you will find the service of the Russian orthodox church in progress. An interminable ritual, a pompous display of glittering ikons and bizarre Byzantine paintings. There is a note of sadness of the deepest melancholy in the voices of the priests. Is it a reflection of the condition of Holy Russia? A lament over the exile of the church militant from the land of soviets?

* * * * *

THERE is a martial, challenging tone in the organ of the Cathedral of St. John, the Divine. And there is something symbolic of angelic purity in the white surplices worn by very young choristers. Their voices strike a high jubilant note as they come marching in with measured tread. A bishop preceded by crozier carries a golden shepherd's staff. When the officiating cleric intones the Lord's prayer there is a rumble as of thunder rolling over low land or the beating of the surf in the distance. The hymns are sung with feeling and animation. The domed roof reverberates and re-echoes the anthems and the magnificent amens are a soul-stirring, harmonious blend of all keyes of the human voice.

* * * * *

THE German Lutherans sing their slow but overwhelming chorals. At the Baptist and Methodist churches there is a noticeable liveliness in the singing. In the Dutch Reformed church a doctor of divinity holds forth on a profound and contentious article of faith for a solid hour and there is not a moment that a single member of the congregation seems to weary of it. Then a psalm is sung. I notice that the people do not use their songbooks. They know the songs by heart, even to the last stanza. Softly the organ plays the Dutch national anthem as the crowd files out.

* * * * *

IN a hundred different ways—no, in a thousand different ways—does New York go about its worship. Spectacular preachers there are, who hold the crowd by ringing, sensational declarations. Other churches practice a deep and solemn ritual with no less impression upon the multitudes. There are Campbellitese and Primitive Wesleyans. Buddhist swamis who lecture on the Logos doctrine and the extinction of Nirwans. Baptists who challenge the orthodoxy of certain Presbyterians. Russian uniats and Stundists. Valdensians from Switzerland and the hills of Italy. Irishmen from Dublin and Belfast. There are French churches and Finnish churches, Greek temples and places where Mohammedans come to read the Koran. Persian Wahais and Theosophists there are and followers of Mrs. Eddy and soldiers of General Booth with their flags of blood and fire.

* * * * *

BUT there is unity in this diversity. No hostility or opposition. Each is allowed to go his own way and to worship in the way he chooses. Occasionally we hear of a wrangle, but it does not interfere with freedom of conscience. This toleration is one of the bulwarks of the republic. In fact it is one of its strongest foundations.

Among Us Georgians

By W. C. Woodall

OUT of one of the Georgia cities comes a story so intimate and so personal that it is hardly proper to mention names, even the name of the town.

A business man in this city had by hard work and closest attention to his affairs accumulated a comfortable fortune. He and his wife lived very economically, for he had a passion to save and accumulate.

One night there came to this hard-working business man a very vivid dream, in which he saw himself die. The next day he attended his own funeral—not such a remarkable thing to do, come to think about it. The dream jogged along, and a year later he saw his wife riding down the street with a stranger in a very handsome automobile. He soon ascertained that she had married again, and the couple was spending his hard-earned money freely, the big car having been among the first purchases.

When the Georgian awoke, a mighty resolve came to him: He determined to spend some of his money himself, while he was in the land of the living. He said nothing to his wife about his realistic dream, and an hour or so later she almost fainted when a handsome limousine was delivered at the home.

The gentleman and his wife proceeded to enjoy life, not recklessly, but to the full limit of legitimate pleasure.

Six months from the night he dreamed this dream, he died.

FLORIDA prosperity is working both ways: It's taking some of our folks and some of our money, but it's also taking some of our goods. Thus, Florida cities will use this year from 1,500 to 2,000 cars of granite curbing quarried in Georgia, most of it coming from Lithonia and Sparta. One West Coast city, which recently let contracts for $4,000,000 of street improvements, will take a considerable proportion of this curbing. Florida is also a large customer of the Georgia brick and tile plants.

DR. M. ASHBY JONES, popular Atlanta pastor, speaker and writer, is going to have a real vacation this summer, the first in years, and it comes about rather oddly. Some months ago Dr. and Mrs. Jones decided to spend this summer in Europe, and all during the past winter, in making their plans, they traveled from one European country to another, visiting this interesting city and that—all on the map, of course.

With spring came the usual crop of invitations to Dr. Jones to deliver speeches all through the summer—he is in great demand as a public speaker. He declined all these invitations in perfect good faith, for he was going to be in Europe. And, then, at the very last moment, Dr. and Mrs. Jones changed their plans and decided not to go to Europe. And so they have ahead a perfect summer, with not an engagement! Dr. Jones is already confessing that he's enjoying "going to Europe"—very much!

A BALTIMORE paint manufacturer publishes a booklet about his wares, and on the back of the pamphlet is a picture of Stone mountain. The illustration is not apropos of the paint in any way—he just wished to put on the cover of the booklet a striking picture, something that would interest everybody, something that everybody would recognize—and so he told the artists to put Stone mountain there.

ONE of the angles of the Einstein theory, as popularly understood and expressed, is that a traveling body, making a start from any given point in the universe, will in the due course of its travels return to that point, if you just give it time enough—perhaps an eon or so, or some such period.

In Griffin, where science is held in high regard, the highbrows do things scientifically, and this extends even to suicides, contemplated or consummated, according to the faithful report made by some traveling man, who surely would not misrepresent.

This Griffinite, according to the Georgia drummer's story, decided that life was not worth living, neither was death worth dying—that is, in the humdrum, conventional way. An original form of suicide struck him as the thing, something that would show thought, individuality and culture on the part of the shuffler-off of the mortal coil.

He had heard of the Einstein theory, of course, and highly approved it, a strong point in its favor, according to his method of reasoning, being that it had never been disproved. The idea came that if his method of self-destruction could give him a unique and unassailable place as a suicide expert, and also could prove, even with bloody testimony, the correctness of the Einstein theory, it would be fine for him and fine for science.

With great enthusiasm he prepared for the end. The weapon used was a high-powered rifle. The scene was an open field near his house. He saw no reason why he shouldn't be comfortable while he was waiting for the ball from the rifle to make its circuit, return from whence it came, and enter the back of his head, so he sat in a rocker, the rifle leveled on the back of a chair just in front of him—a suicide de luxe, with a suitable intermission for him to think of his sins and deliver a final prayer, if he so chose.

The rifle was carefully adjusted, parallel with the earth, and then our hero pulled the trigger, the explosion following instantly. He knew that the Einstein theory would be vindicated, that in due course the bullet would come back, still following the same course, and enter the back of his head exactly at the middle, for he leaned back in the rocker with his head on a level with the gun. He did not know just how long it would

William Jennings Bryan's Weekly Bible Talk

"He Calleth Thee"

By William Jennings Bryan

INSTEAD of reviewing the subjects covered by our Bible Talks during the past three months, I prefer today to draw some important lessons from the story of the healing of blind Bartimaeus, as recorded in the tenth chapter of Mark.

Bartimaeus suffered from an affliction that has ever appealed to sympathy, but I desire to use the physical blindness of Bartimaeus to call attention to forms of blindness which are even more to be pitied. The using of the physical to make known the spiritual is supported by the highest precedent.

Christ used bread, the staff of life, to illustrate the Bread of Life which we may eat and never hunger again.

He used water, the daily need of every living thing, to illustrate the Water of Life which we may drink and thirst no more.

At another time, Christ used the solicitude of the hen, one of the most faithful servants that man has ever found, to illustrate His own yearning for souls—"How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not."

I need offer no apology, therefore, for using the blindness of the beggar of Jericho to illustrate the greater misfortune of those who are intellectually blind, and of those who are spiritually blind, the greatest of all misfortunes.

There are some who live wholly in the physical world and do not even know that there is an intellectual world with larger horizons and greater joys. There are those, also, who live wholly in the intellectual world and are as blind to the spiritual in life as Bartimaeus was to the beauties of nature.

"He Calleth Thee"

Text of Today's Bible Talk by Mr. Bryan
(Mark 10:46-52)

And they came to Jericho: and as he went out of Jericho with his disciples and a great number of people, blind Bartimaeus, the son of Timaeus, sat by the wayside begging.

And when he heard that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out, and say, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me.

And many charged him that he should hold his peace: but he cried the more a great deal, Thou son of David, have mercy on me.

And Jesus stood still, and commanded him to be called. And they called the blind man, saying unto him, Be of good comfort, rise; he calleth thee.

And he, casting away his garment, rose, and came to Jesus.

And Jesus answered and said unto him, What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? The blind man said unto him, Lord, that I might receive my sight.

And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; thy faith has made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way.

I need not dwell upon the unhappy lot of those who have no taste for literature and art and who are ignorant of the satisfactions that come through the employment of the mind. No one in this day will attempt a defense of the narrowness of which those are guilty who know only the joys that come through the flesh.

But those who regard religion as a superstition are afflicted with a form of blindness infinitely more sad than that of the beggar of whom Mark speaks.

Tolstoy, twenty-five years ago, administered a rebuke to what he called "the cultured crowd" who, he says, think that religion is a superstition, useful to the ignorant—to hold them in check and restraint—but who think that one outgrows the necessity for religion when he reaches a certain period of intellectual development. It is a needed rebuke, for spiritual blindness today menaces not only religion but civilization itself.

BARTIMAEUS knew that he was blind; knowledge of one's need is the first step toward improvement. There are many so engrossed in the physical that they do not know that there is an intellectual world above them. There are, likewise, in the intellectual world, many who are wholly unconscious of the spiritual realm above them.

Bartimaeus not only knew that he was blind, but he desired that his eyes might be opened. Intellectual growth is not possible unless one desires to grow. And so one must desire to be born again before the spiritual element in him can be awakened.

Bartimaeus knew from whom he could secure his sight. He called to the Saviour, "Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me." And, it is worth noting, the blind man was in earnest. The crowd that followed Jesus rebuked him for disturbing the Master, but he cried yet the more.

Here is another analogy. Earnestness is necessary whether training of mind is to be added to bodily training or spiritual development is to be added to education.

I digress a moment to remark upon the change that took place in the multitude when Christ called to the blind man. When the blind man made his appeal to Jesus, the crowd was irritated by what they regarded as impertinence, but when Christ addressed the blind man, the situation was entirely changed. Then those who had shouted to him, "Keep still," were quick to carry to him Christ's message, saying, "He calleth thee."

The various forms of blindness might be sufficient for our study today. It would be lesson enough for one day if all who read this Bible Talk could be persuaded to examine and classify themselves. The proper study of mankind, we are told, is man, and along what line can one study to greater advantage?

Suppose we test ourselves by

Things New and Old About the Bible

Literary Difficulties of the Bible

By Rev. W. P. King Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Georgia.

THERE are two methods of approaching the Bible which are entirely distinct.

There is the theological method.

This method has its prejudgments as to what kind of revelation, a revelation from God, must be. The assumption is that revelation must be perfect like God, without any admixture of mistakes and errors. Consequently the entire contents of the Bible must be explained in consistency with this assumption. So there is the tremendous burden of reconciliation, and the urgent demand for reconcilers, to engage in their hopeless task.

There is the literary method.

This method proceeds without any prior assumption, and determines from the contents of the Bible itself the characters of the divine revelation. The literary study of the Bible is teaching us that its structure is more varied, and its composition more gradual than had formerly been supposed.

Contrary to the old view, the literary evidence is that the books of the Pentateuch and other books contain writings of very different style and are composite in structure. Some books, like Ecclesiastes, Esther and Daniel are shown by the language to belong to the latest stages of classical Hebrew. The compilatory origin of many of the books explains the presence of many minor discrepancies, duplication, and contradiction for which previously no satisfactory explanation has been given.

The Bible does not present to us a system of theology. It is cast into a variety of literary forms; into poetry of various kinds, into prophetical discourses, into proverbs, into laws, into narratives and in the New Testament into letters. It is probable that every form of literary composition known to the ancient Hebrews was used to convey divine truth, with, however, only slight traces of humor.

Prof. R. G. Moulton says, "Genesis is a collection of prehistoric narratives. Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy are a collection of ancient laws, civil and ecclesiastical. Kings and Chronicles are a series of historical records. Ruth is an idyll of the common people. Esther is a historical romance of court life. Job is an epic of the inner life. The Psalms are a Hebrew hymnal. The Proverbs are a collection of wise sayings by many authors. The Song of Songs is a drama of love under strong temptations. Ecclesiastes is a poem representing the conflicting interpretation of life of pessimism and hope. The books of the Prophets are volumes of sermons on national life. There are essays epigrams, sonnets, stories, sermons, song, philosophical treatises, histories, legal documents, dramas, love-songs, and apocalyptic visions.

"The Biblical literature embraces national anthems of Israel in various stages of history, war ballads, hymns of defeat and victory, hymns of triumphant entrance into a conquered city, pilgrim songs, and the chant with which the family parties beguiled the journeys to the grand feasts; fanciful acrostics to clothe sacred meditations, or composed in compliment to a perfect wife, even the games and riddles which belong to such social gatherings as weddings.

The literature of oratory is represented in Deuteronomy, while the Bible contains all to itself the department of prophecy."

THE study of comparative religions brings possibly the severest shock to the traditionalists. The story of creation has elements in common with Assyrian and Babylonian literature, but is infinitely superior in religious teaching. The ceremonial laws of the Pentateuch are now known to have close affinity with the regulation for worship and cleanliness observed by Assyria, Babylonia, Phoenicia and early Arabia. The laws of the Mosaic legislation, and those added by a later time, sanctioned national customs, but did not in the majority of instances originate them. The value of the Hebrew constitution was not in the externals of the ritual, but in the spiritual teaching and symbolic prophecy of the perfect sacrifice. There is no peril to the faith in the acceptance of that spiritual teaching which through works of imagination and reason, by tradition and history, was ordained for the training of the ancient church and the teaching of the modern church.

The Hebrew literature is the expression of the life of the Hebrew people. Life is before literature. The Bible literature did not produce the religious life, but the religious life of the people produced the literature.

In the apt words of Driver, "The whole is subordinate to the controlling agency of the spirit of God, causing the scriptures to be profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness."

The recognition of the Bible as literature has greatly strengthened and improved Biblical studies.

While the Bible is literature, it is a literature unique in its superiority. The writings are shaped by moral and religious ideas and ideals.

It is exceedingly unfortunate that the effort has been held that the Bible is a systematic and infallible deliverance even on matters of science. Dr. Nolan R. Best has well written:

"What could the hordes gathered before Sinai have made out of a treatise on the flora of the carboniferous age or a discussion of history of spiral nebulae? Were the earliest portions of the Bible of a nature like that it would scarcely be effrontery to say that God never had anything to do with such ridiculously displaced literature. Mothers know enough to tell their small children child stories;

YOUR BEAUTY IN

Valuable Helps to One's Good Looks the Hot Weather Brings Along With Many Dangers

"Drink, drink, drink—when it's pure, cool water that fills your glass. At least eight to ten glasses a day should be a woman's normal consumption during the summer, and anything up to twenty glasses would be better and better."

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

(Well-Known Authority on Beauty Culture)

IN previous articles I have told you of the inroads and the demands that summer makes on beauty. This is all only too true. But on the other hand, as compensation, summer gives to beauty, and gives generously.

I am referring to the natural beauty aids that come with the summer. And it is simply amazing how many of them lie all around us at this season. So many of the rich ripe fruits and fresh vegetables are priceless both as external and internal aids to one's good looks.

But before we take these up let me impress upon my women readers how important to beauty in summer is the drinking of pure water. I can scarcely overstress its beneficial effects. At least eight to ten glasses a day should be every woman's normal consumption, and anything up to 20 glasses would be "better and better and better," as the White Queen emphasized for Alice in Wonderland.

In other words, drink, drink, drink—when it's pure water that fills your glass.

Add the juice of half a lemon, unsweetened, to your before-breakfast glass of water and do this once again some time during the day. Spinach has long been called by the French "the broom of the stomach," but lemon is now competing with it for that title. Hence you can't go wrong on the frequent drinking of lemonade in the summer. But whether stout or slim I suggest you drink it with just as little sugar as possible, as it is more beneficial that way.

In spite of your lemon do not neglect your spinach. It is just as efficacious along its own lines and in its own way as lemon, though not as agreeable to the average person.

I have learned lately of a new type of summer drink for beauty and health of which I am availing myself to great advantage. A French actress gave me the suggestion the last time I was in Paris.

It is made by saving what are called the "pot liquors" from such greens as spinach, or dandelions, or turnip or beet tops — that is, the waters in which they were boiled and which are full of those mysterious strength-giving vitamins—and cooling them to take as a drink. I have, for instance, a tall glass of the pot liquor left from spinach put in the ice chest to cool and I drink it sometimes before breakfast instead of my lemon and water. I add, however, a dash of the former to make it more palatable, and sometimes a sprig or two of mint.

My French actress friend tells me she has her spinach drink, treated in this fashion, instead of iced tea at luncheon, and sometimes late in the afternoon.

Equal in importance to the drinking of water is the eating of the simple, wholesome uncooked foods that summer provides in such variety, fruits and salads and even raw vegetables.

Perhaps you noticed that when Lillian Gish was recently involved in a law suit she brought a raw carrot to court and nibbled on it at intervals throughout the trial like a dear little white rabbit. She explained that she finds nothing else so good for the health and complexion as raw carrots and that she thoroughly enjoys their natural flavor.

Bernhardt, the divine Sarah, was another great advocate of raw carrots. She used to have them finely scraped and served to her for breakfast almost every day of her life.

I know most women—and not a few men—will consider my advice most agreeable when I say that wholesome ice cream is a splendid hot weather food. It is digestible, nutritious and full of vitamins. But it should be eaten very slowly and is much better without the rich, sweet sauces that constitute sundaes and other concoctions, especially if one's skin has a tendency toward acne, or pimples.

THE proper diet is one of the surest ways of keeping cool in summer and guarding the complexion from the enemies that menace it in hot weather.

What has been described as a "business woman's lunch"—which merely means a lunch simple, short and sweet and one that would be splendid for everybody—might well consist of a half-pound of dates or figs with an apple or orange for dessert, and buttermilk as a beverage. Try this for a month and see the improvement in your complexion.

It is regrettable that we are not more awake to the almost priceless beauty-giving value of apples, oranges, lemons and grapefruit. I sometimes think that if these homely fruits were to become more rare and incidentally more costly we would appreciate them more and consequently gain more benefit from them.

To verify for ourselves the true importance of this "back to nature" advice we have only to think of the insistence of the great theatrical producer—conoisseur of beauty that he is—upon the fresh-skinned girl from the country. Practically all the greatest stage beauties originated there.

I myself instruct my personal maid to bring me apples — they are sliced and the core removed, but the health-giving skin is left on—four times a day each and every day that I spend

"The strawberry is much used by the French as a beauty aid. When cut in two, rubbed on the skin and allowed to dry, it constitutes a natural bleach and an excellent tonic. But beware of applying soap until the juice has been thoroughly washed off with clear, cold water."

SUMMER.

in my country home. I should do this every day of my life were it not for the fact that my business days are so crowded that I scarcely get sufficient time for a bite of luncheon, let alone snatching the precious moments to eat apples four times per day.

All this advice on eating and drinking is the corner stone of beauty-building. It gives a good firm foundation for the beauty specialist to work upon.

The healthy skin, to a degree, is a beautiful skin, but it seldom has the allure of the highly cultivated and exquisitely cared-for skin. Like every other highly cultured product it has a finesse and delicacy which the uncultivated always lacks.

APPLIED beauty culture itself may still keep close to nature. For the young girl whose elders have withstood the overwhelming tide in the popular use of cosmetics, and who still holds to the old-fasioned prejudice against artificial make-up. I have a cheery word and a few secrets that I will pass along. These will gladden their hearts, enhance their beauty, and at the same time keep them within the required limits of parental restriction.

What mother or father could possibly object, no matter how tender the age of a daughter, to her applying a piece of raw cut beet to her cheeks is she needs a little added color? Beet juice really gives a lovely, delicate shade, and is absolutely harmless to the tenderest skin. Most women, however, prefer a dainty box of rouge to the homely beet, and are wise enough to choose one of the special rouges which have a fruit or flower or vegetable base for their coloring.

The strawberry is much used by the French as a beauty aid. When cut in two, rubbed on the skin and allowed to dry, it constitutes a natural bleach and an excellent tonic. But beware of applying soap until the juice has been thoroughly washed off with clear, cold water.

The strawberry imparts its own delicious color to the skin, and at the same time whitens and eradicates any skin imperfections. The same acid taken internally sometimes disagrees with one's stomach and results in the little rash called "hives." But, strangely enough, it is positively beneficial to the skin when applied externally.

Another "homey" but effective bleach for the unpleasantly sallow skin is unsalted cottage cheese, or sour milk. Rub this into the skin after it has been thoroughly cleansed and leave it on to dry. The result will be much the same as the widely-heralded beauty clays, leaving the skin soft and smooth and white. This treatment repeated twice a week will do wonders in keeping the complexion clear.

Summer offers still another whitener and cleanser in the shape of the humble cucumber, which may be either rubbed on, or the juice squeezed out, put in a bottle and kept on the dressing table. A little applied during the day or at night and permitted to dry is very good, indeed.

The boughten bleaches, astringents and tonics are, of course, a great deal more delightful to use. The better brands of these are quite as pure as the raw fruits or vegetables. As a matter of fact many of them contain the juices of cucumbers, strawberries, raspberries, water lilies and other vegetables, fruits or flowers.

For hands that summer plays havoc with, one should keep a bowl of bran standing conveniently close to the wash bowl of the summer cottage. After washing the hands and before drying plunge them into this bran, rubbing it well into the skin. You will find it an easy way of keeping them in good condition when sun and wind, gardening and athletic sports are menacing them.

THE woman whose neck is inclined to be yellow should not forget the bleaching properties of lemon juice. I should warn you, however, to dilute the juice at least two to one. In this proportion it is an excellent whitener. But should you in your over-zealous desire to get speedy results use it clear, you are liable to defeat your own purpose and your neck will become several shades darker instead of lighter.

The more tender the skin, the more you should dilute the lemon juice. And I would also advise that you do not use the lemon daily, as its insistent acid tends to dry the natural oils and will sometimes harshen the sensitive skin.

Mme. Helena Rubinstein, the author of this series of articles.

"Summer offers still another whitener and cleanser in the humble cucumber. It may be sliced lengthwise and rubbed on the skin, or the juice squeezed into a bottle and applied from that. Let the whitening juice dry on the skin."

"In the care of one's beauty in summer, more than at any other time, an "ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Don't forget how much trouble the use of a parasol or the carrying of a broad-brimmed hat can save you when the sun's glare is unusually strong.

And above all things, don't wait until your poor skin is crying for attention before giving it proper care. If vacationing takes you beyond reach of the remedies on which you usually rely, remember that the cucumber, the strawberry and the lemon are very efficient substitutes.

Too many women, especially the younger ones, approach the summer's beauty problems with an "I-don't-care" spirit. They live to regret their thoughtlessness in the fall when they see what damage has been done their good looks.

A wise rule to follow in summer is to simplify one's life as much as possible. Eat the simplest and most natural of foods and not too many kinds at the same meal. Reduce your clothing to a minimum both in texture and tightness. And conserve your energy.

I wish there was some way I could impress every woman with the importance of these truths. The longer I live the more I am convinced of the advantages of the simple life.

One Beauty Who Baffles Mr. Meade

How Thoris Sutherland's $250,00 Suit Threatens to Pro

Not Such an Women's H

At last the man who once said that only a "bungling knave" could be deceived in a woman is confronted by a feminine puzzle that stumps him.

HERMAN LEE MEADER is a wealthy New York architect, famous for the hospitality he extends his friends on his private yachts and in the luxurious villa he has built on top of a Fifth avenue skyscraper.

Also, until recently, he has been even more famous as a connoisseur of feminine beauty.

"There's a man who knows women," is the way Mr. Meader has been often referred to. "Appreciates their good qualities, has all their weaknesses spotted, knows how to keep them happy without letting them run away with things."

Anyone who doubted statements like these was referred to Mr. Meader's three books—"Cupid, the Surgeon," "Reflections of the Morning After" and "Comin' Thru the Rye."

These volumes certainly seemed incontrovertible evidence of the wisdom of which Mr. Meader's friends boasted. They are filled with biting analyses of women's foibles and epigrammatic advice on how to handle them. With the Meader philosophy to guide one even the management of a whole harem is made to seem a simple matter.

"One suspects," said a reviewer of these daring solutions of love, courtship and marriage problems, 'that Mr. Meader has spent a good deal of time in practicing what he preaches; for, if one scratches off the varnish of his humor, one finds a great deal of sound sense beneath."

But Mr. Meader's far-flung fame as a practical and authoritative expert on how man can best deal with womankind has received what may prove a knockout blow.

The blow that sent it staggering to the ropes feel when the attorneys for a pretty young Brooklyn blonde walked into a New York court the other day and demanded that the wealthy architect, author and clubman hand over $250,000 to their client in atonement for the wedding ring he has failed to give her.

The young woman who brings this suit is Miss Thoris Sutherland. She lives with her mother and sister in one of the most unquestionably respectable sections of Brooklyn. In proof of the sincerity of her injured innocence her attorneys declare that she has never been on the stage or in the movies and never will be.

FRIENDS of Mr. Meader and thousands of disciples of the philosophy set forth in his books caught their breaths in amazement when they heard of this suit.

It seems incredible to them that all his wisdom in the handling of womankind has at last been baffled—and by a mere slip of a girl! They shrink from the thought that their teacher and guide is at last confronted by a feminine puzzle that stumps him.

Now that they find the $250,000 suit is actually a matter of court record some of them insist that wise Mr. Meader will promptly squelch this presumptuous young woman's claims—and very probably with a few well-chosen quotations from his published works.

But when reporters call on Mr. Meader at his roof-top villa not a pithy epigram is forthcoming from his usually eloquent lips. He has nothing whatever to say.

With his ominous silence the fear spreads that Mr. Meader's boasted wisdom is not the invulnerable armor for men which thousands of his admirers have hoped and believed. It begins to look discouragingly as if this shy little daughter of a "solid Brooklyn family" has found the weak spots in it and is going to shatter the whole thing when she gets her day in court.

"Mr. Meader promised to marry me at various times between 1920 and 1924," says Miss Sutherland through her lawyers. "Because of his promises I have since remained unmarried. Although he has betrayed me, I am still willing to marry him.

"He has damaged me to the extent of $250,000. I demanded judgment for this sum with costs and disbursements."

When the case comes to trial Miss Sutherland's lawyers promise that she will tell in great detail how the rich man wooed her as they sat in the picturesque garden of his villa looking down from a height of fifteen stories on the lacework of lights that spreads over Manhattan at twilight. The honeyed words he whispered in her ear, the gallant gestures of devotion he is alleged to have made—all will be described in realistic detail. The trial will, it is hinted, furnish a remarkable object lesson in the art of love as practiced by a man who has been regarded as one of the greatest authorities on the ways of women's hearts.

BESIDES all this verbal evidence Thoris Sutherland promises to enliven the dreary court records with a wealth of love letters—letters alleged to have been penned by the same hand that wrote "Cupid, the Surgeon" and to sparkle as brilliantly as its pages.

Some of Mr. Meader's admirers fear that the threatened end of his fame as a solver of the problems of love, courtship and marriage may be even more humiliating than is now apparent. They think it highly probable that Miss Sutherland will turn against him some of the very shafts of satire, wit and wisdom that have made him famous.

One paragraph of Mr. Meader's that might very aptly be quoted in connection with her demand for $250,000 is this:

To appease women and babies, give them what they think they want.

There is no doubt that Thoris Sutherland is thinking very hard that she wants a quarter of a million from Mr. Meader in lieu of the ring she didn't get. And how can even his wisdom prove that she isn't?

Other extracts from Mr. Meader's books which take on new and unusual interest in the light of the breach of promise suit are:

Women want to be caught—a wise provision of nature that deserves the never-ending gratitude of masculine stupidity.

Considered broadly, there are four groups into which women may be classified: The conceited, the sentimental, the mercenary and the blase. These are distinctive types and none but a BUNGLING KNAVE could mistake them.

To make a man happy, love him; to make a woman happy, let her love you.

Marriage is like a charity bazaar; the admission fee is very small, but it will cost you all you've got before you get out.

Poverty is not without its rewards. The man who has to shine his own shoes need never fear dyspepsia nor a breach of promise suit.

If you can't think of anything else to tell a woman say you love her.

Say what you mean and do what you say and there will be fewer misunderstandings and less unpleasantness. No one ought to kick at being taken at his word.

A man without a few evil intentions is like lingerie without lace—uninteresting.

Marriage is often a delightful luxury, but as a delicious romance it doesn't last long.

What a paradox is woman! Her strength is her weakness. She challenges by faltering, she fights by yielding and she conquers by falling.

SOME of these paragraphs, written for the most part years before Thoris from Brooklyn first stepped into the Fifth avenue roof-top villa, have a prophetic ring. It is hard to reconcile many of them with a refusal to do what Miss Sutherland demands—provided her charges are true.

Mr. Meader's philosophy of love until now thought so infallible, is based on a study of beautiful and talented women that has stretched over more than thirty years—ever since his college days at Harvard. And in all that time this suit of Miss Sutherland's is the first disaster that is known to have threatened him and his theories.

It is true that he lost a wife through divorce, but nobody considered this anything except a triumphant confirmation of the soundness of his philosophy. To celebrate it he published "Comin' Thru the Rye," a book which is supposed to be based largely on his experiences in winning and losing Queenie Ethel, a former chorus girl.

When he saw that his married life with Queenie was ceasing to be a "delicious romance" he quite complacently let her get a divorce. The only serious protest he raised was when she charged that the furnishings in the living room of his Fifth avenue villa cost $30,000 and said he owned a yacht and two motor boats and a magnificent seashore estate that covered a whole island.

Mr. Meader said she was glorifying his possessions. He insisted that his villa is only a "modest hut."

But those who have seen it pronounce it more of a palace than a hut. The rooms are hung with rare tapestries and filled with antique furniture and costly pictures, vases and other artistic treasures. The main room, where Mr. Meader so frequently entertains the women about whom he philosophizes so positively, is twenty-five feet wide and thirty-five feet long and measures twenty-four feet from ceiling.

Will Mr. Meader yet succeed in finding a triumphant way out of the tangle into which his acquaintanceship with Thoris Sutherland landed him?

Will he eventually prove that she is not too much of a puzzle for his carefully gathered wisdom to solve and that his philosophy is still invincible?

It will be most interesting to see just how he deals with one of the very situations which his books represents as comparatively easy for the man who follows their advice to avoid or escape from.

The Gates of Doom

The Story of the

"OF THE reasons that move me," said I, 'I need to state but two—the two most tangible and irrefutable ones. The first is the unsuitability of my Lord Pauncefort on the score of his age. He is, by almost fifteen years, your elder, Damaris. The other is that I am persuaded that the main object of your suit, my lord, is not my niece herself, but my niece's fortune.'

"They cried out upon me together at that denunciation.

"'It is a foul untruth,' thundered my lord in a great passion.

"'I shall rejoice to be convinced of that,' said I. 'I am to understand then that my niece's fortune weighs for nothing in your calculations?'

"'No single jot—I swear it," he answered me, mighty hot.

"'That your love for Damaris is entirely disinterested? That you would make her your viscountess were she penniless?' I pursued.

"'Yes,' he answered me fiercely, 'pon honor.'

"'You swear it glibly enough,' said I. 'But will you prove it?'

"'Prove it?' quoth he, and I saw a change creep over his face. He was quick enough to discern the trap into which I had lured him.

"'It is within your power to do so,' I assured him. 'You know the terms of her father's will: I have no power to withstand the marriage if you are both set on't. All that I have the power to do is to withhold and disperse the inheritance. But since that counts for nothing with you, since it is Damaris you want and nothing more, since your love for her knows naught of interest, why, take and marry her in spite of me, and God give you joy of each other.'"

SIR JOHN paused a moment, and shook his head in melancholy retrospection.

"Poor Damaris!" he sighed. "You should have seen her at that moment, Harry—her eyes aglow with confidence in herself and her lover, with gladness at the prospect upon which I had opened that crafty window. What cared she for her fortune, poor child? Gladly would she forfeit it to prove her love. I was turned almost sick with pity at the sight of that joyous transfiguration, what time she waited for that swift, ardent answer upon which so confidently she counted from her lover.

"Alas! It never came. He stood stricken there, a little pale, staring at me in anger and dismay, until at last she raised her eyes in inquiry to his face, wondering why the answer was delayed. Before what she saw written on that countenance she blanched, and with a little cry of pain she drew away from his arm, which had grown limp as all the rest of him.

"He turned to her. 'Damaris!' he cried. 'Hear me! Wait! You do not understand.'

"'I think that I understand at last,' she answered, and her voice was like a knife. I could have wept for the poor child.

"And Pauncefort still sought to reason with her, to explain that which was clear already beyond all words. 'Don't you see, Damaris,' was his plea, 'that if we do this, we give Sir John the victory—that it is the very thing he desires, since 'twill be to his benefit.'

"It was true enough, though I had not given the matter a thought. And yet he could not have employed an argument that must most surely have completed his damnation.

"'To his benefit?' she questioned, snatching at a straw of hope. 'How to his benefit?'

"Why, of the inheritance that is to be dispersed under such circumstances ten thousand pounds will go into his own coffers.'

"'It shall go instead,' said I, 'to Chelsia hospital.'

"But not even so much defense was needed to such an imputation. She looked at him, and never have I seen a deadlier smile on living face.

"'You are marvelous well acquainted with the terms of this will,' said she, and struck him breathless by the unexpectedness of that overwhelming blow. 'You must have given it some hours of study.' With that and a little laugh, she turned again, and left us here together."

Once more Sir John paused. He looked at his companion with a wan smile. Capt. Gaynor met the look with eyes that were gleaming oddly; his lips were very tightly pressed. He had listened intently to every word, and he ws reflecting that the questionable game he had played at Pauncefort's had been still more questionable than he had deemed it since. for Pauncefort, it seemed, had staked something that could not be called his own. And what faith can be reposed in a man who stoops to a practice so dishonorable? But Sir John's story had not yet reached the end.

"It was after she had gone that he revealed himself," he resumed. "He stormed and raged, and finally he threatened me."

"Threatened?" echoed the captain, haled suddenly out of his musings by that word.

"Ay, threatened—covertly. He swore that I should bitterly repent me of that day's work. I ask you, Harry: To what could his threats have reference? What could be in his mind?"

THE captain expressed his disgust and amazement in an oath. "You think he would prove such a dastard?"

"At least he considered it—that is quite plain. Between considering a villainy and performing it there is but a step. But there is little occasion for alarm on my behalf. I have been too cautious; there is not a scrap of evidence against me in existence. I am well viewed by the government; any story of my defection must be discredited, and any man that bears it must place his own neck in a noose. So do not give it thought. But give thought, I beg of you, to a man who stoops to consider such means of vengeance, and ask yourself whether, being dishonorable, as this proves him, and desperate—more desperate than ever now—he would hesitate to use such means for profit, to extricate himself from his difficulties, to save him from the spunging-house."

Aghast, the captain looked at Sir John. Then his expression changed; he frowned in perplexity. He was considering Lord Pauncefort's assertion that his difficulties were less desperate than he had feared. Could this mean, wondered the captain, that to resolve them he had already taken some such measure as the baronet was suggesting?

"I have made a long tale of it," said Sir John, 'that you may judge for yourself whether my warning was well advised or not."

"I thank you, Sir John," replied the captain. "Indeed, indeed, I fear me the grounds for your suspicions are most just." Then his face cleared, and he smiled. "Be assured that I shall move with caution—with more than caution, where his lordship is concerned."

And upon that they parted at last, and Sir John rode away, attended by a couple of grooms, to seek his brother who lay ill at Bath.

Through the grounds of Priory Close a brook winds its course on its way to the Abbey River. It flows in a little ravine, which, moatlike, almost completely encircles a wonderful old garden. You approach it by a path that runs through a plantation of firs on the south side of the mansion.

By this path, through the green shade that was shot here and there by golden sunlight, Capt. Gaynor took his idle way on the following morning. It brought him to a rustic bridge, some twenty paces long, spanning the gap at a height of fifteen feet or more above the stream. Over this he sauntered leisurely. He paused amidway and, leaning upon the rail, admired the dense tunnel of foliage formed by the intertwining of the trees that stood on either side of the ravine.

Capt. Gaynor sighed thoughtfully, and went on across that enchanted bridge, into another, lesser plantation on the farther side, over a carpet of pine needles, he came into the blazing sunlight and a riot of color, backed by colossal boxwood hedges.

On the left of the pathway which he followed, and which ran the garden's full length to the distant red-brown wall, was spread an orchard, all pink and white with blossom, and through the trees in the distance he espied his host's niece and daughter.

THEY stood near the brook, in a conversation that the captain might have accounted earnest had not the high, trilling note of Evelyn's laughter reached him across the distance. Thereupon he took his way towards them, never dreaming that he came to interrupt an argument whereof he was himself the subject.

"Let us tell Capt. Gaynor," Damaris said, "that in jest we permitted him to persist in the error into which of his own accord he fell."

"We can tell him tomorrow or the next day," answered Evelyn airily. "Besides, I do not admit that the error was originally his own. That is the incense you offer to your vanity." And thereupon had trilled out that flute noted laugh which had caught the sauntering captain's ears.

A little color showed in Damaris' cheek.

"Confess," Evelyn mocked her, "confess now that your concern is reluctance to show yourself without your gilding."

"You are vastly, cruelly unkind, Evelyn," answered Damaris in gentle rebuke, and this answer took her cousin by surprise. For neither Evelyn nor her mother knew of that happening in the library a week ago, knew or guessed of the wound, the deep, cruel wound that Damaris had sustained in her affection and her pride.

"Unkind?" quoth Evelyn. "La! In what now am I unkind?"

"In your estimate of me. If Captain—"

A rustle behind her caused her to turn her head, and thus they became aware of the captain's approach.

Coming up to them he doffed his feathered hat and made a leg with a certain distant stiffness, craving their leave to bear them company.

It was granted him by Evelyn, with a flutter of eyelids and the demure air of challenge that most men knew in her. And then, with mischievous intent to perpetuate the confusion of identities—

"Evelyn," said she, indicating Damaris, "is all pride in her garden."

"Then," said the captain, "pride is well placed for once. I have seen many gardens 'twixt here and far Cathay, but never one in which there dwelt a peace so joyous. Madam," he addressed himself to Damaris, and the serious sincerity of his speech robbed it of any construable impertinence, "your garden repays your pride, for I think it does justice to its mistress."

The brown eyes of Damaris met his own a moment, as if she were appraising the full value of his words; then they passed on; a faint smile crossed her face, which was of the warm, lusterless pallor of old ivory, and slightly she bowed her head as if in courteous acknowledgment.

Now, although her eyes had met his own for a moment, yet in that fleeting glimpse Capt. Gaynor had caught the wistfulness that inhabited them, and something within him had leaped in response to something that was near akin to an appeal. This appeal, he knew, was not to himself; it was to nature, to the world, to heal her of a sorrow or to satisfy a longing, he knew not which. But it touched him and in touching scarred him and branded him her servant, to heal or satisfy as her need might be when he should come to understand it, and if so be that she would accept the service that should be hers.

Their talk was still of that garden and of other gardens which the captain in his travels had beheld, to all of which Damaris contributed but little, and that little only when she was herself directly addressed.

"I knew," he said, "when I stepped upon that bridge that I was coming at last into the enchanted garden that we have all heard of in our early youth, and of whose real existence the bitter, all desecrating knowledge of later years has made us skeptical."

"And you have discovered its enchantment?" murmured Evelyn, scenting here the prologue to a speech of gallantry.

"I think I have," he answered, with an amazing seriousness, looking straight ahead. He sighed. "The spell of it is already upon me, I think. Did I unwisely linger I fear that it must overwhelm me utterly."

He was so sober, so solemn, that Damaris glanced at him, her keen ears informing her that behind these words of his lay prepared no such trifling speech as her cousin still expected.

"What is it?" she asked. It was the first time she had spontaneously addressed him, and his glance met her again, held it a moment, and then, still meeting it, seemed to look beyond and away. Thus may the poet or the fanatic look.

"It is," he said, and his voice sank reverently, "it is that God's peace—God's disregarded, priceless gift to man—is here. Somewhere here, too, is the tree of true knowledge, for its essences hang heavily upon the air. To inhale them is to achieve perception of the true meanness of worldly things, the horror of strife and bloodshed, the contempt of ambition, which is but a euphemism for striving selfishness and vainglory. Who that could dwell here would dwell elsewhere? Who that once has breathed deep of this fragrance would ever again suffer the world's stews to offend his nostrils?"

Evelyn — disappointed Evelyn—laughed on her high note, a little mockingly. "I vow, sir," she minced, "that you are vastly poetical."

His eye, cold and inscrutable, rested upon her for a moment. He bowed.

"I thank you, Miss Hollinstone," said he, "for having broke the spell. Had it persisted it might well have proved the undoing of a poor soldier."

"What is your regiment, sir?" she asked him. She had something of her mother's inconsequence.

"I have had many; but I have none now," was his reply. "My last commission was in the sultan's army."

"The sultan?" cried both girls together, so taken aback were they.

"The Grand Turk," he explained easily. "His cavalry was all disjointed, and I undertook the office of instructing it. Also I saw some service against Venice."

Damaris looked at him with incredulous eyes.

"You fought against Christians in the service of the Infidel!" she cried.

"I fought against rogues in the service of rogues, ma'am. That is the pure truth of it. For the rest, it is not the mercenary's to do more than choose the service that offers the best pay."

HE saw the scorn gathering in her glance. But he did not know upon what bitter pastures it had been nourished. He did not know that in his own case it was the sharper because she accounted that she had been mistaken in him a moment ago when he had talked of the garden.

"And do you always," she asked him, "fight for the side that pays you best?"

"By your leave, ma'am, I should account myself a fool to fight for the other."

He had not winced before her cool, appraising eye, nor the half-veiled contempt of her question. He had his part to play—for the sake of that master to whose service was to be yielded up the fruit of all other services. It wounded him—unreasonably, he held—to appear before her in this light. But the necessities demanded it.

"I have made arms my trade," he explained. "I am a soldier of fortune, and in all my seeming inconsistencies of service I have been consistent at least in that I have served fortune always—more stoutly," he added ruefully, "than fortune has served me."

"How odd!" sighed Damaris; for his bold frankness had beaten down much of her nascent scorn, yet not quite all. "How very strange."

"In what is't strange?" quoth Evelyn, as if defending him.

"Strange that men should sacrifice their best for gold, imperil their lives and pawn their honor for the sake of profit."

"Not all men," said the captain, with his wry smile. "There is no lack of those who sacrifice all this to dreams and moonshine—the gratitude of princes, the favor of the people, the love of country, immortal renown and other such intangibilities."

"Do you scorn them?" she challenged him.

"As soldiers, yes," he quibbled. "Their ardor detracts from their value, robs them of the proper calm, and I have found that they but poor opponents to the trained mercenary, who in battle is all calculation and no heat."

"I speak not of that," said Damaris, "but of their aims, of the mainspring of their actions—in short, their loyalty and devotion to the ideal. Do you scorn that, sir?"

He met her glance quite calmly. "No, ma'am, I do not," said he.

"Then," she cried, warmed a little by the argument upon which she was embarked—and the subject was one very near to her poor, wounded heart these days—"then, surely, you must scorn the others, these mere helots."

"Such as myself?" said he, no shadow of offense in tone or voice. "Believe me, did I do so I should change my ways. I think that it is possible to respect both."

AGAIN she measured him with those cool, appraising eyes. She judged him to be good and clean; honest he had already proved himself by the frankness of his admissions in the face of a scorn that she had scarce attempted to dissemble. She considered his firm mouth and steely eyes, the poise of his head and uprightness of his carriage, and from it all she gathered intuitively a sense that he was true metal—a man to be relied upon, a man to whom the weak and the oppressed would turn by instinct, a man who would never hurt the honor of a fellow man, a man in whom a woman might place her trust.

Because her intuitions showed her all this in him, she desired to understand a point of view that seemed to contradict it all; perhaps she even thought to combat his views, to reveal to him the unworthiness in his aims which was all so clear to her.

"I cannot think," she answered, "I cannot think that respect is due to one who makes a trade of that which should be the expression of profound convictions. Life is surely as sacred a gift as honor, and to adventure it for gold cannot be other than unworthy. If war must be, if men must fight, surely it should be in defense of liberty, of right, of high ideals. Surely there is naught else can justify the risk of life; and to risk life from any other mainspring must be at least a little—base."

She would have added more, but meeting his glance again, seeing him so calm and entirely unruffled, the ghost of a smile hovering upon his tight lips, she checked. A wave of color swept across her face. "Forgive me," she begged, "if I have said more than I should. After all, I think I am not so much reproving—to which, indeed, I have no shadow of right—as seeking information."

He laughed gently, on that deep musical note of his. "Indeed, I am relieved," said he. "For I began to fear you lacked for charity in your judgment."

"Indeed, yes," put in Evelyn, who perceived at last a chance of intervention. "And particularly now that you are come to offer your sword to your own country."

"Nay, but that is worse," he exclaimed. "It is to say that I see the error of my ways, and am come to mend them?"

"And is't not so?" she asked.

"Why, no," said he. But it was to Damaris that he seemed to speak. "It is that I lack employment elsewhere."

He found her troubled eyes regarding him with less of scorn than pity now, and it was that glance he answered when he said: "And yet I do not say that if I found a cause that were worth serving for its own sake I should be slow to serve it, perhaps even to my loss."

"I think you would," said Evelyn, those questing, provoking eyes of hers enveloping him in their regard.

He bowed somewhat formally acknowledgment. "Meanwhile," said he, "I must beware the seduction of this enchanted garden ere its magic prove the undoing of a wandering mercenary."

A liveried groom approached them through the trees, and Evelyn, who was first to see him, announced his coming and its object.

"Here is Gibbs, sweet cousin," said she, "to inquire if you will ride the nag you bade him saddle."

She perceived that at last she would be rid of Damaris and would have the captain entirely to herself.

But it so chanced that the captain had not come forth in jack boots and spurs to saunter all the morning in a garden. He, too, was minded to ride, as he now announced.

"And so, Miss Kynaston," he ended, addressing Damaris, "if you will suffer me to be your escort, you may repay me by acting as my guide over a countryside with which I am unacquainted. You see that in all things I am true to my mercenary's character."

SHE hesitated a moment, whereupon he bowed submissively, as to a refusal.

"It was presumptuous in me to proffer even for payment a service which I had not first ascertained to be desired," he said. "Ladies, I am your obedient, grateful servant."

He swept them both a bow, and was turning to depart, when Damaris stayed him.

"You are very quick, sir, to suppose me churlish."

Evelyn's eyes were sparkling angrily, and Damaris observed it, but was not deferred. It were a gross discourtesy to a guest to allow him to depart thus. "I shall be glad to ride with you, sir," she smiled, "upon the terms you name."

It proved a fruitful ride for both of them, and for Damaris even more than for him. She drew him into talk of himself, of his travels, the countries he had seen and the many services in which his mercenary's sword had been engaged. And he talked frankly and entertainingly. The absence of that boastfulness of exploits so usual in his kind went far to impress her favorably, confirming much of the judgment of him which already she had formed.

That ride did much to heal the bruises that her gentle heart had taken a week ago. In the captain's company she seemed to be regaining something of that buoyancy which but yesterday she fancied had left her for all time.

The image of Pauncefort faded in her mind to a proper insignificance. She drew a parallel between him and this man beside her, and she seemed to discover that if once she had set his lordship upon a pedestal and gone near to worshiping him, it was because in the seclusion in which her youth had been passed it had been hers never to meet a real man.

But at the root of all was that foolish compact she had made with Evelyn, which she had so keenly regretted and to which that morning she had sought to set an end. Had she but done so, how differently must she now be feeling, with what suspicions, with what convictions of unworthy motives in him must she now be regarding the frank and pleasant comradeship of this soldier of fortune; how the regard he had been quick to show her must have but served to increase the bitterness she had been carrying in her heart—a bitterness of which, all being as it was, he was gradually and surely effacing all trace.

She rejoiced now in that compact —rejoiced as only one who had been through her torment of disillusion could rejoice. What matter that its ultimate disclosure must be attended by some loss of dignity? Here was one who was a self-proclaimed mercenary, a man whose life was dedicated to fortune's service. In such an one the pursuit of the wealthy heiress Damaris Hollinstone was the thing to be expected. How potent, then, must have been the magnet that had drawn him as completely from her whom he believed to be that person as though she had never been in existence.

THE fact is that Capt. Gaynor had come into the life of Damaris Hollinstone in an hour of crisis. Coming then, the flattery of his obvious preference and regard, which in another season—whether he believed her to be Damaris or Evelyn—would have been to her a trifling matter, was now a flattery most sweet and healing.

It is to be feared that in the week that ensued the real aims of Capt. Gaynor's visit to England engaged his attention but indifferently. The spell of the garden was upon him, or else the spell of one of its most constant inhabitants. The brook that wandered through it became to him symbolical of the Lethean waters. Oblivious of past and future, he lived but in the present like any lotus eater, and if there was a thing to vex him in those brief, happy summer days it was the consideration of the character—truthful in much and in much else untruthful, as we know—in which necessity had demanded that he should appear to Damaris.

Meanwhile the deception on the score of identities continued to be practiced upon him. though more than once it had gone very near to shipwreck at the hands of servants and in other almost inevitable ways. But it was Evelyn who steered it clear in every shallow, compelled to it for all the reluctance and vexation that had now come upon her. For she found the tables most ludicrously turned.

Supported by her mother, she had taxed Damaris with unmaidenness of conduct when on the second morning of the captain's visit her cousin had made her appearance dressed again for riding.

"Why, Evelyn," she protested, "I am doing no more than you have forced upon me."

"Forced upon you? I?" cried Evelyn, round eyes staring.

"Did you not insist that you would be Damaris Hollinstone and that I should be Evelyn Kynaston? As the supposed daughter of his host, the captain has a right to look for certain attentions from me in my father's absence. To withhold them were to be neglectful of the common duties of hospitality, and I would not be that for Sir John's sake."

"Why, that is true now," purred Lady Kynaston. "Yes, that is very true. I have always said that hospitality is the duty of an English lady."

Evelyn almost choked with anger. "I think," said she, "that the sooner we resume our proper identities the better it will be."

"'Tis what I have always held, and I am glad that at last you agree with me. I shall leave you, then, to enlighten the captain?"

"Why not enlighten him yourself?"

"Because I am sure it will become you better. Let us consider now what you shall say. You will tell him that misliking such admiration as you have observed bestowed upon your cousin Damaris, but being persuaded that this was a tribute entirely to her fortune, you induced her to—"

"Am I mad, d'ye think?" cried Evelyn, with an angry stamp of her satin clad foot.

"Well, then, say what you please; but be sure that such is the construction which he must place upon anything that you tell him. There is not room for any other."

"I think you wish the deception to continue," Evelyn announced.

"I am indifferent," answered Damaris.

"I understand," said Evelyn slowly. Her cheeks were burning, as were her eyes. "Oh, I understand you!"

"I gravely doubt it," answered Damaris.

"You are forgetting Lord Pauncefort," Evelyn said tartly.

"I am endeavoring to do so," Damaris admitted, though in a fuller sense.

Evelyn stared. "You confess it!" she exclaimed. "Mother, you hear her! Oh, never could I have believed you so shameless, Damaris, so lost to all sense of what you owe yourself. Never!"

"Mother, dear," Damaris besought her, "can you not move her to a gentler mood?"

"She means you well, dear Damaris," was Lady Kynaston's answer. "Hence her concern for you. I must confess that I do not think you show a proper regard for your betrothal to Lord Pauncefort. He would not be pleased did he know how you receive Capt. Gaynor's assiduous attentions."

"My bethrothal to Lord Pauncefort—" Damaris began, and there she checked. She could not submit herself to all the examination which her announcement must provoke; she could not suffer to parade before Evelyn's eyes the shame that in secret she had endured, the humiliation she had borne.

SAVING for similar daily scenes, that week to Damaris was as happy a season as it was to Harry Gaynor. Ere it was sped, the desolation left in her soul by Lord Pauncefort's self-revelation was changed to a glad thankfulneses.

From Sir John in Bath came letters to announce that his brother's condition, although still critical, was hopeful, and that soon he trusted to be able to return. For Capt. Gaynor came a brief special note, in

She was evidently a friend of Maggots. He ought to have heard of her; but Maggots was very discreet. He had not named her. So much the more significant. Always suspect silence, thought Abel. He saw that Miss Kestrop was chagrined at his presence, at the absence of Maggots. Why?

"The poor chap's had an accident," he answered; and then could have bitten his tongue at the stupidity.

"No! Serious?" Her tone was entirely altered. Abel could even have imagined that she had paled slightly, but in the rosy glow of the room nothing was plainly to be seen. "What a fool!" Her first agitation being lessened, she continued: "He's so reckless. Idiot! What's he done? And how did he do it?" Miss Kestrop's tongue clucked with perturbation. A flash was in her eye. "What is it makes people so reckless? We've all reckless. But Charlie's foolhardy. And so—so are you, I've been told—" She stopped. "Oh—Oh!" cried Miss Kestrop.

THE check was obvious; and the "Oh," although stifled, was the more marked. She had remembered something. Remembered, it was evident, something painful. Her cheeks flushed deeply. The eyes flashed yet more brilliantly. She looked with vehement sharpness at Abel's face; and then, as sharply, at Sybil. Abel, following her eyes, saw that Sybil's head was lowered. He could not read her expression. Nevertheless, from Miss Kestrop's flush, and her sharp scrutiny, and the succeeding fierceness of her glance, Abel knew that Miss Kestrop in reality had heard of him from somebody besides Maggersford. He knew that she had heard of him from Sybil. His own face hardened in response to her hardening. His heart hardened. Then he thought of Cumberdale, and tried to lighten the tension. After all, it was this poor chap's party.

"Yes, we're all reckless," he agreed, conversationally. "The trouble about us all is that we don't look where we're going. When we find out, it's too late to go back."

There was an instant's pause, which turned the light speech to a defiance. It was the last thing Abel had intended. Nevertheless, his chin rose.

"And we carry others along with us," supplemented Miss Kestrop. "Very cruelly. It's they who suffer. Others who follow from loving blindness."

There was a bitter note in her speech. It stung him. He did not look at Sybil, but straight back at Miss Kestrop.

"Oh, as to that," replied Abel coolly, "I don't think love has much to do with it."

Cumberdale, who had not understood a word of what had been said, fumbled in the pocket of his coat.

"Yes," here's old Maggots' wire," he drawled, feebly. "Jolly rotten of him not to turn up."

Miss Kestrop read the telegram, and passed it back to Cumberdale. He could not see her face. They could none of them do that.

"I wonder what's the matter," she murmured, as if to herself. "But when did you get that, Vernon? Just now?" Her eyes returned to Abel. "How strange," she exclaimed.

Abel began to speak: "I'd better explain."

"No, no, no," cried Cumberdale. "That's all right, old chap. 'Member our arrangement." He was ridiculously terrified that his plan would fail.

"I didn't know that I was to have the pleasure of meeting you and Miss Aveling."

"Oh, you didn't know." A puzzled expression crossed Miss Kestrop's face. "It must have been rather a surprise."

"Here, I say," began Cumberdale, bewildered by the sense that something was going on which he did not understand. "Do you know each other, you two?"

"A little. By hearsay," rejoined Miss Kestrop. "I'm interested in Mr. Raikes. I don't understand him."

For the first time Sybil interposed.

"Ruth," she cried. Her eyes were dark with tears.

"Frankly, Mr. Raikes," continued Miss Kestrop, ignoring the appeal, "I want to know whether an ordinary man can have two natures."

Abel breathed quickly.

"Only one," he answered.

"One for men and one for women!"

"One for both," said Abel, very gravely.

"I SAY, I hope you like this dinner," mumbled Cumberdale. 'You're none of you eating anything at all. Would you like something else?"

"Nothing else, thank you." Miss Kestrop dismissed the inquiry as if it had been addressed to her by the waiter at her side. Abel, recalled to the scene, put his hand over his glass as a second waiter strove to refill it. The waiters withdrew—dim ghosts of men who never existed. The walls of the room seemed to become soft and full of the pictures that lay in his memory. Only Sybil remained silent. But she was now staring at Abel.

"Could a brave man, loved by his friends, treat very basely a woman who loved him?" asked Miss Kestrop.

"You're putting a hypothetical case," said Abel. "I can't answer it. I'm not a brave man."

"And yet Charlie calls you that. It's a puzzle to me. Mr. Raikes, could you do what I said then?"

Sybil half rose to her feet, and sat down again. Her face was like stone, but her eyes were glowing.

"I can't tell you what I might do," answered Abel, steadily. "I never have done such a thing."

There came a quick nod from Miss Kestrop. The cloud lifted from her face.

"That's what I thought," she said. "You're not a liar, I suppose?"

"No." It was Sybil who spoke. Abel had merely smiled in reply to the challenge. But at the cry from Sybil he turned to her. Their eyes met, long and earnestly. No love in them, and no hate; but an exchange of assurances. Cumberdale, biting his nails, sat morosely opposite Abel, frowning and bored. His party was spoiled. He had the understanding of so much, if no more; and it was enough for him. Moreover, he did not exist for these three others, who were engaged upon an investigation of which he knew nothing. They took no notice of him; but sitting round the small table, speaking in tones so low that they were audible only to the listeners, Sybil and Ruth Kestrop and Abel strove to adjust their difficulty.

"You see, my dear?" Miss Kestrop had spoken to Sybil.

"I haven't had a chance to be a liar," said Abel, in a dead voice. "Nor one to speak the truth."

"I gave you no chance," murmured Sybil. It was an assertion, not an incredulity. "I meant you to have no chance."

"You are very successful," answered Abel. He was staring now at the table, his expression stern. Sybil glancing, sighed. Her shoulders were raised as if in despair.

"I hid from you."

"Yes. Very completely."

"It was selfish."

"Worse. It was inhuman."

There was again a pause.

"Abel, dear, I must see you. Now we've met. It's impossible here—now. I—" She was trembling very much. Cumberdale could see her breast rising and falling. He was filled with horror, with helplessness, with the perplexity that arises from helplessness.

"Look here, I say," he began; and his sandiness became quite obliterated by the heat that rose to his cheeks, to his neck, to his ears and eyes. "I mean— Am I in the way? Come on, Ruth. We'll—we'll step down and have a coffee downstairs."

Miss Kestrop hesitated.

"I'm so afraid you'll make a mess of it, Sybil," she said. A glance was the only reply. The two of them went through the doorway. Sybil and Abel were left alone. They continued to sit at the table. For quite a long time there was silence between them; until Abel stretched out his left hand, and Sybil's right hand flew to meet it.

"When you'd gone back to France," Sybil stammered, "they said—"

"They?" It was breathed. She withdrew her hand, sitting straighter in her chair.

"I don't believe them now. I did. Netty and Olga— They said you had been with a mistress to the last. That they had seen you with her the evening before. That you were with her—then. They named her. Was it true?"

He did not trouble to answer.

"They said—I don't believe it now—that you—"

"That I'd what?"

Sybil's head was low. She whispered. Her cheeks were no longer pale.

"Boasted—laughed—"

"At you?"

The head was lower.

"Yes."

"And you believed them? And ran away? And hid? And so hid that I couldn't find you? And never should have found you but for this chance? Didn't you imagine me half distracted at getting no letters; and when I was able to get special leave hurrying to search for you and finding no traces?"

Sybil was almost fainting.

"I was afraid. Ashamed."

"Awfully cruel. Didn't you feel that? If you had any sort of feeling for me, I mean. And to keep it up for a couple of years. What did you think I felt? Even if it had been true, though you must have known it was inconceivable. It's a long time, Sybil. I'm reproaching you."

She sighed.

"Not as much as I'm reproaching myself."

Abel shrugged his shoulders a little; he was not happy. She continued:

"I thought of my own vanity—that I'd been a plaything, and shown my love. They said you had no alternative—either to save my reputation by marrying me; or to make me ridiculously the whistling woman. It was too much for my vanity. I can't defend myself."

BOTH sighed, and were silent. Abel looked at Sybil, but she could not meet his eyes. She was ashamed to do so. To both of them this sense of unhappiness, of helpless impasse, was like paralysis. All hope was slipping away for want once more of confidence and clear understanding. Just so might they become estranged forever, through incapacity to say the right word and at the essential moment to be resolute. So, at least, it appeared to Abel. He compared what had been with what might have been—that sweet wartime idyll, when the incessant danger of his life had made him snatch at every supreme happiness, only to find that it had been withdrawn from his grasp by some incomprehensible cruelty of human capriciousness. He was again perplexed as he had been throughout. Could love thus change? He saw her there, before him, the play of color in her cheeks betraying her emotion, her eyes hidden. How, without some further venture, could he abandon all hope? And yet, how could he now stoop to plead? She had had no faith. Had there been no love? Abel could not believe it.

"What are you proposing to do?" he asked, presently; and to Sybil the unconscious harshness of his voice was ominous. Her cheeks paled again. With difficulty she kept her hands lowered.

"I don't know," she said, hardly above a whisper.

"I find you engaged to dance with this chap."

"He's a friend of Ruth's. No more than that. Nothing to me. I have known Ruth for a year. She's helped me. I must have friends."

Abel made a wry face at this breathless self-excuse. He did not answer for a little while, and during that last crucial pause it seemed as though their hearts had stopped beating. Were they thus to meet and again to part—forever? Sybil shuddered.

"You don't want to try again with me?" he asked, at length. There was a stirring in the silence, as though her heart, awakened, and her hopes, still icy, were moving, were moving, were rising. Color dawned once more, her head was a little raised. She was incredulous, afraid lest she should have dreamed the words. "For me there's never been anybody else," Abel added. "Never."

"Nor for me," said Sybil, beginning to cry and to laugh at the same time. She was trembling, shy, arch in a tumult of sensation. Then, soberly, with new thought for him: "But—for you. After my wickedness—"

"Let's give it a chance." Abel lifted his wine glass. Then he set it down again, started to his feet, and bent over her. "Priceless—" he said.

"What?"

"Idiot. Beloved."

A few moments later, Abel went in search of the others. He found them not far away, Cumberdale looking altogether miserable, and Miss Kestrop thoroughly exasperated, as though she had been explaining something which could not be explained to anybody so obtuse as Cumberdale. Indeed, the facts were hard to explain; for who, not knowing the parties, could understand a high spirited girl flying from her lover because of lying reports, and because of egregious vanity. Yet the thing is done in these days as it was done in the past; not always with as agreeable an outcome as that attending Sybil's flight.

"I say, Cumberdale," apologized Abel. "I'm afraid your evening's been spoiled." Cumberdale did not deny the suggestion. It seemed to him to be undeniable. "If it's any comfort to you, my life's been saved. It's not, is it? I was afraid not. But we're ready to go and dance now, if you like. Only I'm afraid you must dance with Miss Kestrop—to whom I'm going to be very grateful forever. Because my wife and I insist upon dancing with each other."

There was a growl, and a handshake. The sandy young man flushed again as he gripped Abel's hand very hard. He could not speak. Miss Kestrop said nothing. She merely nodded. But her eyes were so bright that Cumberdale drew his breath sharply. They were like stars.

THE ISLAND OF FEAR---Gold Hunters

By Harold C. Lowrey.

This is the first installment of a three-part story of the adventures of three daring boys on a search for gold in northern Canada. It is written by a Canadian who is noted for his outdoor stories, and who has camped throughout the country that he writes about.

Begin the story right away. Once you've started it you're going to have a hard time waiting for those next chapters.

WEIRDLY set in a cold blue lake, deep in the Northern woods, is an island of mystery. It is one of those places about which strange tales are told and in which, if the stories are true, much stranger things happen.

"The Island of Fear, as it is known locally, cowers at the foot of a towering cliff of flinty rock as if it were afraid of the ledge crushing it back into the lake. Set peculiarly at the juncture of three great elongated bayous, it indeed had the appearance of being a place of mystery, of secrets, of ghastly deeds, in fact, a place to fear.

The old timers when they gathered together at the Post were wont to regale their audiences with hair-raising, blood-curdling accounts of the island's history. These tales, true or otherwise, persisted, handed down from generation to generation, from tribe to tribe, from Indian to white-man, until today the fame of this island is sinister, mysterious, and awe-inspiring.

Had you never heard of its history of the terrible things that has happened on it, or that the medicine men of the Indians held annual powwows to appease the anger of the devils who inhabited the island, you would have wanted to explore it and yet would have feared to do so, though, in all the years that are past, there were few indeed who braved the unknown perils of this avoided place.

It is told that when the Iroquois conquered the country they made their camp on this very island and lived there in peace for some time and that, suddenly, for no apparent reason, they vacated the island and never returned anywhere near it. Shortly after they were driven out of the country.

Then it is told that a dashing young Frenchman came that way hunting, trapping and trading with the Indians. Unacquainted with the curse that was upon this island he made it his headquarters until one dark, stormy night he was set upon by unknown foes and foully murdered. And so on down a long list of such happenings goes the history of this Island of Fear till we come to one of the most interesting and yet the oddest of them all—the story of the Triangle of Pine trees which stands near the center of the island.

It is said that in the early days of the white man's conquest of the Northland considerable placed gold was found on some of the creeks up toward the watershed between the great lakes and the Hudson Bay. A party of adventurous Irishmen who had been successful in their search were returning to the seaboard with their sacks of gold and when passing the Island of Fear—not knowing its terrors—fell under the spell of its beauty and made camp under its trees. It was not long before the imps of the island got in their work and the Irishmen under the sinister influence of the place began to quarrel among themselves and then to fight. When the morning came there was but one of the party remaining Knowing that he could never get back to the sea with all the gold or with any considerable part of it, he proceeded to bury the treasure, marking the spot with a triangle of pine trees set equal distances apart and then on top of the treasure he bureid his comrades, before setting out for the St. Lawrence and the open sea.

Beneath the carpet of needles within the triangle of pines guarded only by the fiends and the imps who inhabit the Island of Fear, lies the golden treasure of the Irishmen; it is still there beneath the bones of its owners.

CHAPTER 2
Off for the Island.

"Well, lads," drawled Donnie Dartnell, the moment the three boys got outside the old trapper's cabin, "those were some yarns, s-o-m-e stories, believe me."

"Aren't they true;" incredulously inquired one of the trio, Bert Bigwin; "has the old duffer been stringing us all this time?"

"Sure, he has," confidently replied Donnie, "don't you think so, Scotty?"

"Dunno, as I do," cautiously returned the third, and oldest of the trio, Scotty Gray. "That last story was pretty real—pine trees don't grow in triangles if let alone, do they?"

"First thing we know you'll be visiting the bally old island and digging for the gold," continued Donnie, nudging Bert.

"Might do that, too, if I knew some fellows who weren't afraid of their shadows," calmly replied Scotty.

The banter continued for some time and finally ended in the decision to visit the Island of Fear, which was but a few day's paddle away, and there to see for themselves the truth about the island and the triangle of pines.

Donnie was the least anxious to go, but once the decision was made and the trip was agreed upon he was keen for the adventure, urging the others to waste no time in getting the expedition under way. This did not take long, for the boys were experienced campers and knew how to outfit quickly. Bacon, beans, flour, coffee, sugar, salt, condensed milk, dried vegetables and fruits, chocolate, blankets, tents, axes, matches, pick and shovels, rifles, revolvers, and fishing tackle, which with their canoe, almost completed the duffle. For extra precaution, the boys secured a good map of the district—at least as good a map as was obtainable—and made ready to leave early the following morning.

At daybreak they were away, striking out boldly for the most avoided piece of ground in all the north country. Two days later they came in sight of the flinty cliff and knew they were nearing the Island of Fear.

Pretty as a picture, it lay cringing against the base of the high cliff. The afternoon sun smiled upon it and seemed to throw into greater contrast the emerald of its trees with the deep blue of the open lake.

Carefully they skirted its shores, alertly examining its every detail It was a considerable distance around the island so that it was getting near sundown before the inspection was complete.

"We'll fool these devils or ghosts or whatever they are," announced Donnie, as he swung the canoe away from the island toward the mainland.

"How?" inquired Scotty.

"Easy," knowing replied Donnie. "To keep out of trouble stay away from trouble."

"Afraid to land?" asked Bert, not catching the drift of Donnie's reasoning.

"Not on your life," swiftly retorted Donnie. "Just playing safe, that's all, and since you fellows have to have everything explained to you, I'll let you in on this lil' secret. The fiends or imps or all of them, if there are any, live on the island and cut up all their didoes at night. So if we want to keep out of trouble all we've got to do is to stay off the island at night. Is that clear to you, my scholars?"

"This chap is so wise, Bert, I move that we rename him Solomon," suggested Scotty.

"Better make it Sollie he'll like it better," laughed Bert, as the canoe swung swiftly around a promonotory into a quite bay and glided silently across it to nose its way into the sands of the tiny little beach. In a trice the boys were out examining the point for its possibilities as a camping place. Satisfied, they returned to the canoe and soon the work of making camp was well begun. Bert and Scotty set about erecting the tent while Donnie got out the frying pan.

After the meal, the three drew around the fire to discuss the plan of campaign against the unknown terrors of the little island visible in the haze to their right. It was agreed that all three would go together on every trip to the island; that they would always carry with them emergency rations, matches, and plenty of ammunition. They would leave the tent where it was and make this their permanent camp as it was but a few hundred yards from the island and could easily be reached at any time With all these details settled, the boys turned in, determined that on the morrow they would solve the riddle of the Island of Fear.

CHAPTER 3
The Challenge of Fear.

They were up bright and early the next morning, and ate heartily of the breakfast bacon, coffee and flapjacks which Donnie had cooked to a delicious brown. Soon the camp was tidy, and picking up their tools, the boys made ready to start on the great adventure. Scotty took the bow, Bert amidships and Donnie in stern, and without a word they were away, all three grimly determined to come back with the gold buried under the bones of the Irishmen.

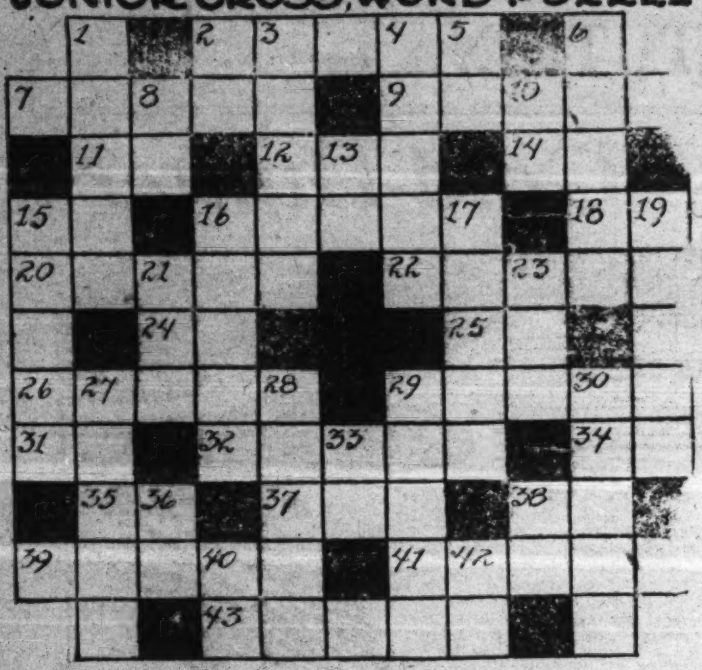

Cautiously they drew near to the Island of Fear, seeking a favorable landing place. Overhead the sun was shining brightly, its rays hot upon them. A gull floated lazily overhead held in wonder at the sight of a canoe approaching this deserted place. The island was silent, strangely silent. Not a breath of air stirred the leaves of its few birch trees; not a bird nor even an insect seemed to be about—it was just as lifeless as any place could possibly be and still have trees.

But the boys paid little heed to these things. They drove their paddles deep into the water and urged their canoe forward onto the bit of sand marking a fairly open spot on the south side, and the three drew themselves erect on the soil of the Island of Fear. In the bright light of

Ways to Make Money

20. Washing supper dishes is a reliable way of making money during the summer. Many housewives are glad to pay for this service so that they may spend their evenings out-of-doors. This is especially true with families that own cars and like to start out somewhere as soon as the evening's meal is finished.

21. Find out the names of people who are going away for any length of time during the summer. Get them to hire you to look after their gardens, care for their potted plants, or take care of their chickens dogs, or cats. This is a good way to profit by other people's vacations.

Misunderstod.

"Surely, John, you haven't brought any one home to dinner?"

"Sure I have. Haven't you got anything for them?"

"Why, no, you told me you'd bring home a couple lobsters for dinner."

"So I have. They're waiting in the parlor."

Wasn't Fired

Employer: "You say you had your last place three years? Why did you leave?"

Applicant: "I was pardoned."

ILL WINDS

The windiest place in all the world is swept by a steady wind from June to September. Now how would you like to live in a place like that? Not very well, of course, and it's no wonder that people don't live there very long. This home of the winds is in the valley of Seistan, Persia. The Persans regard it as a bewitched place, to be avoided.

The winds of this valley are hot, dry, and irritating. They are so trying to the nerves that only very stolid, untemperamental people can stand them. That is why most of the people found there are dull and lifeless. The endless winds seem to blow all the energy out of them.

Another place of famous winds is in the barren Antarctic land, where the winds often blow steadily at a hundred miles an hour. Explorers tell us that these winds contain sharp ice particles which sting and blister the face. The winds are so strong that they even eat out the grain of wood.

Did you ever notice how much effect winds have on the temper of people? In places where there are long periods of steady wind every one becomes depressed and moody. Yet in countries where there are high, brisk wnids we find the most vigorous, bold types of people.

Hot, dry winds are irritating. When such winds are blowing, teachers in school have the hardest time managing their pupils. During these winds every one becomes quarrelsome and all sorts of disagreements are likely to start.

Just watch yourself the next time the wind is blowing, and see the strange effect that a special kind of wind has on you.

Explained

Louise: "You mean to tell me that the escaped convict lived for six days in a cave without food?"

John: "Oh, no, he lived on milk."

Louise: "Where did he get it?"

John: "He had the sheriff's goat."

THE ISLAND OF FEAR—Gold Hunters

the glorious sunshine. It seemed possible that all the ghastly tales of this place were the dreams of highly imaginative people.

That the beautiful shadows under the birch, tamarac and balsam trees were peopled with imps appeared to be the most absurd and unreal thing any one could possibly think about. Nevertheless our lads were careful to see that their canoe was beached high and dry and even securely tide to a convenient tree trunk before they proceeded to work their way carefully into the depths of the island.

"Blaze a trail, Bert," commanded Donnie.

"You can't get lost on this tiny island," objected Bert

"Maybe not, but we want to know the quickest route to our canoe," reasoned the leader. "We don't know what we are going to find in here, so let us be prepared for anything."

"The crew drew around the fire to discuss the plan of campaing against the unknown terrors of the little island."

Steadily the boys marched forward into the deep woods, making their way towards the high spot near the center of the island where the Triangle of Pines with their treasure of gold and dead men's bones were claimed to be. At last the lads came to what seemed to be a gateway—two large stones set up opposite each other—beyond which an aisle between the trees led gently upward to a small flat plateau-like spot on which was—sure enough—a groupp of pine trees growing in a triangular formation.

The boys stood in awe before the things they saw—the two extraordinary statue-like stones, the elevated ground and the Triangle of Pines—and slowly had impressed upon their thought the realization that perhaps after all the tales told at the Post were nearer to being true than untrue.

Beads of cold sweat began to appear on their foreheads as they stood spellbound before the two stones whose profiles they could easily distinguish in all their evil ugliness. Silence, dead, terror-inspiring silence was upon the whole place

Suddenly, without an instant of warning, the woods about them were filled with a great noise, strangely loud and piercing. It sounded through the woods with echoes which shattered the silence and swept in a great wave over the entire island. So sudden was the attack, and so baffingly quick was the change, that the boys had no time to act. All they could do was to look in astonishment at the hurtling trunk of a Balm of Gilead tree, smashing its way through to the ground a scant ten yards from where they stood, and then all was silent again.

Auto Demonstrator (who has tried for three hours to sell the car): "Now I'll throw in the clutch."

Uncle Eben: "I'll take her then. I knew if I held off long enough I would get something free."

Don't you wonder what caused the tree to fall? And what will happen to the boys on this strange island? Then be sure to watch for the second part of the story next week.

All Off.

Alvaton, Ga., Route 1, Box 4.—Dear Editor and Friends: I am a member of the Letter Writer's club, and I can't express how much I enjoy one of them and I always hate for the last one to come. Our school was out the ninth day of May. We had three nights and every one of the exercises were good I think. There were eight to graduate, three girls and five boys.

I have had a nice time since school was out. I was promoted to the sixth grade. We had three teachers. My little nephews Dan Higgins, Jr. and Spencer Higgins are going to visit me this summer and I think they are interested in The Letter Writer's club, and I think they want to write. They live at Yatesville, Ga. Do any of you raise many flowers? We raise a few but not many. I sure do like flowers. We are having a lot of peaches and I wish some of you were here to help me eat them. I sure will be glad when watermellons get ripe. My birthday is the third day of August. I will be 11 years old. Please, somebody write to me. Now don't think I won't answer every one. I like to get letters and I enjoy answering them. Your Friend,

MARGARET HIGGINS.

Winston, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: I have been reading The Letter Writer's club and would like to join and contribute a letter.

In describing myself I will say I am a girl, light brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am 13 years old. I live on a farm and go to school at Ebenezer and have a splendid teacher whose name is Miss Nell Burt, from Douglasville.

This is my first attempt at writing and if Mr. Waste Basket does not get this I will write again. Some of you boys and girls write to me and I will answer all I can. Your friend,

JEWELL BARRON.

Tate, Ga.—Dear Unknown Friends: I have wrote to you once before so I decided to contribute again. I think it is nice to have a Letter Writer's club. I enjoy reading them so much.

I am 9 years old. My school has just closed and I was promoted to the fourth grade. I won first prize class honor as the best speller in the third grade. I wish that I could know all of you personally. Hoping to hear from some of the members of the club and wishing all of you the best of luck. Your friend,

EMMA GRACE HOLCOMBE.

Fairburn, Ga.—Dear Kiddies: I wish to join your Letter Writer's club. I read your letters every Sunday. I enjoy them very much. I am 10 years old and in the sixth grade. Carnesville, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: I wish very much to join The Letter Writers' club. We have been subscribers to The Constitution a number of years and I enjoy read-The Letter Writers' page. It certainly is a good paper. I am 9 years old.

Our school closed May 15, and I was promoted to the fifth grade. I have three brothers and two sisters. For pets I have a bulldog and three kittens and two pigs. If this letter don't reach old Mr. Waste Basket, I will write again. Hoping to see my letter in print. Your little friend,

HAZEL ADDISON.

Winston, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: I am an interested reader of the Young Folks' Section and I would like to join the Letter Writers' club.

I enjoy the comic section and like Chester Gump best of all. In describing myself I will say I am a girl; 12 yerars old, but have a birthday in July that will make me 13. I have brown eyes, black hair and fair complexion. I live on a farm. I have two brothers and four sisters.

I go to school at Ebenezer and have a good teacher whose name is Miss Nell Burt, from Douglasville. I study the fifth grade.

This is my first attempt at writing and if it escapes the waste basket I will write again. Some of you boys and girls write to me and I will answer all your letters. Your friend,

ESTHER GILES.

Fayetteville—Dear Editor: I have been reading the letters and thought they were very good. This is my first trial. I am 55 inches tall, red headed, and I am in the seventh grade. I like to go to school very much. We only have seven months school. My teacher's name is Miss Cordelia Timmons. I like to read the funny papers. I hope Uncle Bim will have the success of finding little Chester soon. I also like Perry Winkle. I live on the farm and have a very nice time. I go to Sunday school every Sunday that is convenient. I hope we will have plenty of watermelons this summer. I haven't any pets. If I see my letter in print I will write again sometime.

Your friend,

NELLIE KERLIN.

Red Oak, Ga.—Dear Editor: I am a little girl 11 years of age and I am in the sixth grade. My pet is a little white and black dog. His name is Bill. I like to play baseball at school. I have three sisters and two brothres. My teacher's name is Miss Lois Oakley. I sure do like her.

Hoping to see this in print, your friend, JESSIE MAE BAKER.

Ellenwood, Ga.—Dear Unknown Friends: I have just finished reading the letters in this section and decided to write again. I have written once before but my name was not printed.

I read the jokes, riddles and stories and work out some of the puzzles.

We are going to have an all day singing at Mt. Zion church the fifth Sunday of this month.

My birthday is August 14. Who is my twin?

We have taken The Constitution ever since I can remember. I read the paper every day. I like Lester and Winnie best of all in the funny paper. I wish Chester could get back to Uncle Bim. I was afraid those savages were going to wake up when Chester was cutting the rope to let Ching Chow loose. Won't some of you boys and girls write to me? I will gladly answer your letters. I do like to receive letters. My age is 11.

I hope Mr. W. B. will be asleep when my letter comes. I wish to see my letter in print next Sunday. Love,

ELENE McKEE.

Dawsonville, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: I am a little boy 10 years old. in the fourth grade. I read the fanny paper every Sunday. I enjoy reading about little Chester and Ching Chow I would like to be with Chester on the island and help him out. I go to school at Dawsonville. Boys and girls, I read your letters every Sunday. I have six guineas. They are laying. They made a nest up in the pasture in a pine brush pile. The crows broke it up. They made another one on the strawberry terrace and the crows broke it up. I am in the bed sick writing this letter. I have been bad sick with the flu.

Your friend,

Grayson, Ga.—Dear Unknown Friends: Will you let a little stranger join your club? I am 12 years of age and am in the seventh grade. I go to Snellville consolidated high school We have about 300 pupils in our school and about 35 in my grade, and have many in playmates.

I hope the editor will print another story like Cinderella in The Constitution. Well, I guess I had better close as I hope to see this in print.

Your unknown friend.

FANNIE RUTH SHELL.

P. S.—I hope little Chester is found.

Atlanta, Ga.—Dear Editor: Some time ago I wrote to the Boys' and Girls' Letter Writers' club and I had the pleasure of seeing my letter in print. At that time I did not have a picture of myself, so I am writing again and inclosing a picture of myself and little brother. His name is Johnnie.

I have received a good many letters from little girl friends all over the state since I wrote to the club. My school is out and it is vacation time. I don't have any pets, only I have a pretty flower yard. My mother is an invalid. She is blind. I enjoy writing and receiving letters, and will be glad to correspond with any of the little girls or boys and will answer all letters I receive.

Your little friend.

FRANCES WALKER.

Hampton, Ga.—Dear Boys and Girls: I have never written to the boys and girls' club so I decided to write. I am 12 years old. Our school closed May 22. I finished grammar school and now ready to enter high school next fall. I go to school at Sunnyside. My best friends are Gladys Goodman, Edna Weems, Hattie Dorsey, Mable Mocre and Annie Lois Fisher. I have two sisters smaller than myself. I hope this will not reach the waste basket. If you all write I will answer.

Your new friend.

JEWELL PRICE.

noticing the parts of the daily newspaper that we read. Is it the market quotations or the sporting page or the criminal news or the progress of science or the spread of religion? In what do we invest our money—in search of pleasure, in search of knowledge, or in the hastening of the coming of God's kingdom?

It is worth while—aye, nothing is of greater importance to ascertain whether we are afflicted with any form of blindness, and next to inquire whether we are in search of a physician and in quest of a remedy.

But to proceed: why are we not as eager to save men's souls as we are to heal men's bodies or to enlighten men's minds? If a friend is sick, we are glad to recommend a physician who has been successful in such cases or to buy medicine which has benefitted some one whom we know. If we know of a good school, we would not forgive ourselves if we failed to recommend it to a neighbor with children to educate.

Why do we shrink from carrying Christ's call to those who know Him not? Every physician is sometimes unsuccessful in his treatment; every medicine sometimes fails to cure, and every school has students whom it cannot benefit. Jesus is the great Physician whom everybody needs and who has never lost a case.

Education has strengthened man's power for evil as well as for good and the educated criminal is more dangerous to society than the ignorant criminal.

Inventive genius has multiplied the strength of man's arm without insuring an equitable distribution of the product of the new power acquired and without guaranteeing the weak from oppression at the hands of the strong.

Robberies are larger than they used to be, swindlers operate upon a more colosal scale than ever before, and wars are more horrible now in their cruelties and in their costliness than anyone could have imagined them a quarter of a century ago.

What is to be done? There is no one but Christ unto whom the world can look. Using the spirit of the song without the exact words, we may declare:

"If there's a land that is sunk in shame;
If there are hearts that faint and tire,
There is but one name, one name
That can set that land on fire."

Christ has earned the title, "The Prince of Peace," bestowed upon Him centuries before His birth. Through Him the individual can find regeneration and be born again. His spirit can change enemies into friends, reconcile communities, suppress antagonisms between states, and unite nations in the bonds of universal and eternal peace. Whether the need is individual, local or worldwide, there is but one message that will suffice—"He calleth Thee."

And this call must be carried by those who have themselves become His followers. Christ preached but a few years and visited but a few communities; all who have been converted since His death are indebted to the Bible or to those who have borne the Bible's message in words or deeds—on their lips or in their lives.

It was the rabble that followed Jesus out of Jericho—the rabble that had been indignant at the blind man's plaintive cry—that flew to his aid when they found Jesus interested in him. Can Christians be less anxious to carry Christ's message to those whose hearts have never been touched by His love and whose lives have never been inspired by His example?

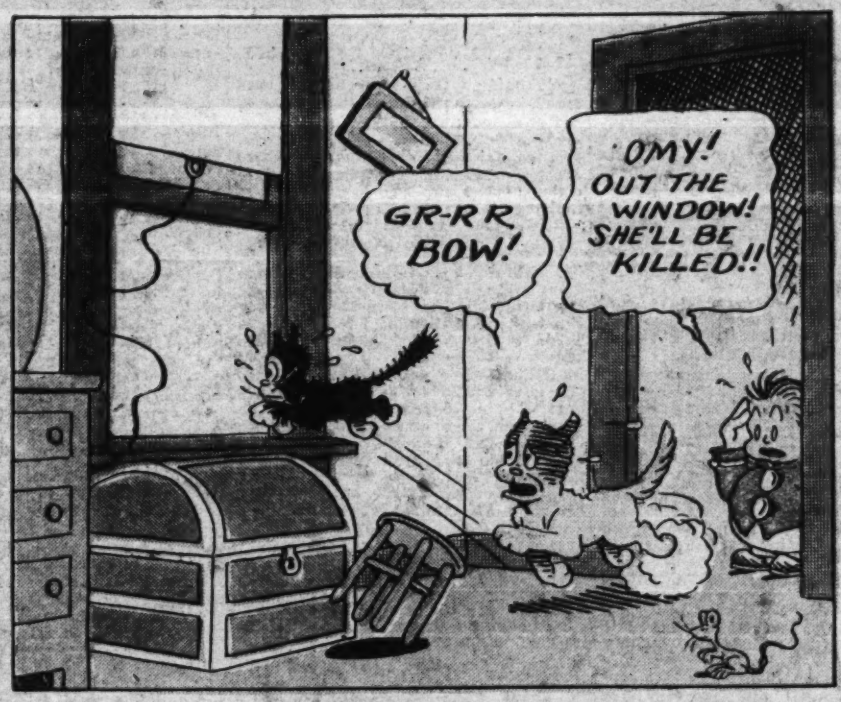

I know not how I can make this lesson, so transcendent in importance, coerce the hearts of those who read it, unless I can do so by quoting, in closing, a stanza from one of the greatest of the hymns of consecration:

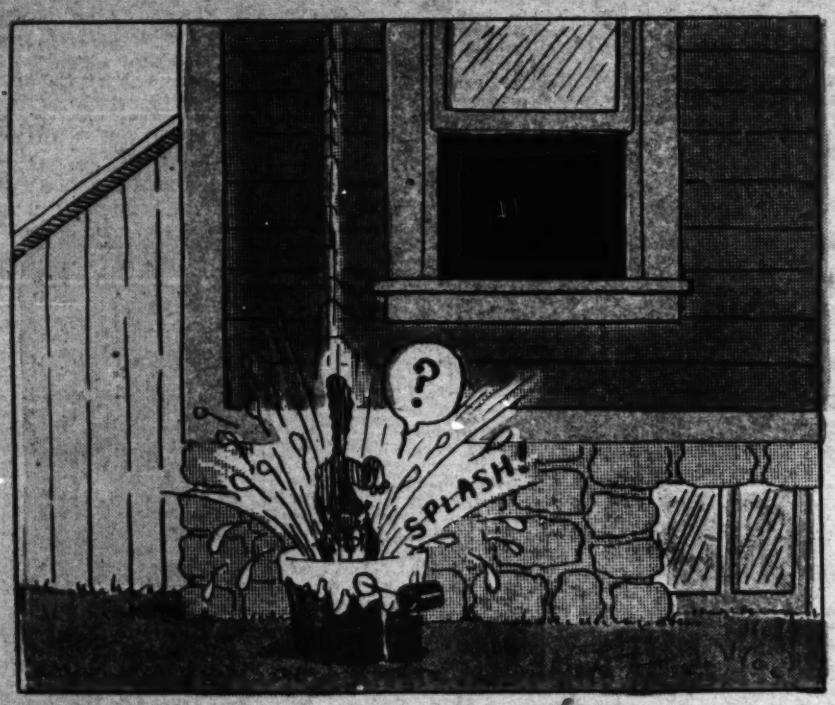

"Perhaps today there are loving words which Jesus would have me speak—
There may be now in the paths of sin some wanderer whom I should seek—
O Saviour, if Thou wilt be my guide, tho' dark and rugged the way,
My voice shall echo Thy message sweet, I'll say what you want me to say."

The Gates Of Doom

which the baronet gracefully regretted his continued absence at such a season and closed with a veiled reminder of his warning touching Pauncefort—a warning which roused the soldier from the dream in which he had been living to a consciousness of the perils that surrounded him, for the morrow was the day appointed for that fateful meeting at "The World's End.'

That morning Damaris rode forth alone—save for her groom—for the first time since the captain's coming. An appalling loneliness—a loneliness that was full of amazing and disquieting self-revelation — kept her company.

She saw Capt. Gaynor again at dinner—they dined at 3 o'clock at Priory Close, too early by at least an hour to satisfy the mode. And from her window, discreetly hidden, she watched him ride out on his great black horse, watched his blue coated figure along the white ribbon of road until it vanished, and so left her lonely again.

And whilst she sat alone in her chamber there, below stairs Evelyn was spurring her mother to perform what Evelyn conceived to be her mother's duty in the absence of Sir John.

"You must write to his lordship, mother," she was saying, "and inform him of what is taking place."

"Let us await your father's return, child," the mother pleaded. "He will know best. And meanwhile the captain has gone."

"Then I will write myself."

"Evelyn, I forbid you."

"My father is absent, and my mother will not use her eyes. What help have I? I hope I have a conscience. It is for Damaris' sake. What, after all, do we know of this adventurer?"

"Nay, now, you must not speak so of him," her ladyship remonstrated. "His father was your father's dearest friend. Your father loves the captain as a son."

Evelyn looked at her mother a moment. Then she turned away and went without another word to write the following letter:

"My Lord: My great regard for your lordship bids me delay no longer in writing to tell you that if you would not see that which you most value lost to you, you had best make haste to come to Priory Close. There is one here who is like to steal away from you that which you cherish most in all the world. I send you this timely warning.

"EVELYN KYNASTON."

Having written, Evelyn paused. Within her a voice—a little mocking voice—was proclaiming that what she performed was an act of purest spite. She crimsoned and took up the sheet to tear it across. Then she paused.

"I am too sensitive," she assured herself. "Clearly it is my duty, since my mother will not. Damaris' future happiness depends on't." Which, after all, was true.

But it was not until next morning that the letter sped to London by her messenger.

Standing on the outskirts of the pleasant village of Chelsea, as one of London's western outposts, "The World's End," was a house of great comings and goings, of much bustle and consequence. Hence had it been preferred by Captain Gaynor to any quieter hostelry for the business which he desired to transact. In the constant ebb and flow of travelers to and from the metropolis there was but little chance that any particular man or group of men would attract more than passing notice. Moreover, Maclean, its Scottish landlord, was a circumspect but ardent Jacobite, and the house had yet the additional advantage of being—both on the score of its remoteness and of its traffic—a most unlikely place for such a meeting.

It stood a little way back from the King's road—which runs from St. James to Hampton court—fronted by a patch of turf on which were planted a couple of trestle tables flanked by plain wooden forms, and it looked out over a stretch of meadowland that sloped gently to the river.

Before its doors on this June evening the wonted bustle was toward. A great black and yellow stagecoach on its way to London was drawn up on the edge of the patch of turf, and the hoarse voiced driver passed the time of day with the ostler in terms which knew little of decorum and less of dainty ears. A nobleman's traveling chaise, a somber mass of wood and leather drawn by six horses and with bold escutcheons on its panels, stood cheek by jowl with the stage, but facing westward.

About these was a huddle of lesser craft, a postchaise, a couple of hackney coaches, a carrier's cart, and lastly, stretching adown the road in line like the tail of a kite, some half-dozen wagons on their way to market for the following day. To increase the general bustle and to swell the throng there were men on horseback and men on foot, watermen from the moored barges and wherries, grooms, ostlers, drivers and wagoners, whilst a motley company derived from all of these sat about the trestle tables over their ale, a noisy, babbling, quarreling, laughing assembly.

Into this scene of activity rode Captain Gaynor at a little after 8 o'clock of that summer evening—the hour appointed for the meeting of those six confederates who were to receive from him and in their turn disseminate those messages of which he was the bearer and of which he carried upon him a note in cipher. The substance of those messages has not survived, and there are no means today of ascertaining the details of the precise plot that was the object of this particular mission of Captain Gaynor. Whilst regrettable from the point of view of historical research, from our own it is a matter of little moment, since we are here concerned with the personal history of Captain Gaynor and not with that of any of the perennially budding Jacobite conspiracies.

We gather from stray records that have come down to us—and more particularly from the bulky memoirs which were penned by Mr. Second Secretary Templeton to while the tedium of his subsequent retirement from office—that this was one of the earlier of those conspiracies which ultimately were to prove the undoing of that ambitious, plotting cleric, Atterbury; for we are able plainly to trace that this mission of the notorious Jacobite agent, "Captain Jenkyn"—who was hanged at Tyburn under the extraordinary circumstances with which we are directly concerned—was undertaken at the bishop's urgent instances.

To receive Captain Gaynor, as he drew rein on the outskirts of that throng, came a shock headed, sweating, surpliced ostler, who was thrust aside almost immediately by a younger man. That the ostler submitted without demur showed that the youth who usurped his functions on this occasions was a person of some authority, as did indeed the latter's garments which, though of plain homespun, indicated a station superior to a groom's. He was, in fact, Maclean's son, set by the vintner to watch for the captain's coming.

HARRY GAYNOR tossed his reins to the youngster, and swung himself lightly from the saddle.

"I stay but a little while," he said, "so keep my nag saddled for me."

With that he pushed forward through the throng about the door, a throng which before his brisk, authoritative manner opened a way for him readily enough. He strode into a narrow, flagged passage upon which the taproom door stood open. From this issued sounds of voices and a reek of tobacco. Under the lintel leaned a tall, loose limbed man in his shirt sleeves with an apron girt about him. He turned at the sound of the captain's steps, and disclosed the mellow, jovial face of Maclean.

His eyes welcomed the guest, and the captain's returned that welcome. It was as if they had clasped hands. With the other Jacobites who were assembled above stairs there had been question and answer on the score of wants to veil the giving of password and countersign. But Captain Gaynor was known to the vintner.

"Ha, landlord!" quoth the soldier, after that real greeting of the eyes. "A pint of claret laced with Nantes!"

"At once, your honor," replied Maclean, in formal landlord tones.

The captain stood halting upon the threshold of the taproom.

"Ye're somewhat crowded here," he said, and coughed as if the smoke had jarred his windpipe.

"There is another room above," Maclean replied, approving the captain's easy acting. "Will you be pleased to go up, sir?"

The soldier turned and made for the stairs. "The first door to the right, your honor," Maclean called after him. "I'll bring the claret." He coughed significantly, and Captain Gaynor, turning as he went up, caught from the host's quick, expressive gestures that the door he was to take was on the left instead. He nodded his understanding, and went on. He knew the chamber from another visit some two years ago. It was peculiarly well fitted for a secret meeting in such a place, access being gained to it across another room, through a door that looked for all the world like that of a cupboard in the wall.

But as he went he was puzzled by the almost excessive caution which the landlord had shown, by the loud announcement that the door was on the right, followed by a correcting gesture. Maclean, the captain reflected, must have some good reason for this, some notion that there was a spy at hand.

Such a notion Maclean had, indeed, and his suspicions on that score were almost immediately changed to certainty. For as he turned he found himself confronted in the doorway of the taproom by the object of his suspicions—a burly fellow in snuff colored clothes, in which he had shifted a Bow street messenger. This man had sat apart, unobtrusive, in a corner of the taproom whence he could command the passage, and for all his unobtrusiveness—or perhaps because of it—Maclean had furtively watched him with increasing mistrust. He had taken care when Captain Gaynor entered so to place himself before the soldier as to screen him from the prying eyes of that suspected spy. And it was with the intention of misleading that same watcher that he had uttered aloud his misdirection.

Confronted now by the man, and his every suspicion thus confirmed, Maclean, affecting to await the fellow's commands, effectively barred his way until it should be too late for him to perceive the real direction taken by the captain.

"What d'ye lack, sir?" was his formal question, smiling his anxiety to supply the needs of this guest—and in that smile dissembling the greater anxiety which this guest occasioned him.

The fellow coughed affectedly. "This reek of tobacco smoke," said he, "is more than I can suffer. I'll go upstairs to this other room of yours."

Maclean made way with a bow and a readiness that were entirely disarming.

"Pray do so," said he, and waved a hand towards the stairs, "The room is on the right. You'll find some company there. I'll send a drawer to wait on you."

THE burly spy—for a spy he was, and moreover had a warrant in his pocket and six men at his orders outside at the trestle tables—felt himself checked by the landlord's ease and the readiness with which the way was opened for him. Maclean was a born conspirator, a man who knew how a plot should be laid if it were to baffle discovery. To mask the meeting above stairs against precisely such a contingency as the present one he had placed a room above at the disposal of such of his guests as appeared to be persons of quality, and it was into this room that the spy now thrust himself, notwithstanding the loss of confidence occasioned him by the landlord's imperturbability.

He found himself in the company of some dozen gentlemen who eyed him somewhat askance, a circumstance which reawakened fading suspicions. The assembly was, it is true, rather more numerous than he had been led to look for, and he observed that it was broken into detached groups of twos and three. These, surely, could not be his quarry. Yet, being a man so suspicious of ruses that he saw ruses where none existed, considered innocence itself the most damning mark of guilt, the messenger sat down in a corner, and when presently approached by a drawer, ordered himself a nipperkin of ale. But the scrutiny to which he furtively submitted each separate group and each member of it gradually convinced him that either he had been deliberately led or else had fallen into error. This conviction was complete when anon the door opened to admit a couple of fresh arrivals, the first of whom was a portly, pompous man in a full bottomed wig, in whom the messenger recognized Sir Henry Thresh, one of the Middlesex justices.

Meanwhile, Captain Gaynor had crossed the empty room on the left of the passage and through that deceptive narrow double door had entered the farther apartment, where his friends awaited him.

This was a small chamber facing westward and flooded now with the roseate glow of sunset. It was plainly furnished, and about a polished, oblong walnut table in mid-apartment sat four gentlemen over their wine. A crystal bowl of water—inevitable appendage to every Jacobite gathering—occupied the middle of the board and shed upon it a wedge of prismatic light. Near this pipes had been placed, a tinder box and a leaden jar of cut tobacco; but only one member of the company—an extremely tall and slender young man, very fine in a green riding suit with white satin linings—was smoking. This gentleman had dark, vivacious eyes and a pleasant face under an extremely modish and ample periwig; his name was Partridge, and he was said to be a person of considerable importance in Wiltshire.

Of the other three, two were men of forty or thereabouts. One was Viscount Harewood, a gentleman with whom allegiance to the Stuarts was a family matter, since he claimed the patriarchal second Charles for his grandsire. Indeed, some resemblance to that too merry monarch was to be discerned in his lordship's swarthy tint and saturnine cast of countenance. The other was Mr. Stephen Dyke, a pale, hawk-faced man in a brown bag wig. The last member of that was quartet was the stanch and almost brazen Jacobite, Sir Thomas Leigh. He was much older than his companions, tall and straight nevertheless, with something military in his air and carriage, and something military, too, in the vigorous oaths with which his speech was peppered, for he had seen service in the late queen's days. In countenance he was fresh complexioned, frank and jovial.

properly advised of his Atlanta double and expresses a most interested desire to see and know him.

EDITH KING'S new play, "The Right to Love," has now opened at Wallacks Theater on West Forty-second street. Miss King, on her opening night, received one of the biggest ovations I have ever heard a first-night audience treat itself to. This is, furthermore, one of those ovations which actually took place, and does not belong in the group, which under the head of "Girl well known in Atlanta causes stampede in New York," you so often have to read about. Imagine, if you can, the beautiful Miss King disguished as a Sis Hopkins maid in a hick hotel! During Miss King's stock engagement in Atlanta, no comedy character parts were ever assigned her, for a leading lady in a stock company must invariably appear "pretty" and cannot ever think of taking a part in which she can't be "adorable." Consequently, Miss King's character-comedy ability was something we didn't know much about, but after seeing her—well, you should see the notices the New York critics gave her. Everyone of them acknowledged her the hit of the performance.

"The Right to Love" is a melodrama of the sort summer audiences like. There's nothing startlingly new about the plot, but it isn't at all dull. Mary Daniels, a Newnan, Georgia girl is in the cast, and gives a splendid performance. The assistant director, William Street appeared in Atlanta a few years ago in "It Pays to Advertise."

Ever so often you read some story of a member of a cast, after having had only ten minutes rehearsal, jumping into the show on opening night and saving the day, as inconsistent as that sounds. In "The Right to Love" it is absolutely true that the man who played the lead only received his part twenty-four hours before the opening. No one would ever have known it, however, for this Mr. Allen Connor, gave a performance which would have been a credit to weeks of rehearsal.

* * * *

ATLANTA, of course, had to figure more or less prominently in the first night of "The Right to Love." Mr. and Mrs. H. Clark Bruner, whom you probably don't recognize as "Bus" and Ernest Campbell Bruner, formerly of Atlanta and now temporarily living in Buffalo, motored over for Miss King's opening night. At dinner before the show I encountered this popular couple, who seemed to feel the slowness with which their repast was being served might make them late for the show. The dinner, as a matter of fact, was being served suspiciously like there was a bridge game going on in the kitchen, and only the dummy could be spared for serving. Mr. and Mrs. Bruner however, managed to reach their second-row seats in plenty of time, and apparently well-fed and happy, seemed to enjoy the performance no little.

At eight-twenty, however, the gown in which Miss King was to have appeared in the last act when the plot allowed her to be "pretty" had failed to arrive at the theater. There was much running back and forth, but a noticeable lack of arriving packages. With no one exactly sure just what to do, Alice Stearns on arriving to attend the first night, seemed to remember she had in her wardrobe a gown which sounded, as well as looked, a great deal like the sort of one the scene demanded. Whereupon a taxi was dispatched to get Miss Stearn's model, which on Miss King, scored a hit of its own with the opening night audience. It is quite lamentable that the lateness of the hour prevented the programs from stating "Gowns by Stearns."

AT the Hotel Shelburne, Brighton Beach, Ned Wayburn has opened up a summer revue. On the opening night, the ballroom was packed. Although none of the music is the same as in the Atlanta show, some of the costumes are identical to the ones seen there. The "Miss Simplicity" costumes were as pretty as ever in one of the numbers, and so were those spectacular "Constantinople" ones. A duplicate of Catherine Raine's "Page costume" was quite prominently featured in one scene, and the "Rain Umbrellas" shaded many of the members of the Brighton Revue. By the way, the ever-thoughtful Mr. Wayburn introduced to our party the charming "Miss Nobody from Nowhere" whom I told you about some weeks ago. Mr. Wayburn says not since Lillian Russell's death has there been a real musical-comedy queen, and that it is intended "Miss Nobody" whose name I've forgotten, shall take her place. As far as I can see, there's nothing to keep her from doing it, for she's beautiful, graceful, and dances and sings quite excellently.

GLADYS HANSON, whom it is quite unnecessary to say is an Atlanta woman, took one of the most prominent parts in the all-star revival of "Trelawney of the Wells" which the Players' club presented for a week at the Knickerbocker Theater. Miss Hanson's work called forth from the critics the usual flow of compliments it always does. During the earlier part of the season, Miss Hanson appeared in a play "Houses of Sand" and I recall quite vividly one critic's comments to the effect that "Miss Hanson's work was way and above that of everybody else in the cast." In the recent Players' club show, the the work of Laurette Taylor, John Drew and Gladys Hanson, is still being discussed everywhere you go. More than ever should Atlanta be proud of the charming and talented Miss Hanson.

Now that the Barthelmess pronunciation has been cleared away, I hope it will be only a short length of time before I find out for you, for just what the "Q" stands for in Anna Q. Nillson's name, and what, perchance, might be the mysterious "Miss Dupon't" first name.

of pearls hanging from the waistline to the feet.

They reveal a coffer on the stage, the lock of which is formed of two lovers kissing. At the order of the sultan a dagger slays the lovers and opens the lock, revealing the contents of the casket, beautiful maidens impersonating the various uses of pearls, as rings, necklaces, brooches.

Jacqueline Logan's recent marriage to R. J. ("Bob") Gillespie was a surprise to the Hollywood folk, who had grown accustomed to seeing her in the company of Jerry Miley, well-known squire to Hollywood's movie fair. In fact, Jacqueline seems to have grown accustomed to it herself, for the boudoirs buzz with the story that the night before the Titian-haired bride-to-be became Mrs. Gillespie she was in tears because Jerry had escorted another lady! These men—they just are too selfish to let a poor girl have the satisfaction of ruining their lives.

Further buzzing relates that Marion Davies and Charlie Chaplin are again resuming their warm friendship of the winter, though in such a discreet manner that Lita on her return from her mysterious absence will have little in the way of facts about their appearances in public places together to tie any objections to.

Saturday noon at the Montmartre a large number of picture people were present. Pauline Garon was lunching with Mildred Davis. Hedda Hopper was with Holmes Herbert. Evelyn Brent, Marion Harlan, Lawrence Gray, Tom Moore, Reid Howes, Charlotte Merriam, Dorothy Wallace, Alice Lake, Frank Elliott, Gaston Glass and Edna Mae Cooper were lunching and dancing.

A fad for not wearing hats is becoming prevalent among the Hollywood girls of the younger set and several appeared so.

Among Us Georgians

take the bullet to do what science said it had to do, but he was in no hurry, he could wait.

Fifteen, twenty, thirty minutes passed—still no bullet. And then the serenity and sweet philosophy of this gentleman's "death" was sadly jarred when a grazing calf, following the course of the tenderest grass in the pasture, came and stood directly behind him, still nibbling away. Our scientist did not wish to waste the Einstein theory on just a calf and so with forceful and angry words he finally shooed the calf away. What he longed to do was to grab a stick about six feet away and lambast that pesky creature, but he was afraid that if he changed his position the bullet would miss him when it came on back from its journey among the spheres.

An hour passed: The leaden ball was still off, somewhere, hob-nobbing with the stars or talking earth-gossip with a friendly comet, instead of coming on back and attending to business!

At that moment one of those thunder showers that have made their welcome appearance here, there and yonder in Georgia here of late, intruded in the pasture. There was a flash of lightning—at the moment our hero thought that Einsteinism was back on the job—and then the downpour. The gentleman didn't mind being shot to death, but he did seriously object to drowning, especially on his own bought-and-paid-for land.

And so he beat a hasty retreat to the house, his grand dream of a lovely and original suicide shattered. Mention "Einstein" to him today—however, it would be safer not to, if you wish a little friendly advice!

GEORGIANS, of course, are both shy and modest in matters like this, and have no earthy objection to Stone mountain's being considered in the same class as Ararat, Gibraltar, Matterhorn, Pike's Peak and Everest. Of course Ararat is a very old mountain and its glory is chiefly in the past, but it acquired imperishable distinction on account of certain events in connection with the ending of the ark's journey, and so the Georgia committee has d e c i d e d to retain Ararat in the list of worth-while mountains.

FRANK T. REYNOLDS, assistant to the president of the Dinkler Hotel company, has been living in town a good many years now, but one of his rural habits persists: He just will get up early. It is not known at just what unearthly hour he does arise, but it is positively true that at 6 o'clock every morning he throws open the doors of his office at the Ansley hotel, all ready to transact business!

FRANK L. STANTON, beloved southern poet, whose sweet songs have cheered human hearts and brightened human lives the world over, received about fifteen hundred letters as a result of the article in the January issue of the American Magazine, in which Walter Chambers, formerly of The Constitution staff, told vividly the story of his life and work. This was one of the best sketches of Mr. Stanton ever published.

Things New and Old About the Bible

God, with an untutored race to instruct, would surely be as wise.

"And so, indeed, he was. He put into Genesis a child story of creation—a story told in pictures and symbols such as children love. But it was a true story—so true that this day, when science has fashioned around it a sumptuous setting of golden knowledge, rich, varied, vast, this same brief story shines still like a jewel in the midst of all later discovery, glowingly lovelier than the staid prosings of the investigators, brilliant with the simple poetry of God's pleasure in his own well wrought handiwork. And it tells of the universe all that man needed morally to know before he had learned enough to be his own explorer into the Creator's mysteries. It tells the answer to the great first question of the opening mind of humanity: Who made all this? It tells, too, the guarantee of the Infinite to the first terrifying skepticism that comes to plague that opening mind; no matter what the cynical look of things may be, 'God saw everything that he made, and behold it was very good.' Out of Genesis its peasant readers even learned something of that divine combination of power and patience which is yet the wonder of those who seek to know the ways of the Lord—able with his power to accomplish all at a word, yet willing to build up his creating by the patient addition of one to one, even as a schoolboy adds up a tedious sum."

HOW BIG A SCORE CAN YOU MAKE?

Here is a game that every one can play. Hang this page on the wall at about the height of your shoulder. Have a pencil ready in your hand. Then stand with your back against the page and have some one blindfold you, or close your eyes. Then walk straight ahead for six steps, turn about, and with the pencil held at arm's length ahead of you, retrace your steps as exactly as you can until your pencil touches the page hanging on the wall.

You score whatever number is in the circle touched by the pencil. Marks made outside the circles do not count. Each player tries until he has touched three numbers. The one having the highest score is the winner.

You will notice that the small circle scores 20. Thus, if you hit it once you have a good chance of winning, even though all your other scores are low. A score of 1, 20, 3 would beat a score of 8, 9, 6.

Not only is this a fine game but an excellent test of your power of direction.

THE MUSICAL FISHERMAN

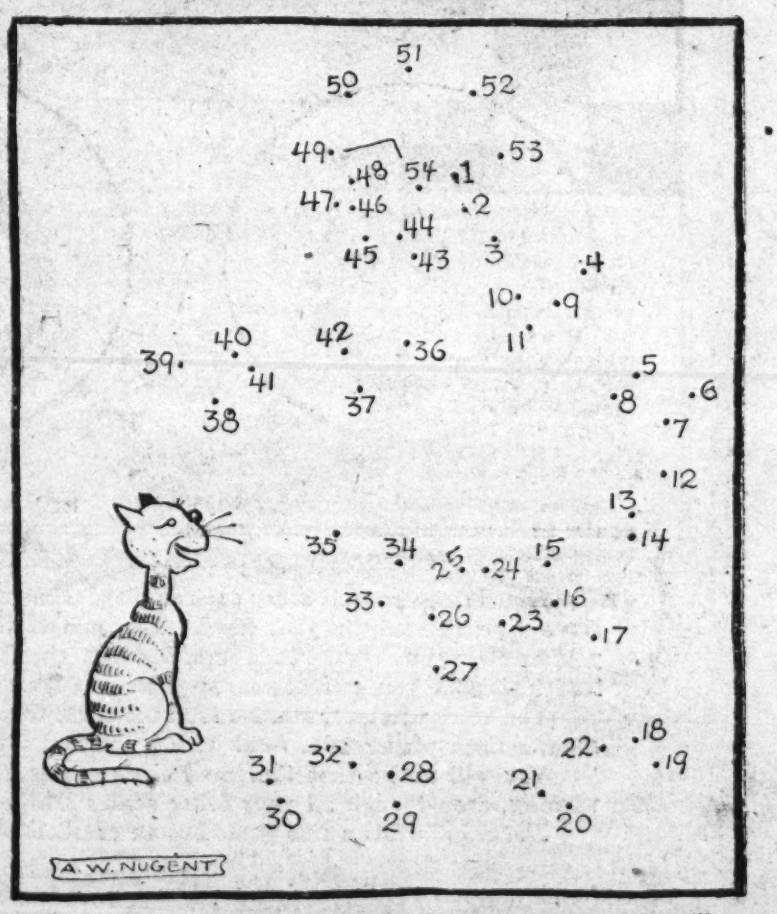

Do you remember the fisherman who played the bagpipes while the fishes danced? Here he is, hard at his music. Two other fish are hidden in the picture. Can you find them?

WHAT CAN YOU MAKE?

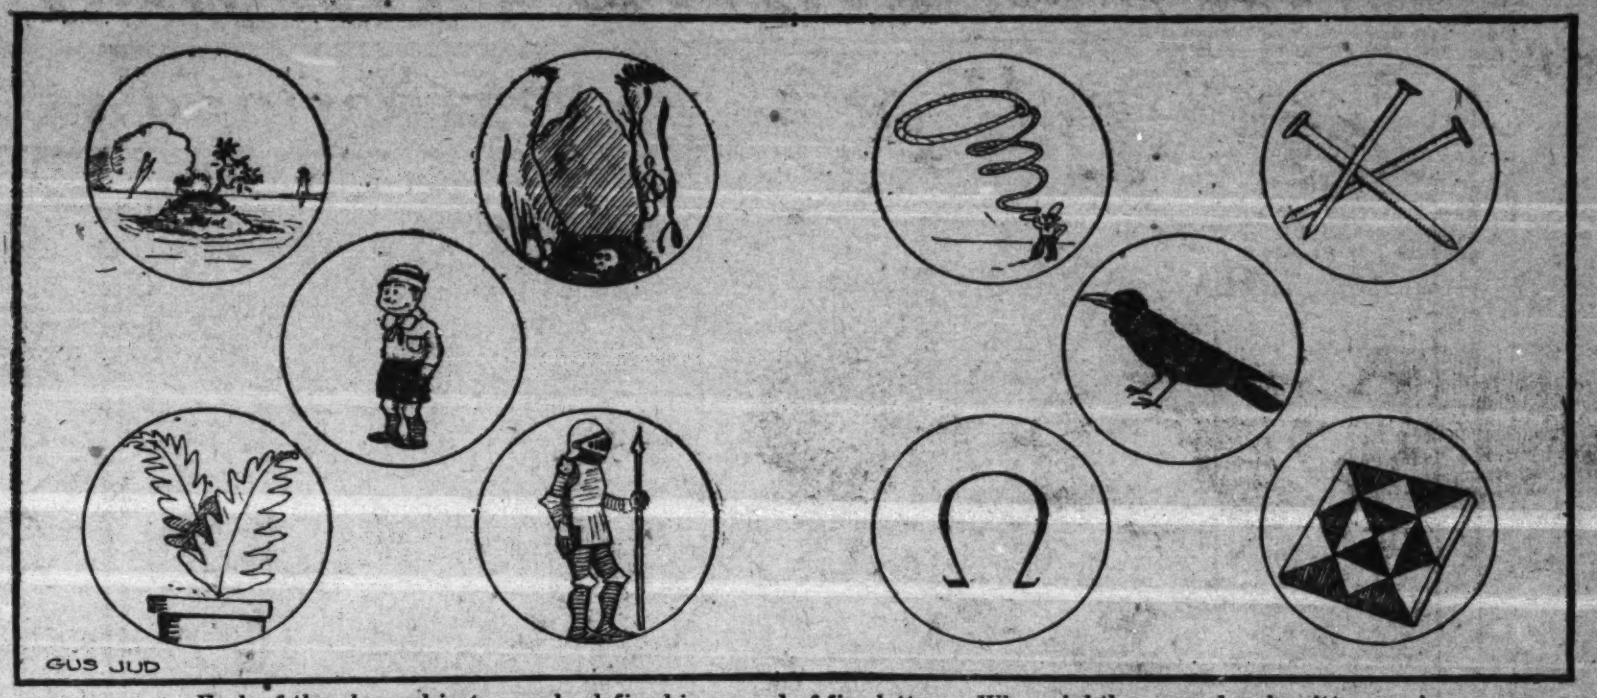

Here is a clever cutout for you to try. Take your scissors, cut out the pieces, and put them together. If you do it correctly you will make something we see every time we handle money, particularly nickels.

FOLLOW THE DOTS

Start at the figure 1 and follow the dots in order till you have drawn what the cat is laughing at.

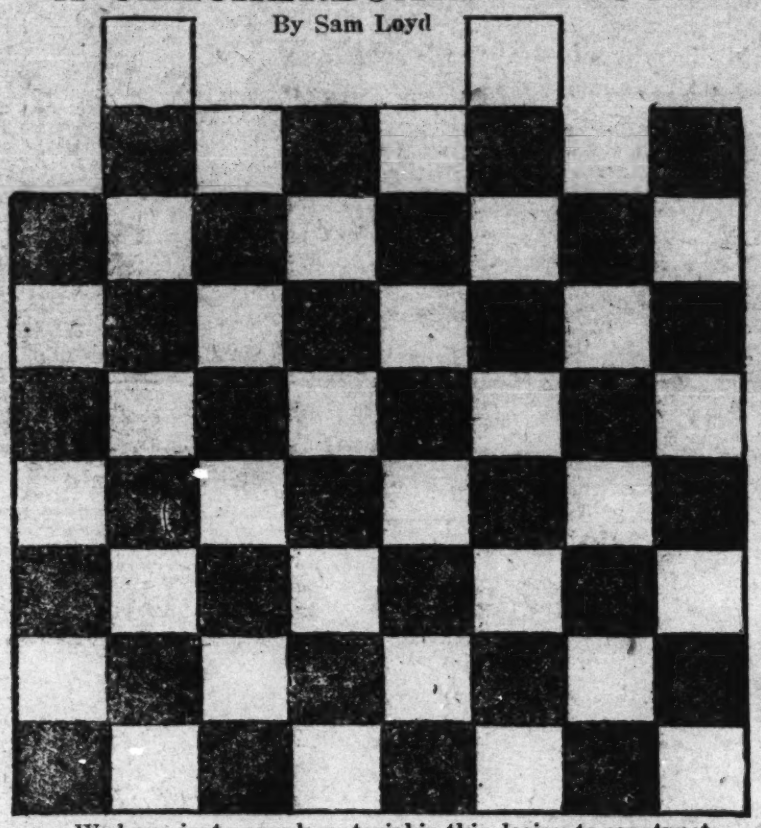

WHAT CITY AND STATE ARE BURIED HERE?

Each of the above objects may be defined in a word of five letters. When rightly guessed and written one below the other in the proper order, their initials will spell the name of a Western State, and their fourth letters will spell the name of one of its prominent cities.

A CHECKERBOARD CUTOUT

By Sam Loyd

We have just enough material in this design to construct an 8 by 8 checkerboard, and the puzzling proposition is to figure out a way of cutting it into only TWO pieces, which pieces may be fitted together to make the perfect square of alternate black and white squares.

It would be easy, of course, to cut off the projecting white squares and put one in each of the vacant places; but this would divide the square into three pieces instead of two.

AN INITIATION FEE By SAM LOYD

Two jovial gentlemen I encountered in the card room of the S. S. Manitoba offered to initiate me in the mysteries of a new game.

I lost the first game, and Baron D. and Count C. each won enough to double the stack of chips with which he started.

The Baron and I scored the second game, thereby doubling our respective table assets.

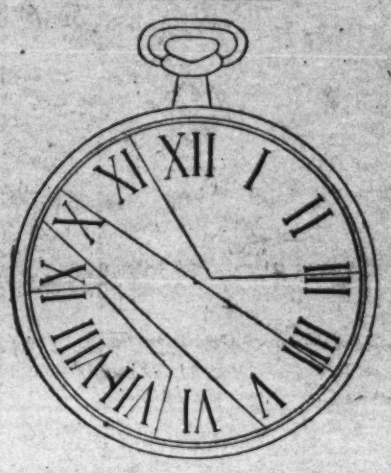

Then in the final skirmish, the Count and I scored, which victory doubled the chips which he and I had at the opening of the third game.

A mysterious feature of our session was, that while each player had won twice and lost but once, the Baron and Count quit winners, and I was a loser to the extent of four dollars.

After that third game, our three stacks of chips were alike, from which fact I will ask you to figure out just how much money I put on the table when I started to sport with my titled acquaintances.

SPLIT DIALS

Above is shown how to divide the dial into five parts, each of which contains numerals totalling to 16.

A REAL ESTATE PROBLEM

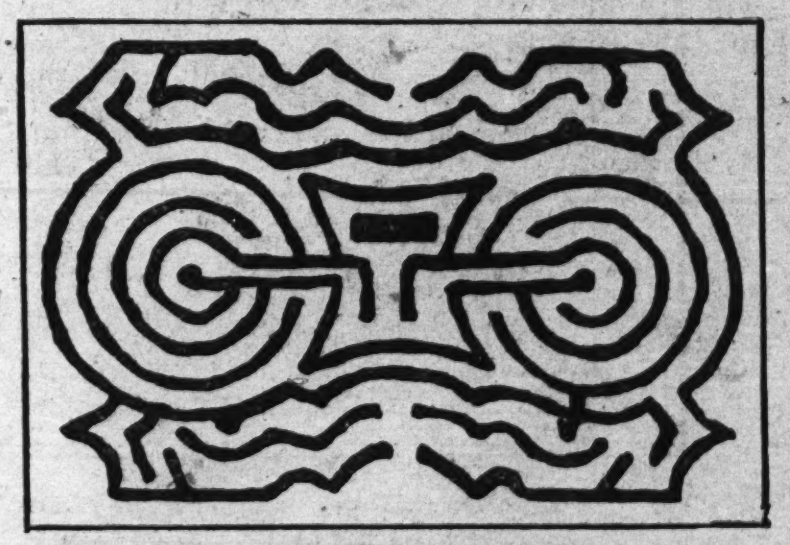

Calling the width of a plot 3X feet, and its length 4X, then its diagonal line would be 5X. The dimensions of the large rectangle contained within the diagram would be 11X by 13X, or 143X squared square feet.

Four complete plots, and four half-plots, are located within the large rectangle, and the total area of those six plots is 72X squared square feet. The remainder of the rectangle's area, 71.. squared square feet, constitutes the star-like park. The area of the eight plots equals 96X squared square feet and cost $9,600. The park's cost, at the same rate per square foot, would be 71-96 of $9,600, or $7,100.

AN OLD GERMAN MAZE

Here is a quaint old maze from Germany. It was actually laid out in hedges and paths, and was difficult to thread. On paper it is not so hard. The problem is to enter anywhere you like and go to the centre and out again, of course without crossing any of the lines. Take your pencil and try.

PUZZLING GEOMETRY

A Problem by SAM LOYD

Some of the familiar geometrical forms possess freakish characteristics which lift them from the conventional into the puzzle class of problems.

Take, for example, the dissected figure No. 1 (it has four sides, not two of which are parallel), the very name of which is a puzzle, for geometricians have never quite decided as to whether it should be called a trapezium or a trapezoid.

There is a strange affinity between this trapezoid and other geometrical forms, namely: the square, Greek cross, parallelogram, oblong and triangle, in that those five sections of which it is composed may be rearranged to produce, in turn, each of the other figures.

It makes an interesting puzzle to dissect the trapezoid into the five parts and with them successively form the other five figures.

Cut out the trapezoid (No. 1) on the solid lines, and see if you can make each of the other five figures.
